PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

It is necessary for a lawyer always to know the law as it is today. And this is specially so in respect of the Law of Procedure. It is now five years since the last edition of this work was published, and during this period several changes have been introduced into the provisions of the Code by legislation. Further, the case-law has enormously increased, sometimes settling conflicts of judicial opinion which existed before, and sometimes giving rise to new conflicts of opinion. Under the circumstances, no apology is needed for bringing out this edition.

In the preparation of this edition the authors have not confined themselves to merely incorporating the subsequent case-law, but have examined all the old cases once again with a view to remove any defects that might have crept in. The legislative changes in the provisions of the Code and recent case-law have rendered it necessary to re-write many portions of the work, abridging the discussion where the point has been settled by authority, and fully discussing points about which a conflict of opinion has arisen. Beyond this, however, the method of treatment of the subject has not been departed from.

The case-law has been brought up-to-date. References to Official Reports are invariably given in all cases found in the Official Reports.

The authors feel it their duty to express their gratefulness to the Bench and the Bar for their very cordial reception of the previous editions of their work.

Their thanks are also due to Messrs. S. Appu Rao, B.A., B.L., Advocate, Coimbatore, N. Krishna Iyer, M.A., B.L., Coimbatore, G. B. Shidhaye, B.A., LL.B., and V. S. Balkundi, B.A., LL.B., of Nagpur, for the very valuable help rendered by them in revising and bringing the work up-to-date.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

THE CORDIAL RECEPTION accorded by the members of the Bench and the Bar to the first edition of this work, which was almost exhausted in less than a year from the date of its publication has necessitated the publication of a second edition of the same. The Authors feel it their duty to thank the members of the legal profession for the warm reception and high appreciation of the work.

THIS SECOND EDITION has been carefully revised, brought up-to-date and re-written, wherever necessary, in the light of the various decisions since the publication of the first edition.

The style in printing has also been changed to facilitate easy reading. In the synopsis, the main headings have been differentiated from subordinate headings by a difference in type. The difficulty in reading the closely printed matter of the foot-notes has been removed by giving a separate line for each case which thus gives a great relief to the eye.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

JUDICIAL DECISIONS on the Law of Civil Procedure occupy a considerable portion of our Law Reports and Digests. There are, on many points of importance, conflicts of opinion between the several High Courts, and sometimes between the decisions of the same High Court. Full Bench decisions of various High Courts and decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, no doubt, often help to settle such conflicts, but on a few occasions, while settling the conflicts, they open up further fields for controversy. Decisions differing in the interpretation or application of a ruling of the Judicial Committee are not rare.

In this state of judicial decisions, a practitioner or a Judge, who has to ascertain the law on any important point of procedure, has to collect all the decisions bearing on the point, study them carefully, and then deduce, if possible, a definite rule of law. In cases of conflicts of opinion, he has to find out how far a decision of the Full Bench or of the Judicial Committee, has settled, or helped to settle the conflict. In the absence of such help, he has to choose between the conflicting views, and find arguments in support of the view adopted by him. This is no doubt an interesting process of ascertaining the law, but the regret of a Judge or a busy practitioner is that sometimes, he does not find the necessary time for it.

It is the aim of the authors to be of some service to the Bench and the Bar in this direction, and this, they hope, will justify the addition of one more to the already existing commentaries on the Code. The authors have attempted to ascertain all the important questions that arise for consideration under the several provisions of the Code and have tried to collect together all the decisions of all the Superior Courts of India and Burma and of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on such questions. These decisions have been studied carefully and analytically and definite rules of law, wherever possible, have been attempted to be deduced therefrom. In cases of conflicts of opinion, the authors have discussed the questions on first principles and have attempted to test the conflicting views in the light of these principles and to arrive at definite conclusions.

In the course of their practice at the Bar, the authors have often found that there are still many difficulties arising in daily practice, which are not covered either by the provisions of the Code or by the existing voluminous case-law. An attempt has been made to solve these difficulties by discussing such questions and suggesting solutions. In thus discussing subjects not provided for in the Code, the authors have kept in view the future course of law on the subject.

The application of a rule of law to the facts of particular cases is a matter of some difficulty in some cases. It has, therefore, been indicated, within brackets, against important decisions collected in the foot-notes, as to how rules of law have been applied to the facts of those cases. In the commentary, the general propositions of law as derived from the decisions are given. These, the authors hope, will enable the lawyer to pick out the case he requires without much loss of time.

The conclusions of law, dissociated from facts, or discussions of law, are sometimes necessary for quick reference during the course of arguments in Courts. The particular pages, where such conclusions can be found, are indicated in every case with only a few exceptions in the case of very old Reports.

1. History of the Code.—Before the year 1859, there was no law of procedure applicable to the whole of India. The Courts in the Presidency Towns were governed by their own rules and orders and certain Acts,¹ while the Provincial Courts were governed by certain Regulations and Acts particularly applicable to them.

In 1859 the first Civil Procedure Code² was passed and it enacted that where it came into force, the procedure of Civil Courts was to be regulated by it alone.³

The Code did not, however, apply to Courts established by Royal Charter and consequently the Supreme Courts and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlat followed their original procedure.

In 1862 when the Supreme Courts and the Sudder Courts were abolished, and the High Courts established, the Code was made applicable to the High Courts as well.

After various amendments in the years 1860, 1861 and 1871,⁴ a second Code was enacted in 1877,⁵ which very considerably amended and altered and added to the Code of 1859.⁶

The Code of 1877 was soon followed by two amending Acts, Act XVIII of 1878 and Act XII of 1879, and in the year 1882 a third Code came into being as Act XIV of 1882.

This was also amended and repealed in part by various subsequent Acts⁷ and in 1908, the present Code was enacted consolidating and amending the law up to that date.⁸

2. Scope and applicability of the Code.—The Code, as the preamble shows, consolidates and amends the laws relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature in India. The object of consolidation is "to collect the statutory law bearing upon a particular subject and to bring it down to date in order that it may form a useful Code applicable to the circumstances existing at the time when the consolidating Act was passed."¹ In the case therefore of a consolidating statute the construction must be not with reference to the circumstances existing at the time of the preceding Acts but in relation to those existing at the time of the consolidating Act itself² and the law should thenceforth be ascertained from that enactment itself instead of

4. Some of the Acts passed modifying and amending the Code are as follows:—
 Act IV of 1860—Civil Procedure—Repealed by Act XXIII of 1861 and by Act X of 1877.
 Act XLIII of 1860—Amending Act—
 Repealed by Act VIII of 1868 ;
 Do. do. by Act XIV of 1870 ;
 Do. do. by Act XII of 1873 ;
 Do. do. by Act XVI of 1874 ;
 Do. do. by Act XII of 1876.
 Act XXIII of 1861 — Civil Procedure —
 Repealed by Act X of 1877.
 Act XXXII of 1871—Civil Courts—Repealed by (Excepting S. 40) Act XIII of 1879 (S. 40 repealed by Act XXII of 1859).
5. Act X of 1877.

6. Whereas the 1859 Code contained 388 Sections, the 1877 Code contained 652.
7. Repealed in part by—Acts XIV of 1885—S.3; XIV of 1886 — S. 2; X of 1886 — S. 24 (2); VIII of 1887 — S. 2; XIII of 1889 ; VIII of 1890—S. 2.
 Amended by Acts XV of 1882—S. 3 ; VII of 1887 — S. 11 ; VI of 1888 — Ss. 2-8 ; X of 1888—Ss. 1-3 ; VIII of 1890—S. 53 ; VI of 1892 — Ss. 2-8 ; V of 1894 ; VII of 1895 — Ss. 1-2 ; XIII of 1895.

searching for the law as laid down in prior decisions.³ It must be noted that in applying a consolidating Act, statutes not expressly repealed should be held to continue in force without modification.^{3a}

The Code applies to the procedure of all Courts of Civil Judicature except that it does not affect any special or local law or any special jurisdiction or power conferred or any special form of procedure prescribed by or under any other law for the time being in force.⁴ See also Section 4, sub-section (1). As a matter of fact where there is a conflict between the Civil Procedure Code and a special law, the latter prevails over the former on the principle that the special law prevails over the general.^{4a}

For instance, the jurisdiction and procedure in Insolvency is specially provided for by the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909 and the Provincial Insolvency Act V of 1920,⁵ the jurisdiction and procedure in testamentary and intestate matters by the Indian Succession Act XXXIX of 1925⁶ and those in matrimonial matters by the Indian Divorce Act IV of 1869. In the absence of any provision, however, on any particular matter in those Acts, the Code will apply.⁷ It must, however, be applied with reference to the circumstances peculiar to those matters.⁸ Thus, unless a will is proved in some form no probate can be granted on the consent of the parties.⁹ The reason is that the order is one in rem affecting all individuals and cannot therefore be passed with the consent of only the parties to the proceeding.

Foreigners are not exempted from the operation of the Code,¹⁰ nor is property having a foreign origin outside the jurisdiction of British Courts.¹¹

The Code being an adjective law, it is not primarily intended to create new rights or to take away existing rights. It mainly regulates the procedure in Civil Courts.¹²

3. Retrospective operation of the Code.—It is a general principle of law that no statute shall be construed so as to have a retrospective operation unless its language is such as plainly to require such a construction.¹ In fact a statute which do affect vested rights, whether substantive⁵ or remedial,⁶ the rule against retrospective operation of statute will apply⁷ unless there is an indication to the contrary in the Act.⁸

Such indications can be found in the following circumstances :—

(1) When the commencement of the Act is postponed to a particular day, the object of the postponement is to enable persons to enforce their rights, if any, before the new Act, negating such rights, comes into force.⁹

(2) When the language of the enactment implies it.

Both these circumstances exist in the case of the Civil Procedure Code. Though passed in 1908 it is made to come into force from 1st January, 1909. Again, Section 154 implies that except in the case of a right of appeal, the Code applies retrospectively so as to affect all other rights and matters dealt with by it,¹⁰ and to all cases pending or about to be instituted at the time it came into force.¹¹

rule is well

4. Code, if and when exhaustive. — The Code is exhaustive on all matters specifically dealt with by it. The law in such matters must be ascertained only with reference to its provisions and a judge cannot disregard or go outside the letter of the enactment according to its true construction.¹

But the absence of any provision on any particular matter does not mean that there is no such power.² It is a rule of construction of every statute like the Civil Procedure Code, that the Court ought not to act on the principle that every procedure is to be taken as prohibited unless it is expressly provided for, but should proceed on the converse principle that every procedure is to be understood as permissible till it is shown to be prohibited by law.³

The Code is thus not exhaustive of all forms of procedure necessary to be used in the administration of justice.⁴ For instance where a Court had a power before the Code was passed and the same is not taken away by the Code, the power remains.⁵

5. Inherent powers. — See Section 151.

6. Judicial discretion. — The Code in many of the Sections leaves certain matters to the *discretion*¹ of the Court. The discretion, in such cases, must not be exercised in an arbitrary, vague or fanciful manner, but on judicial principles.^{1a}

7. Interpretation of statutes — General. — It is a cardinal rule of construction of statutes in general that the intention of an enactment should be gathered from the language employed by it,¹ and that where words used are clear and unambiguous, an Act during the currency of a suit does not affect pending actions and the rights of the parties are governed by the Act as it existed at the time when the suit was started.)

or that the law is different elsewhere.^{8a} Nor can the advantage of liberal construction be balanced against the advantages of literal construction.^{8b}

The Court's function is, in fact, to say not what the Legislature meant or ought to have meant but what it has said that it meant.⁹ It is always dangerous to paraphrase an enactment even if badly worded^{9a} and no modification of the language to meet the intention can be made unless it is impossible to resist the conviction that the Legislature could not possibly have intended what its words signify and that the modifications thus to be made are mere corrections of careless language and really give the true meaning.¹⁰ Where, however, the language of the enactment is not itself precise or is ambiguous or of doubtful import, or the question arises as to what extent changes in the pre-existing law have been effected by any particular amendment, recourse may be had to extraneous considerations.¹¹ Thus, the provisions of the other statutes which are in pari materia,¹² or the previous state of the law,¹³ or the scope and intention of the Act,¹⁴ may be considered. It is not, however, permissible to construe the provisions of one statute in the light of judicial decisions on a provision of another statute not in pari materia with the statute in question.^{14a} In cases of reasonable doubt as to the expression contained in a penal provision, the benefit of doubt must be given to the subject.^{14b}

Subject to the broad principles mentioned above, the following general rules of interpretation of statutes should also be borne in mind in construing the Sections of the Code :—

1. Where an Act, such as the Code, is divided into Sections and Rules, the Sections must be taken to lay down general principles and the Rules as providing the machinery or the means of applying them.¹⁵

1a. Where the language of an enactment is difficult and ambiguous, the Court may, for its assistance in its construction, refer to rules made under the provisions of the Act, especially where such rules are, by the statute authorising them, such special provision must be applied only to those cases to which it is confined by the Legislature.²⁹ Thus, a special Act of the Legislature as the Sale of Goods Act cannot possibly, except in the branch of the law to which it relates, overrule a statute of the nature of the General Clauses Act.^{29a} Again, when on the same subject two incompatible provisions are in force, one general and the other particular, the particular provision must be taken to be an exception to the general one.^{29b}

8. Where there are general words following particular and specific words in a Section, the general words must be confined to things of the same kind (ejusdem generis) as those specified.³⁰ The applicability of this rule, however, will not arise if the class of cases intended to be provided for by the Section is clear from the language of the Section.³¹

9. Where this Code has adopted part of the language of the old Code, the interpretation put upon such language by the Courts must be taken to have been accepted by the Legislature.³² When legislation follows a continuous practice and repeats the very words on which that practice was founded, it may be inferred that the Legislature in re-enacting the statute intended those words to be understood in their received meaning.^{32a} jurisdiction on special bodies or persons or Courts,³⁴ should be strictly construed. The grant of a special jurisdiction does not carry with it the power to act outside such jurisdiction.^{34a}

11. In the absence of any context indicating a contrary intention, the Legislature must be taken to attach the same meaning to the same words used in different parts of the statute³⁵ or in subsequent statutes in a similar connexion.³⁶ But, if sufficient reasons exist, a word can be construed in one part of an Act in a sense different from that it bears in another part.^{36a} Where an expression is defined in an Act, it must be given the same meaning throughout the Act,^{36b} unless there is some provision which makes it clear that for certain purposes, the expression must be given a different meaning.^{36c} But, definitions are of limited scope being framed only for the purpose of the Act in which they occur, unless specially extended.^{36d}

12. All rules of law are founded on the assumption that the constituted tribunals are fairly competent and have power to carry out the provisions of the Acts.³⁷ They should, therefore, be construed so as to further and not so as to restrict the purposes of the Act.³⁸ Where jurisdiction is given to a Court to make a particular order, the Legislature must be deemed to have granted also the power to enforce such order.^{38a}

13. Where a statute creates a right and provides a remedy, that remedy and no other is available.³⁹ This rule, however, does not apply where the right exists independently of the statute.⁴⁰ Where, again, a statute gives power to any person for a public purpose from which an individual may receive an injury, and where the mode of redress for such injury is also specified in the statute, the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts will be ousted.^{40a}

13a. Where a statute confers a right on a party in general terms, the cutting down of those rights by a rule would make the rule repugnant to the Act.^{40b} But such rules must be supported unless they are manifestly unreasonable or unfair.^{40c} If a new rule is in conflict with the previous existing rule, the new rule must by implication be deemed to have annulled or altered that rule.^{40d}

14. A change in the language of the present Code from that of the old Code may be presumed to indicate a change of intention on the part of the Legislature.⁴¹ In regard to the matters dealt with by the change only the new provisions should be looked to.^{41a} But it is also a recognised presumption that the Legislature does not intend to make any alteration beyond what it expressly declares,⁴² and where the language used is doubtful no change will be deemed to have been made.⁴³ Any change in the language of the statute would be presumed to have been made by the Legislature with the knowledge of the course of decisions previous to the change.^{43a}

15. Where a question arises as to whether any particular provision is mandatory or directory, the general test is the relation which the provision has to the general object intended to be secured by the Act.⁴⁴ Another test has also been applied and that is to see whether a party may waive the benefit of the particular provision.⁴⁵ In deciding the question, the Court should take into account the possibility of justice suffering from a too rigid application of the rule.⁴⁶

16. Words in singular should be read as including the plural unless there is anything in the text to the contrary.⁴⁷

16a. In following decided cases in regard to the interpretation placed by them upon words in a statute, the danger of diverting attention from what has been enacted to what has been judicially said about the enactment must be avoided.^{47a}

17. Forms given in the Schedule do not control the clear words of the Code itself.⁴⁸

18. Where certain provisions from an existing Act have been incorporated into a subsequent Act, no addition to the former Act which is not expressly made applicable to the subsequent Act can be deemed to be incorporated in it, at all events, if it is possible for the subsequent Act to function effectively without the addition, nor can the repeal of the first statute affect the second.^{48a} inconsistent, should so far as possible be reconciled with each other^{49b} by reading one as a qualification to the other. If that is not possible the latter Act should prevail.⁴⁹

20. A repealing Section should not be interpreted with reference to the reading of the repealed Section.⁵⁰ The effect of repeal of a statute, in the absence of saving clauses, is that it has to be considered as if the statute so repealed has never existed.^{50a}

21. A repealing Act does not affect any legal proceedings in respect of rights acquired before the repeal.⁵¹ When an Act is in force on the date of a transaction, a subsequent repealment of the Act does not affect the merits, rights or liabilities of the parties on the date of the transaction.^{51a}

22. It is not proper to use one Act for the purpose of interpreting another Act.⁵²

23. In interpreting foreign statutes, Courts should not be guided by outside opinion however eminent such opinion may be.⁵³

24. Technical language must have technical meaning attached to it, unless the contrary manifestly appears.⁵⁴

25. Special Acts must be strictly construed.⁵⁵

26. Where the terms of a statute are not imperative, the use of general powers conferred by that statute should be in strict conformity with private rights.⁵⁶

27. In enactments which confer powers upon public authorities, the language of permission may not preclude the existence of a duty.⁵⁷

28. The words in an Act are used correctly and exactly and not loosely and inexactly. Upon those who assert that the rule has been broken the burden of establishing their proposition lies heavily and they can discharge it only by pointing to something in the context which goes to show that the loose and inexact meaning must be preferred.⁵⁸

29. While it is possible that there might be an overlapping of powers conferred on different persons, by a statute, yet, at least where the matter admits of doubt, the construction against overlapping of powers should be adopted ordinarily.⁵⁹

30. In construing a statute one should endeavour to give it a meaning, in all cases of ambiguity, which will make it consonant to rather than in disagreement with other Acts.⁶⁰

8. Reference to pre-existing state of the law. — It follows from the principles set forth in Note 2 above, that where the language of a statute is plain and clear it cannot be qualified or neutralised by indications of intention gathered from the previous state of law.¹ In the leading case of Bank of England v. Vagliano Bros.,² Lord Herschell observed as follows:—

"I think the proper course is, in the first instance, to examine the language of the statute uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, and not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood, and then, assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view."

But where the language is not clear or the statute has made no provision for any particular case, the previous legislation may be referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the object and intention of the Legislature.³

9. Reference to proceedings of the Legislature. — In the case of The Administrator-General v. Prem Lal Mullick,¹ their Lordships of the Privy Council have laid down definitely that it is not competent to refer to the proceedings of the Legislature as legitimate aids to the construction of the statute.² This is in con-

(1) An illustration only exemplifies the Section and cannot be taken to restrict or modify the sense of the Section.³

(2) Where the illustration is in conflict with the main Section, the illustration must give way to the Section.⁴ But it would require a very special case to warrant its rejection on the ground of its assumed repugnance to the Section itself.⁵

13. Punctuation marks.—Before the year 1849, the English Acts of Parliament were not punctuated by any stops and the then accepted rule of interpretation was that such marks could not be relied upon in construing Acts of Parliament.¹ In Maharani of Burdwan v. Krishna Kamini Dasi,² which was a case under the Bengal Regulation of 1819, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that “it is an error to rely on punctuation in construing Acts of the Legislature.”

Since the constitution of the regular Legislatures in India, however, the practice has been to insert stops in Bills before the Legislatures and to retain them in the authentic copies of the Acts signed by the Governor-General and published in the Gazette of India.³ In these circumstances, it was held by the High Court of Bombay⁴ that punctuation marks may be considered as aids to the interpretation of the statute where the language thereof might otherwise be doubtful. The High Court of Madras took the view that the marks were part of the statute and should be considered as such.⁵ On the other hand, it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad⁶ and Calcutta⁷ following the case of the Maharani of Burdwan that punctuation marks could not be taken into consideration in construing the statute.

The question came again before the Privy Council in Lewis Pugh v. Ashutosh Sen,⁸ a case under Articles 48 and 49 of the Indian Limitation Act and it was held that a Court was bound to read those Articles without the commas inserted in the print. This view as to the use of punctuation marks has now been followed by the High Courts of Allahabad⁹ and Bombay.¹⁰ In the undermentioned case,¹¹ however, the High Court of Calcutta has held that where it is not contended that the punctuation is wrongly placed, there is no reason why the punctuation should not be taken as a good guide for the purpose for which it is there, namely, to understand the sense of the passage.

14. Proviso.—A proviso is subordinate to the main enactment¹ to which it is appended either to allay unfounded fears,² or as a condition precedent to the enforcement of the operative clause,³ or for explaining what particular matters are not within the meaning of the enactment, or for providing exceptions and qualifications for the enactment.⁴

A proviso should be taken together with the language of the previous portion of the enactment⁵ and construed in the ordinary manner.⁶ As a general rule it must be taken to govern the main proposition of law which immediately precedes such proviso, unless the language of the statute shows a different intention.⁷

But in no case can a proviso extend or enlarge the operative effect of the substantive portion, unless there is an ambiguity therein.⁸ Likewise, exceptions should not be enlarged in their scope more than what their words properly justify.⁹

15. Judicial precedents.—Judicial precedents constitute an important guide to the proper interpretation of statutes. It is a general principle of construction of statutes that the Courts should follow existing rulings so as not to upset or disturb existing and settled practice,¹ unless such practice is clearly contrary to an express enactment or is inconsistent with it.² This rule is based in the case of statutes

The only use of the authorities or decided cases is the establishment of some principle of law which the Judge can follow in deciding the case before him.¹⁰ There can be no precedent on questions of fact and matters of discretion.¹¹ Nor can the dicta of Judges, however eminent, be cited as establishing authoritatively propositions of law unless such dicta form the integral part of the train of reasoning directed to the real question decided.¹² It should also be noted that in relying on decided cases in regard to the interpretation of the words of any statute, the danger of the terms of the statute being unduly extended by such reliance, the diversion of attention from what has been enacted to what has been judicially said about the enactment is to be avoided.^{12a}

Subject to the principles mentioned above, the following rules may be remembered :—

(1) All Courts in India are bound by the decisions of the Privy Council.¹³ A considered decision of the Privy Council cannot be ignored as being obiter.¹⁴

In the case of different views among the High Courts on any point of law, the view of the Privy Council, even if obiter, is to be accepted.¹⁵

The only use of the authorities or decided cases is the establishment of some principle of law which the Judge can follow in deciding the case before him.¹⁰ There can be no precedent on questions of fact and matters of discretion.¹¹ Nor can the dicta of Judges, however eminent, be cited as establishing authoritatively propositions of law unless such dicta form the integral part of the train of reasoning directed to the real question decided.¹² It should also be noted that in relying on decided cases in regard to the interpretation of the words of any statute, the danger of the terms of the statute being unduly extended by such reliance, the diversion of attention from what has been enacted to what has been judicially said about the enactment is to be avoided.^{12a}

(1) All Courts in India are bound by the decisions of the Privy Council.¹³ A considered decision of the Privy Council cannot be ignored as being obiter.¹⁴

In the case of different views among the High Courts on any point of law, the view of the Privy Council, even if obiter, is to be accepted.¹⁵

(2) A single Judge of the High Court is bound by the decision of a Bench of two or more Judges¹⁶ and a Bench of two or more Judges-is itself bound by the

(2) Where an English or American decision is based upon general legal principles recognised by the laws of all civilised countries.³ But it must be applied with reference to Indian conditions,⁴ and where the law of this country is different from that of England or America, English or American decisions should be quoted with the very greatest care.^{4a}

17. "Laws relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature."—These words mean all the laws in operation at the time of the passing of the Code.¹

The words "Courts of Civil Judicature" mean all Courts which try suits and proceedings of a civil nature.² Where an Act allows suits or applications to be filed in a Civil Court relating to matters arising under it, the procedure to be followed in such suit or application will be governed by the provisions of the Code.³

18. Revenue Courts.—A Revenue Court means a Court having jurisdiction under any special or local law to entertain suits or proceedings for the rent, revenue or the profits of the land used for agricultural purposes. It does not include a Court having jurisdiction under this Code to try such suits.¹

Note 18

1. See Section 5 infra.

This does not mean that the Revenue Courts are therefore not Courts of Civil Judicature. The matters tried by them relate to civil rights and the Courts trying them are thus Civil Courts.² The Code is, therefore, applicable to the procedure of those Courts except where its operation is negatived by the special or local law governing such suits.³

Even where the trial of the suit is specially provided for by the special or local law, the procedure prescribed by the Code will apply where an appeal is taken to a Civil Court from the decree of the Revenue Court, or such decree is transferred for execution to the Civil Court.⁴

19. Mamlatdar's Courts.—These are also Civil Courts but established under a special law with a special form of procedure prescribed for suits contemplated therein.¹ As in the case of Revenue Courts, the Code will not apply where such special provision has been made.² In fact the Code generally has been held to be inconsistent with the nature of the special Act and therefore not applicable.³ The High Court, however, has exercised revisional jurisdiction over the Mamlatdar's Courts under Section 115.⁴

Synopsis

1. "British India."
2. "Scheduled Districts."

1. "British India."—The term "British India" is not defined in the Code and therefore the definition thereof in the General Clauses Act, X. of 1897 will apply.¹ Under Section 3 clause 7 of that Act, "British India" has been defined as follows: "British India" shall mean, as respects the period before the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, all territories and places within His Majesty's dominions which were for the time being governed by His Majesty through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India, and as respects any period after that date means all territories for the time being comprised within the Governor's Provinces and the Chief Commissioners' Provinces, except that a reference to British India in an Indian law passed or made before the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, shall not include a reference to Berar."

Aden² and British Burma³ were governed by His Majesty through Governors or other officers subordinate to the Governor-General of India and were thus within "British India." As regards Aden, it has now been provided by the Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26, Geo.V., ch. 42), Section 94, (which came into force on 1st April 1937^{4a}) that Aden ceases to be a part of India. By virtue of Section 46 sub-section 2 of the said Act, Burma has ceased to be part of British India from 1st April 1937.^{4b} But, by virtue of Section 466 of the Government of India Act of 1935, the law previously in force in Burma will continue to be in force there until altered or repealed or amended by the Legislature or other competent authority.

"Scheduled Districts"⁵ were within British India.

The following classes of territories do not fall within the scope of the definition of "British India":

(1) Native States in India.⁶

(2) Lands ceded by the Native Princes to the British Government for limited purposes,⁶ e. g. civil stations and cantonment areas,⁷ and land over which jurisdiction has been ceded for the purposes of Railway Administration.⁸ Thus, the cantonments of Wadhwan,⁹ Secunderabad¹⁰ and the Rajkot Civil Station¹¹ are not included in

2. "Scheduled Districts."—For reasons of State several parts of British India were never brought within or were, from time to time, removed from the operation of the general Acts and Regulations and the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of Judicature.¹ These parts were known as the Scheduled Districts as all such parts were given in a schedule to the Scheduled Districts Act, XIV of 1874.

By Sections 5 and 5A of that Act, however, the Local Government, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, had power to extend to any such District, any enactment in force in British India with such modifications and limitations as it thinks fit. The Civil Procedure Code, 1882, was under that Section extended to various Scheduled Districts by notification. The Code of 1908 was extended to several parts of the Scheduled Districts² under notifications after the passing of the Code.

Definitions.

(1) “Code” includes rules :

Distinction between the body of the Code and the “rules.” — The chief feature of the present Code is the distinction drawn between what is termed “body of the Code” and “the rules.” The body of the Code creates *jurisdiction*¹ and is unalterable except by the Legislature, but the rules which indicate the mode in which such jurisdiction is to be *exercised*² can be altered or amended by the High Courts under certain circumstances,³ such alterations or amendments having force or effect within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the High Courts which made them. This division was introduced “to enable variations to be introduced in procedure to meet the requirements of different localities as well as to enable defects to be remedied as they are discovered without resort to the tardy process of legislation.”⁴

The body of the Code has, expressed as it is in the most general terms, to be read in conjunction with the more particular provisions of the Rules,⁵ but in case of conflict between them the body of the Code must prevail.⁶ Similarly, the forms in the Schedule cannot control the clear words of the Code.⁷

Under Section 3 (3) (a) of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1872), Sections 38 to 42 and 156 and Rules 4 to 9 in O. XXI in the first schedule have been declared to be in force in the Sonthal Parganas and the rest of the Code for the trial of suits referred to in Section 10 of the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation, 1893 (V of 1893). Calcutta Gazette, 1909, Pt. I, p. 45, and the whole Code in the Angul District under Section 3 of the Angul Laws Regulation, 1913 (III of 1913), B. and O. Code. This Act has been declared to be in force in British Baluchistan under Section 3 of the Baluchistan Laws Regulation, 1913 (II of 1913), Baluchistan Code. Sections 38, 39, 41, 42, 45 and 46, Order IX, Rules 1 and 2, and Order XXI, Rules 1-9 have been declared to be in force in the Arakan Hill District by Regulation I of 1916, Section 2. See Supplement to Burma Code.

(2) "decree" means the formal expression⁸ of an adjudication⁴ which, so far as regards the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties⁷ with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy⁶ in the suit⁵ and may be either preliminary¹⁰ or final.¹¹ It shall be deemed to include the rejection of a plaint¹³ and the determination of any question within section 47 or section 144,¹⁴ but shall not include—

(a) any adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order,¹⁵ or

(b) any order of dismissal for default.¹⁶

Explanation.—A decree is preliminary when further proceedings have to be taken before the suit can be completely disposed of. It is final when such adjudication completely disposes of the suit. It may be partly preliminary and partly final¹²:

1. Legislative changes. — A "decree" was defined under Section 2 of the old Code as follows: —

"'Decree' means the formal expression of an adjudication upon any right claimed, or defence set up, in a Civil Court, where such adjudication, so far as regards the Court expressing it, decided the suit or appeal. An order rejecting a plaint, or directing accounts to be taken, or determining any question mentioned or referred to in section 244, but not specified in section 588, is within this definition: An order specified in section 588 is not within this definition."

In the present definition, the language has been re-cast so as to effect some important changes:

- (i) Whereas under the old definition, an adjudication, in order to constitute a decree, must have decided the suit or appeal, it is sufficient, under this definition, that it conclusively determines the rights of the parties though not deciding the suit itself. This change has been effected in view of the express provision recognizing the distinction between preliminary and final decrees.¹
- (ii) Under the old definition, orders, not mentioned or referred to in Section 244 (now Section 47) were not decrees though they were within Section 244. Thus, orders against sureties under Section 145, for example, were not decrees. The word "within" has now been substituted for the words "mentioned or referred to in" so as to constitute such orders also decrees.²
- (iii) An order of dismissal for default is expressly excluded from the definition of a decree and the conflict of decisions that had existed on that point has been thus set at rest.³

2. Distinction between a decree and an order. — The importance of the definition of the word "decree" rests on the fact that by reference to it the right of first appeal and second appeal is determined.¹

Note 2

1. See Clause 2 of the Notes on clauses by the Special Committee.

Where an adjudication is a decree, then, unless expressly otherwise provided, S

(i) a first appeal invariably lies therefrom,² and

(ii) a second appeal (i. e., an appeal from the decision on first appeal) also lies on the grounds mentioned in Section 100.

But where an adjudication is an order, as defined in Section 2 (14), infra,

(i) no appeal lies therefrom unless it is one of the "appealable orders" specified in Section 104, and

(ii) no second appeal lies in any case.³

It is in view of the distinction abovementioned that it becomes very often necessary to determine whether an adjudication is a "decree" or an "order." In each case the question must be tested, not by reference to general principles but by the expression of the Code which must be construed in its plain and obvious sense.⁴ An adjudication must, however, be either a "decree" or an "order"; it cannot be both and cannot be resolved into diverse elements some of which are decrees and some orders.⁵

As the words "formal expression" appear in the definitions, both of 'decree' and 'order' in this Section, the presence or absence of a formal expression cannot be the true criterion of the difference between a decree and an order. The essence of the distinction lies in the nature of the decision — whether it is an adjudication of a particular kind or not — rather than in the manner of its expression.^{5a}

Where an adjudication is spoken of as an "order" in the provisions of the Code, it must, it is conceived, be taken to be only an "order" and not a "decree," though the necessary elements of a decree are also present in such adjudication. Thus it is provided, for example, in O. 1 R. 10 and in O. 9 R. 2 that the Court may order that the suit be dismissed. A dismissal of a suit is ordinarily a decree within Section 2 (2), but in view of the fact that the dismissals under O. 1 R. 10 and O. 9 R. 2, are called orders, they are not decrees within Section 2 (2).⁶ See also Note 16, infra.

Under the Agra Tenancy Act, a 'decree' as defined in S. 3, Cl. (14) means any order which so far as the Revenue Court is concerned, finally disposes of a suit; so it does not include the determination of any question within S. 47, C. P. Code.)

('36) AIR 1936 All 451 (451).

3. Essential elements of a decree. — In order that a decision of a Court may be a "decree," there must be the following essential elements¹ :

(1) There must be an adjudication.

(2) The adjudication must have been given in a suit.

(3) It must have determined the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit.

(4) Such determination must be a conclusive determination.

(5) There must be a formal expression of the adjudication. The definition in this Section must be taken along with the provisions of the Code regarding the stage at which a decree may be prepared, and it is not every finding that will amount to a decree even though it may conclusively determine the rights of the parties with regard to some of the matters in controversy in the suit.²

4. There must be an adjudication.—There must be a judicial determination of the matter in dispute. A decision on a mere matter of administration is not a decree. A decree-holder applies for leave to bid at a sale held in execution of his decree. The Court passes an order refusing the application. The order is not appealable, the matter being one of administration.¹ An order assessing the value of properties under O. 21 R. 66 is similarly a matter of administration and is not a decree.² Nor is an order, dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution, a decree, inasmuch as it does not deal judicially with the matter of the suit.³ Where, however, appeal against preliminary decree is withdrawn and dismissed, the order of dismissal is a decree.^{4a}

Where the officer passing a judgment is not a "Court" at all, the judgment or order is not a decree.⁴

5. The decision must have been given in a suit. — The word "suit" has not been defined in the Code. For the purposes of the Code, it means —

(1) Any proceeding under the Code which is instituted by the presentation of a plaint.¹ See Section 26, infra.

(2) Any proceeding under other Acts which, according to specific provisions therein, should be regarded as a suit under the Code.^{1a} See Sections 295, 299 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, which provide that proceedings thereunder should be regarded as suits under the Code. See also Para. 20 of Schedule II of the Code; Section 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and also the undermentioned cases.^{1b} See also Note 21 to Section 11 and Note 6 to O. 9 R. 9.

A proceeding therefore which does not commence with a *plaint*² and which is not to be treated as a suit under any other Act, is not a "suit" and a decision given therein is not a "decree."³ Thus, an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is not a suit as the application becomes a suit only after the leave is granted. An order passed on such an application is not a decree.⁴ Similarly an order on an

The decision must have been given on the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit. — Under the old Code, it was enough that an adjudication, in order to be a decree, should have decided the suit or appeal.¹ Accordingly several decisions which had the effect of deciding the suit but which were not strictly between the parties were held to be decrees.² Under the present definition, the adjudication must be one on the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in suit.³

The word "parties" in this Section, and, indeed, in very many other Sections of the Code, is used to mean parties arrayed on the one side as plaintiffs and on the other as defendants.¹¹ Thus, an order on an application by a third person to be impleaded as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff in the suit is not an order on the rights of the parties and is therefore not a "decree."¹² If however the applicant is already a party to the suit and the effect of the dismissal of the application is to dismiss the suit itself, the decision will be one on the rights of the parties and, as such, a decree.¹³ In interpleader suits, the opposing defendants will be deemed to be parties and the decision of their claims inter se will be a decree.¹⁴

The expression "matters in controversy in the suit" refers to the subject-matter of the suit with reference to which some relief is sought.¹⁵ It includes matters, which, though they are common ground, must have been actually decided if any question had arisen and which are the foundation of the whole determination.¹⁶ It also includes matters which, though not arising on the face of the plaint as at first presented, arise at a subsequent stage of the suit and about which the parties are at controversy.¹⁷

7. The decision must conclusively determine the rights of the parties.— The decision must be conclusive, so far as regards the Court expressing it is concerned.¹ Where, for instance, a suit is tried partly by one Judge and partly by another and in a preliminary order the first Judge comes to certain findings and directs that after evidence on certain points had been taken the final decree should take a certain shape; and the second Judge varies certain of his predecessor's findings in the final judgment, the order of the first Judge is not a decree.²

8. There must be a formal expression of the adjudication.— A decree is a necessary part of the ultimate procedure in all suits; without it a judicial record does not speak and the law could not be executed.¹

It is essential for a decree that there should be a formal expression of the adjudication.² Such expression must be both deliberate and given in the manner provided by law.³ But it need not be in any particular form.⁴

It has, however, been held by the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court in some cases⁵ that the absence of a formal decree will not make an adjudication any the less a decree, if, in point of law, it operates as a decree. The Lahore High Court has also in some cases⁶ held that if an order could be formally drawn up as a decree it may be taken to be a decree. This seems to be arguing in a circle, as according to the Section itself and according to all the other High Courts, nothing will operate as a decree unless formally drawn up.⁷ The said decisions of the Lahore High Court, therefore, cannot be accepted as laying down sound law.

Again, it has been held⁸ that the omission to draw up a decree does not affect a party's right of appeal. This view also, it is submitted, is not based on sound principles. An appeal under Section 96 lies only against a decree and where there is in fact no decree (i. e., a formal expression of an adjudication) there can be no appeal.⁹

The mere drawing up of an order in the form used for decrees will not, however, make it a decree, if it does not, in itself, really fall within the definition of a decree.¹⁰

9. Classes of decrees. — The Code recognises the following classes of decrees:

- (1) preliminary decree,
- (2) final decree,
- (3) decree partly preliminary and partly final,
- (4) order rejecting plaint, and
- (5) determination of a question within Section 47 or Section 144.

A decree passed in appeal is really a decree in the suit, for, an appeal is only a continuation of the suit.¹ A compromise or a consent decree is a decree within the meaning of this Section.²

10. Preliminary decree. — Where an adjudication decides the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit, but does not completely dispose of the suit, it will be a preliminary decree.¹ Where it completely disposes of the suit it is a final decree.² In other words, a preliminary decree is passed in those cases in which the Court has first to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties and has then to stay its hand, for the time being, until it is in a position to pass a final decree in the suit.³

It has been seen in Note 6 above, that interlocutory orders which do not decide the rights of the parties are not decrees.⁴ Such orders cannot consequently be treated as preliminary decrees.⁵ Thus, a finding that a defendant is an agriculturist within the meaning of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act, or, that a plaintiff's suit is not barred by res judicata, is not a preliminary decree.⁶

The Code provides for the passing of preliminary decrees in the following classes of cases :

|---------------------|----|--|
| (1) O. 20, R. 12 | .. | Suits for possession and for rent or mesne profits. ⁷ |
| (2) O. 20, R. 13 | .. | Administration suits. |
| (3) O. 20, R. 14 | .. | Suits for pre-emption. |
| (4) O. 20, R. 15 | .. | Suits for dissolution of partnership. ⁸ |
| (5) O. 20, R. 16 | .. | Suits for accounts between principal and agent. |
| (6) O. 20, R. 18 | .. | Suits for partition and separate possession. ⁹ |
| (7) O. 34, Rr. 2, 3 | .. | Suits for foreclosure of a mortgage. |
| (8) O. 34, Rr. 4, 5 | .. | Suits for sale of mortgaged property. ¹⁰ |
| (9) O. 34, Rr. 7, 8 | .. | Suits for redemption of mortgage. |

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the list is exhaustive of the cases in which a preliminary decree can be passed. In an earlier case of the Calcutta High Court it was held that except in cases expressly provided for in the Code no preliminary decree can be passed.¹¹ A later case of the same High Court¹² held that the list is not exhaustive. The Bombay High Court has also held to the same effect.¹³ There seems to be nothing in principle to show why, if an order satisfies all the conditions of a preliminary decree as defined, it should not be taken as such simply because it is not expressly provided for in the Code. There is also a conflict of views as to whether there can be more than one preliminary decree in the same suit. Ordinarily there can be only one such decree in a suit. The Calcutta High Court has held¹⁴ that there may be exceptions to the rule. Thus, where the Appellate Court passed a preliminary decree in a suit for administration of a debutter estate and sent the case back ordering that the lower Court should direct a taking of accounts, and the lower Court in pursuance of the order made an order defining the extent and character of the liability of a party to render an account, it was held that the latter order was also a preliminary decree.¹⁵ An earlier case of the Calcutta High Court¹⁶ and the Madras High Court¹⁷ hold that there cannot be more than one preliminary decree. The same view is taken by the Bombay High Court and by the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.^{18a} It has been held by the Patna High Court^{18b} that the definition of a decree in this Section must be taken along with the provisions of the Code regarding the stage at which a decree may be prepared and that the order of an Appellate Court in an appeal from the preliminary decree in a suit for redemption, remanding the case to the lower Court and giving directions as to the mode of taking accounts is not a preliminary decree. It is not competent for a Court to dismiss a suit after a preliminary decree is passed or to vacate the preliminary decree for default in subsequent stages of the proceeding; it can only be reversed in appeal.^{18c}

Under the Code of 1877, an order directing accounts was not within the definition of "decree;"¹⁹ but, under the Code of 1882, it was so.²⁰ Such orders when they involve a decision of the rights of the parties will be preliminary decrees under the present Code.²¹

11. Final decree.—A decree may be said to become final in two ways :

(1) When the time for the last appeal has expired without any appeal being filed, or the matter has been decided by the decree of the highest Court.¹

(2) When the decree, so far as regards the Court passing it, completely disposes of the suit.²

It is in the latter sense that the words "final decree" are used in Section 2 sub-clause (2). The appealability of a decree therefore will not affect its character as a "final decree."

A suit is completely disposed of when there is nothing further remaining to be decided in it. Thus, where a decree is passed for a sum representing past mesne profits, and for subsequent mesne profits at a particular rate without directing any inquiry, the decree completely disposes of the suit and is therefore a final decree.³ If the Court, however, had merely declared that a party is liable for mesne profits and directed an enquiry into the amount of mesne profits, the declaration, though a decree, does not completely dispose of the suit and is therefore only a preliminary decree and not a final one.⁴

A decree to which a condition is attached, upon the fulfilment of which the decree-holder is to enjoy the fruits of his decree, does not because of that become a preliminary decree; it is nevertheless a final decree.

Illustration

A files a suit for pre-emption against B. A decree is passed in A's favour but with the condition that unless the purchase-money is paid within two months from the date of the decree, the suit shall stand dismissed. The decree is a final one, inasmuch as the Court having passed such a decree has no further judicial function to perform in respect of the complete disposal of the suit.⁵

Ordinarily there will be only one final decree in a suit. But circumstances are not inconceivable which require the passing of more than one final decree in the same suit.

Illustration

A obtains a preliminary decree against B. B appeals and obtains an order for stay of further proceedings in the lower Court in respect of a portion of the subject-matter. The trial Court passes a final decree in respect of the portion not affected by the stay order. The appeal is subsequently dismissed. A can apply for a supplementary or second final decree in respect of the portion about which no final decree was passed.⁶

See also notes to Order 34 Rules 3 and 5 under the heading 'Appeal.'

12. Decree partly preliminary and partly final. — A decree may be partly preliminary and partly final. Thus, where in a suit for possession of immovable property with mesne profits, the Court —

(a) decrees possession of the property, and

(b) directs an enquiry into the mesne profits, the portion (a) is a final decree and the portion (b) is a preliminary one.¹

Similarly, a direction in the final decree leaving distribution of assets undisposed of is in essence a preliminary decree and the decree is partly final and partly preliminary.²

13. Order rejecting plaint. — An order rejecting a plaint does not preclude the plaintiff from presenting a fresh plaint on the same cause of action.¹ Such an order, therefore, does not negative the rights of the plaintiff as in the case of dismissal of the suit.² The Section, however, specifically provides that the rejection of a plaint shall be deemed to be a decree.³

Is an order rejecting a memorandum of appeal a decree? There is a conflict of opinion on the point. On the one hand, it has been held that the words "shall refusing an application.³ The determination of a mere issue made prior to the passing of the final order,⁴ or an order merely determining a point of law arising incidentally in the course of a proceeding for determining the rights of the parties,⁵ is not a decree. Thus, a refusal to summon a witness in a proceeding under Section 47 is not a decree.⁶ In the undermentioned case^{6a} the Madras High Court held that an order in execution proceedings disallowing a plea of limitation raised in bar of the execution was a decree. It is submitted that the view is not correct. For orders under Section 47 and Section 144 which do not amount to decrees, see Notes 84 and 86 to Section 47 and Note 31 to Section 144.

There is no distinction between a decree in a suit and a decree in a proceeding under Section 47 or Section 144.⁷

15. "Decree" does not include appealable orders. — The definition expressly excludes an adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order.¹ Orders which are so appealable are specified in Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1 of the Code. An order, therefore, which falls within the purview of Section 47 or Section 144 or is otherwise within the general definition of a decree, is nevertheless not a decree if an appeal lies therefrom under Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1.²

16. Decree does not include order of dismissal for default.— Under the old Code there was a conflict of decisions as to whether a dismissal for default of a suit or of an appeal was a decree.¹ The conflict has now been set at rest² by the following changes in the Code :

(1) By expressly providing in clause (b) of Section 2 (2), that a dismissal for default is not a decree ; and

(2) By substituting the words "the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed" and the words "the Court shall make an order that the appeal be dismissed" for the words "the Court shall dismiss the suit" and the words "the appeal shall be dismissed" in O. 9 R. 8 and O. 41 Rr. 11 (2) and 17 respectively, corresponding to Sections 102, 551 and 556 of the old Code. The object of such substitution is to make it clear that the dismissal is to be regarded only as an order. See Note 2 above.

The words "dismissed for default" are not confined to dismissals for default in suits or appeals. They extend also to applications under Section 47 or Section 144 which are dismissed for default.³

In the undermentioned case⁴ the Allahabad High Court proceeded on the view that a dismissal for default means a dismissal for non-appearance and held that where an appellant's pleader was present but expressed his unpreparedness to argue the appeal and the appeal was dismissed for non-prosecution, the dismissal was not one for "default" and constituted a decree. This view, however, seems to be opposed to the undermentioned decisions of the Privy Council⁵ in which the Privy Council has taken the view that an order dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution is not a "judicial" order at all.

(3) "decree-holder" means any person in whose favour a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made :

Synopsis

- 1. Legislative changes.
- 2. Scope of the definition.

Other Topic

Capable of Execution. See Note 2, Pt. (3).

1. Legislative changes. — The words "and includes any person to whom such decree or order is transferred" which occurred in the old Code, have now been omitted. For reasons, see Note 2.

2. Scope of the definition. — Under the old Code the transferee from the decree-holder was included in the definition of the term "decree-holder."¹ This was found too general as including even oral assignments whereas under Section 232 of the same Code an assignment, in order to be recognised, had to be in writing.² The words "and includes any person to whom such decree or order is transferred" have consequently been removed. The result is that a decree-holder under the present definition must be a person in whose favour a decree is passed and whose name is on the record in the suit.^{2a} But the rights of the transferee, however, are not affected by the change and remain practically the same as before.

Where a decree for specific performance is passed, such decree is capable of execution both by the plaintiff as well as by the defendant; consequently even the defendant in such a case would be a "decree-holder."³

The term "decree-holder" does not include an attaching creditor.⁴

(4) "district" means the local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction (hereinafter called a "District Court"), and includes the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a High Court:

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. "District Court," meaning of.

Other Topic

District. See Note 2.

1. Legislative changes. — The latter half of the old definition declaring the subordination of the various Civil Courts has now been transferred to Section 3.

2. "District Court," meaning of. — The term "district" means:

(1) The local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.¹

(2) The local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court.²

The words "District Court," however, do not mean necessarily a High Court wherever they occur,³ but mean only the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.⁴

The definition, as the opening of the Section shows, applies only where nothing is repugnant in the subject or context. In construing the term therefore in any Section the particular provisions thereof will have first to be considered.⁵

This Section does not apply to the scheduled districts.⁶

(5) "foreign Court" means a Court situate beyond the limits of British India which has no authority in British India and is not established or continued by the Central Government or the Crown Representative:^a

a. Substituted for the words "the Governor-General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Scope of the definition. — Three conditions must be satisfied in order to bring a Court within the definition of a "foreign Court":

(1) It must be situate outside British India,¹

(2) It must have no authority in British India, and

"Judgment."—The essential element of a judgment is that there should be a statement of the grounds of the decision.¹ It need not, however, be a decision on all the issues in a case. An order deciding a preliminary issue in the case may be a judgment.² The shorthand notes dictated by the Judge cannot, until they have been approved by the Judge, be considered as part of his actual judgment.³

As to meaning of "judgment" under the Letters Patent, see Notes under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and the undermentioned cases.⁴

- (10) (10) "judgment-debtor" means any person against whom a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made :

"Judgment-debtor."—The definition does not include the judgment-debtor's assignee.¹

A person who has stood surety for costs and against whom a decree for costs has been passed, is a judgment-debtor within the clause.²

- (11) (11) "legal representative" means a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and where a party sues or is sued in a representative character the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued :

(12) “mesne profits” of property means those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession :

“Mesne profits.” — See Order 20 Rule 12.

(13) “moveable property” includes growing crops :

“Moveable property.” — This definition is new and negatives the view taken by the decisions under the old Code that growing crops are immovable property.¹ It is however confined to the purposes of this Code only.² Compare Section 3 (25) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). See also the undermentioned cases.³

(14) “order” means the formal expression of any decision of a Civil Court which is not a decree :

“Order.” — The word ‘order’ as defined in the Code is analogous to a decree and does not imply what is popularly understood, namely the views expressed by a Judge on the merits of the case before him and his decision thereon.¹ See definition of ‘judgment’ ante.

See also Section 2 sub-section (2).

(15) “pleader” means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in Court, and includes an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court :

“Pleader.” — See Order 3 Rule 4.

(16) “prescribed” means prescribed by rules :

Rules. — For the definition of “rules,” see clause 18 infra.

(17) “public officer” means a person falling under any of the following descriptions, namely :—

(e) every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement;

(f) every officer of the Crown,^c whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience ;

(g) every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of the Crown,^c or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of the Crown,^c or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report on, any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of the Crown,^c or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of the Crown,^c or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of the Crown,^c and

b. Words "including His Majesty's Indian Marine Service" omitted by Act XXXV of 1934.

c. Substituted for the words "the Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

"Public officer." — Compare Section 21 of the Indian Penal Code. A public officer is a "person" falling within the description of clauses (a) to (h) of this sub-section. Under the General Clauses Act (X of 1897), the word "person" includes "any body or association of individuals".¹ A cantonment committee has accordingly been held to be a public officer.² The Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court has, however, taken a different view. According to it a committee cannot be described as an "officer" or as a person who "holds any office." It has accordingly held that a village sanitation panchayat is not a public officer.³ It is submitted that the former view is the sounder of the two.

(a). For definition of "Judge," see clause (8) above.

(c). The words "while serving under the Government" mean "while still in the actual service of the Government." It therefore excludes persons placed in the retired list.⁴

An Assistant Surgeon in the Indian Medical Service,⁵ a British Officer in the Indian Army,⁶ a Major in the Indian Staff Corps⁷ are all public officers, but not an officer of the Regular Corps.⁸

(d). A Receiver appointed under the Provincial Insolvency Act 5 of 1920,⁹ an Official Liquidator,^{9a} the Liquidator of a Co-operative Society,^{9b} the Official Receiver appointed by the Calcutta High Court to act as a Receiver in any particular case,^{9c} a Receiver appointed under Order 401 Rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code and on whom the powers referred to in the said Rule have been conferred,^{9d} an Official Assignee or Official Trustee,¹⁰ a common manager appointed under Section 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act,¹¹ the bench clerk of a Civil Court¹² and the Sheriff of Bombay¹³ are all Officers of Courts of Justice and are public officers.

(e). To place or keep a person in confinement connotes something more than mere arrest. Hence, the mere fact that a person holds an office which empowers him to arrest a person will not make him a public officer. Thus, the Agent of a Railway Company, although he has power under Section 131 of the Railways Act to arrest certain persons for offences committed on the railway, is not a public officer, merely by reason of such power.^{13a}

(f). An Inspector of Police is a public officer.^{13b}

(h). A village headman,¹⁴ the Administrator-General,¹⁵ a Collector acting as the manager of a minor's estate¹⁶ are all public officers. An advocate engaged by the Government to conduct a civil suit on behalf of the Government and remunerated by daily fees is a public officer.^{16a} A manager of an estate under the Court of Wards is not a public officer presumably as he does not serve or receive his pay

- (17) from the Government.¹⁷ But where a person performs a public duty, the fact that he is paid out of commission charged to a private person, does not take him out of the category of a public officer.¹⁸

It has been held that an assistant surgeon of a station hospital in military employ is not a public officer merely by reason of his serving, or receiving his pay from, the Government.¹⁹ The reasoning of the decision is not clear and the decision cannot be accepted as good law in the face of the clear words of the Section.

For cases under Section 21 of the Penal Code (defining "public servants"), see the undermentioned cases.²⁰

- (18) "rules" means rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125:

"Rules" — See Notes to Section 2 (1).

- (19) "share in a corporation" shall be deemed to include stock, debenture stock, debentures or bonds: and

Stock. — For meaning thereof, see Section 2 of the Indian Trustees Act, XXVII of 1866.

Debenture. — No precise definition of this word is found anywhere.¹ It is a charge in writing on certain property, for the repayment, at a fixed time, of money lent by a person therein named at a given interest. It is frequently resorted to by public companies to raise money for the prosecution of their undertaking.²

Debenture stock. — This differs from debenture bonds in that it is usually irredeemable.³

Bonds. — For meaning thereof, see Section 2 (5) of the Indian Stamp Act, II of 1899 and Section 2 (3) of the Limitation Act, IX of 1908.

- (20) (20) "signed," save in the case of a judgment or decree, includes stamped.

- (1881) 7 Q B D 165 (172), British India Steam Navigation Co. v. Commissioner of In. Rev.
- Wharton's Law Lexicon.
- Manual of law terms and phrases by K.J. Aiyar.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to the latter part of the definition of the word "district" in Section 2 of the Code of 1882 with slight modifications.

2. Scope of the Section. — The Section declares that—

(1) the District Court is subordinate to the High Court.^{1a}

(2) (a) Every Court of Small Causes¹ and (b) every Civil Court of a grade inferior to that of a District Court is subordinate to the High Court and the District Court.² Thus, a Collector's Court is not of a grade inferior to that of the District Court and is therefore not subordinate to the District Court.³ A Court of Subordinate Judge is subordinate to the District Court, no matter what the forum of appeal may be in any particular case.⁴

The enumeration of Subordinate Courts in the Section is not exhaustive and does not exclude all other Courts from being subordinate to the High Court. Thus, a Collector acting under the Mamlatdar's Courts Act is a Court subordinate to the High Court.⁵

3. High Court. — "High Court" used with reference to civil proceedings means the highest Civil Court of appeal in that part of British India in which the Act or Regulation containing the expression operates.¹ It thus includes the Chief Courts and the Courts of Judicial Commissioners.

4. District Court. — See Section 2 (5), ante.

5. Binding authority of rulings. — See Preamble, Note 15.

4. [S. 4.] (1) In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any special or local law now in force or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by or under any other law for the time being in force.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the proposition contained in sub-section (1), nothing in this Code

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. Scope of the Section.
3. Procedure prescribed by the Code is not applicable where a special procedure is provided for.
4. Sub-section (2).

Other Topic : Arbitration. See Note 3, F. N. (2).

1. Legislative changes. — This Section is wider than the corresponding Section of the old Code. While the latter saved certain Acts specifically mentioned therein, this Section generally saves any special or local law or any special jurisdiction conferred or any special form of procedure prescribed by or under any other law.

2. Scope of the Section. — It is only when anything in the Civil Procedure Code is in conflict with anything in the special or local law or with any special jurisdiction or power conferred or any special form of procedure prescribed by or under any other law, that the Code will not prevail so as to override such inconsistent provisions.¹ Otherwise the Code will apply.²

3. Procedure prescribed by the Code is not applicable where a special procedure is provided for. — For example, Clause 36 of the Letters Patent prescribes a special form of procedure in case of difference of opinion between two Judges of the High Court hearing an appeal under the Letters Patent. In such a case the procedure laid down in Section 98 of the Code will not prevail.¹ For other examples, see the cases referred to in foot-note (4) to Note 2 of the Preamble.

a. Substituted by the Small Cause Courts (Attachment of Immovable Property) Act, 1926, for "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders."

Synopsis

1. Changes introduced by the Code of 1908.

2. Amendments after 1908.

3. Scope and object of the Section.

4. Suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. See Sch. 2 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887.

5. Execution of decrees against immovable property.

6. Attachment before judgment.

1. Changes introduced by the Code of 1908. — This Section reproduces in a concise and convenient form the purport of Section 5 and Schedule II of the old Code.¹

2. Amendments after 1908. — Clause (b) of the original Section contained, after the words "sections 94 and 95" only the words "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders." These latter words gave rise to the following constructions :

(1) that attachments before judgment of immovable property were not prohibited, as the said words referred only to clauses (c) and (e) of Section 94 and not to clause (b) also;¹

(2) that the words "interlocutory orders" when read with "injunctions" meant only interlocutory orders on applications for injunction and that, therefore, an order for compensation under Section 95 for wrongful attachment before judgment was not prohibited.²

The Section has, by Act I of 1926, been amended by omitting the words "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders" and substituting the words within square brackets in the Section, thus negating both the constructions abovementioned.

Section 7 — Note 1

1. Section 5 and Sch. II of the Code of 1882 were themselves reproductions of S. 5 and Sch. II of the Code of 1877, with this difference that S. 360 which empowered the Local Government to extend insolvency provisions of the Code to Small Cause Courts was not mentioned in Sch. II of the Code of 1877. Under that Code the Government could not, therefore, invest Courts of Small Causes with powers under Chap. XX of that Code.

A new Rule, being Rule 13, has also been added to Order 38 to make the matter clearer still.

3. Scope and object of the Section. — Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), provides that the procedure prescribed in the Code shall be the procedure followed in a Court of Small Causes, except —

(1) where it is otherwise provided in the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act itself, or

(2) where it is otherwise provided by this Code.

This Section specifies the provisions of the body of the Code, which are not applicable to the Provincial Small Cause Courts and Order 50 specifies the provisions of the Rules, which are not applicable to such Courts.

4. Suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. — See Schedule II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887).

5. Execution of decrees against immovable property. — A Small Cause Court cannot, as such, execute its decrees against any immovable property, even though such Court is also an ordinary Court.¹ But a Small Cause Court can transfer its decree under Section 39, post, for execution to an ordinary Court or to the same Court on its ordinary side and then, the latter can execute the decree against immovable property.²

A Small Cause Court cannot also execute its decree against a share in joint property where part thereof is immovable property.³

A Small Cause Court can, however, create a charge on immovable property.⁴

For the meaning of "immovable property", see Section 16, Note 4.

6. Attachment before judgment. — An attachment before judgment of moveable property by a Small Cause Court is not prohibited by the Section.¹ Such an order falls within Section 94 clause (b), and is not an "interlocutory order" referred to in Section 94 clause (c).²

As for attachment before judgment of immovable property, it had been held before Act I of 1926 that that also was not prohibited by the Section.³ It is now clearly enacted that such an order cannot be passed by a Small Cause Court.⁴

8. [S. 8.] Save as provided in sections 24, 38 to 41, 75, clauses (a), (b) and (c), 76, 77 and 155 to 158, and by the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act,

CHAPTER VII

UPLIFT OF SCHEDULED CASTES AND TRIBES

Every country in the world has its Backward Classes, because in no country do the living conditions justify that "all men are created equal". The proportion of such backward class population is, perhaps, not so much in any other country as it is in India. Congress Governments at the Centre and in the States have taken the existence of backward classes in the country as a slur on our society and are out to ameliorate the living conditions of these unfortunate countrymen of ours and bring them on par with their fellow-citizens. That the Governments have found time and money for this work is significant especially when considered against the background of the many crises that visited this country on the wake of her Independence. All this goes only to prove that the Congress Governments are bent upon doing good to all citizens, irrespective of their importance or otherwise in the political set-up of the country.

During the year under review, the Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes toured most of the States to gain a closer knowledge of the problems of the scheduled castes and scheduled tribes and to investigate the working of the constitutional safeguards for the backward classes. Grants-in-aid to the extent of Rs. 17.5 millions were sanctioned for 1951-52 for the welfare of the scheduled tribes in Part A States and Part B States and a further provision of Rs. 18 millions has been made for this purpose in the budget for 1952-53. It is also proposed to provide Rs. 1.5 millions to improve the conditions of the scheduled tribes in Part C States.

Ajmer has provided Rs. 2.27 lakhs in its 1952-53 budget for the grant of scholarships and for the betterment of backward classes and scheduled castes. A Harijan Welfare Board has been constituted to advise in matters relating to these backward classes.

In Assam substantial progress was made during the fifth year of freedom in regard to the development of the tribal districts. Politically the inhabitants of these districts entered into a new phase of existence with the inception of the District Councils (constituted under the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution) which would run the day-to-day administration of these districts, in accordance with the traditions and customs of these people. The year also saw the furtherance of the various development schemes undertaken by the State Government for the welfare of the tribal people. The primary need of these people being means of communication, a number of roads were constructed at a cost of Rs. 2 lakhs. Various schemes for improvement of agriculture were also initiated and every effort was made to wean the tribal people from the present outmoded methods of agriculture. Besides spending over Rs. 80,000 on cooperative movement in these districts, substantial grants-in-aid were also awarded for rural development schemes run by the local inhabitants.

Special stress was laid on promotion of education in these backward areas. Medical and public health facilities were also further extended. With the fuller implementation of the Five-Year Plan for development of tribal areas a new era, it is hoped, will be ushered into the lives of these people.

Advancement of the welfare of the Aborigines, Harijans and other scheduled castes in Bihar continued to engage the attention of the State Government. One of the main items on the programme on welfare of backward classes was the award of stipends to poor and deserving students. Under this item a sum of Rs. 3 lakhs was spent during the year 1951-52. Special stipends were given to deserving Harijan and backward Muslim community students. In addition, steps were taken to provide suitable hostel accommodation also to these backward community students.

The Bihar Harijan (Removal of Civil Disabilities) Act, 1949, which was further amended in 1951 to make it more effective continued to be enforced during the year under review. This State is decided upon removing the civil disabilities from which the Harijans have been suffering for ages. Various ameliorative schemes were taken up in the State for the uplift of the Harijans, Aborigines and other backward classes.

In view of the special provisions in the Constitution in respect of scheduled castes and scheduled tribes and other backward classes, the Bombay Government formulated special schemes for scheduled tribes and areas and a provision of Rs. 17.5 lakhs has been made during the financial year 1952-53. The total provision for the backward classes welfare and the special department, amounts to Rs. 43 lakhs and covers all spheres of ameliorative action. The legislative enactments removing prohibition of temple entry and other disabilities imposed on Harijans were enforced vigorously during the year.

Freeships and lump-sum scholarships for the purchase of books and equipment were awarded to backward class children attending primary and secondary schools. Backward class agriculturists continued to receive preference for allotment of waste lands and lease of land for cultivation. A five-year programme of construction of 4,000 tenements for the Adivasis in Danges district has been introduced. The Rajendrapura colony of 50 houses which is a pilot scheme under this programme has been completed.

Coorg has got its revenue rules amended providing for grant of lands for cultivation, free of land and timber value, to Harijans and landless backward class people up to the extent of 3 acres to each person. More than 200 acres were given during the year under review. In order to spread literacy among the scheduled castes and scheduled tribes, their children are admitted free to schools and free supply of books and midday meals is made for them.

All temples in Himachal Pradesh receiving subvention from the Government have been opened to scheduled castes and occupancy rights have been conceded to Bethus (generally belonging to the scheduled castes) who have been in cultivating possession of Government lands for three or more generations on payment of one and a quarter times the land revenue and cesses, for the time being, chargeable on the land. Due representation has been given to scheduled castes in Government services so as to safeguard their rights. To promote education among the Harijans all the Harijan students have been exempted from tuition fees in all stages of school education. In addition, stipends have also been awarded to them. The State has a provision of Rs. 10,000 in its 1952-53 budget for the amelioration of the conditions of scheduled tribes and areas.

Hyderabad has begun to give pointed attention to this important problem. About 7 lakhs of Koyas, Gonds, Lambadas and Chenchus are being rescued from the abject existence that was theirs to share the benefits of a civilised and orderly life. Everything possible within the finances available is being done to put the scheduled caste population on a footing of equality with their more fortunate brethren.

Harijans and Adivasis in Madhya Bharat number about 14 and 11 lakhs respectively. With a view to improving their lot and to giving them equal opportunities for progress, the Removal of Harijans' Disabilities Bill was passed a few years ago giving them equal social rights. During the last five years thousands of Harijan and Adivasi children have received education with special facilities provided for them in the State. The 35 night schools in the State meant for backward class children received financial aid from the State Government. Fifteen boarding houses have also been opened specially for them.

In Madhya Pradesh the backward areas welfare scheme continued to tackle the problem of tribal welfare during the year under review. The scheme aims at bringing about a co-ordinated development of tribal people, by opening primary schools, middle schools, free hostels for middle school students, award of scholarships to tribal students undergoing training in middle schools, high schools and colleges, awarding stipends to hostellers and normal school trainees, establishing multi-purpose cooperative societies, and providing medical relief, water-supply, approach roads and other social amenities.

The chief measures adopted in Madras for the amelioration of Harijans during the year are: assignment of house sites, maintenance of schools, grant of scholarships and stipends and grants for the purchase of books, stationery, clothing, etc. Provision has also been made for wells and tanks and for the supply of drinking water and sanitary amenities, street lights, burning and burial ghats and grants to private bodies engaged in the social and economic uplift of the backward classes.

The Tribal and Rural Welfare Department in Orissa continued to pursue welfare measures formulated by the State Government in accordance with the Five-Year Plan. The problem is a vast one considering the large percentage of scheduled castes, scheduled tribes and other backward classes to the total population of the State. The State Government maintains schools and training centres for the benefit of tribal students. Two more ashram schools were started during the year in addition to the 28 already in existence. During the six-year course in these ashram schools literary education, spinning, weaving, carpentry and other crafts are taught to the Aborigines. The course aims at making the students fit for earning their livelihood by taking to crafts based on raw materials available near at hand while making them sufficiently educated to take a lively interest in public affairs. There is another type of schools—the sevashrams. These are day schools of the standard of primary schools, where general education is imparted along with spinning, carpentry and gardening. The intention is to develop these sevashrams into welfare centres and create among the students a bias for social work and self-help. While ashram schools are confined to Aborigines, the sevashrams are open to Aboriginal, Harijan and other backward class students. The object of the training centres is to train students in crafts, village sanitation, elementary politics, animal husbandry, etc., besides general education. Students trained from these institutions work as teachers in sevashrams and as village guides and social workers. There are three training centres. A sum of about Rs. 33,000 was spent on these centres during the year 1951–52.

All-round measures for the uplift of the 20-lakh scheduled caste and tribal population were adopted in Rajasthan during the year. In the scheduled areas a programme of digging 1,600 wells was put well under way. Rs. 4 lakhs were earmarked for this purpose. Agricultural implements were purchased for Rs. 40,000 for free use by backward classes. For extension of roads in scheduled areas Rs. 272,000 were spent during the year. The reservation of seats in State services for backward class candidates was also announced. Five centres to impart training in palm gur manufacture to the members of the backward classes were run at a cost of Rs. 40,000. A sum of Rs. 33,300 was also spent to provide facilities for such training as could be of immediate economic benefit. All restrictions on the admission of students belonging to backward classes to educational institutions have been abolished. Scholarships of the order of Rs. 75,000 were distributed among these students. About 10 hostels for them were also run whereon a sum of Rs. 130,000 was spent. Seventeen educational institutions were specially run for the educational progress of the scheduled areas. For continuance and extension of work of the bhil ashrams initiated by the late Thakkar Bapa Rs. 150,000 were given as grants-in-aid.

Social disabilities of scheduled castes were removed to a considerable extent. The Government also issued instructions enjoining upon all Government officers, and especially the Police officers, to pay special attention to cases regarding harassment of scheduled castes, scheduled tribes and other backward classes arising out of their social disabilities.

Out of its total population of 4,136,000, Saurashtra has about 1,735,375 backward class people. The State's ameliorative schemes in regard to backward class people fall under: education, social uplift, drinking water facilities, housing, and vocational education and occupation

Backward class students were granted scholarships. Text-books and other stationery and clothings were distributed free in the primary classes. Thirty-nine cultural schools have been started to work for the social uplift of this section of the State's population. During the scarcity period of 1951 about 274 villages were provided with wells at a cost of about Rs. 10,000. Plots of land were made available during the year at nominal rates to Harijans for the purpose of construction of houses. Fifteen Harijan girls were trained as full-fledged nurses. Two tailoring classes have also been started. Ten Harijan boys were given scholarships at Morvi Engineering Institute and Gramodyog Institute at Junagadh.

The major items of ameliorative work pursued by the Government of Travancore-Cochin for the advancement of backward class communities in the State were the establishment of colonies, settlements and house sites, construction of common buildings like bhajan mutts, prayer halls, reading rooms, etc., sinking of wells, provision of burial ground, latrines, etc., conduct of pial schools, provision of grants for institutions conducted by the members of the backward communities, collective farming and rural reconstruction, organisation of cooperative societies, provision of facilities for vocational and technical training and extension of educational assistance. For the efficient administration of this work, the State has been divided into 12 regions, each under the charge of a field officer. One hundred and fifty-nine Harijan colonies were maintained and 45 pial schools conducted during the year under review.

It was, however, towards educational advancement that the main attention of the Government was directed during the year. Post-graduate students belonging to scheduled castes and scheduled tribes were given free education and were given a monthly stipend of Rs. 50 to meet their lodging and boarding expenses, besides a lump-sum grant of Rs. 60 to 70 for the purchase of books, etc. The students of the Law College and Medical College were given Rs. 150 for the last-mentioned purpose. Concession stipends were also granted to industrial, technical and fine arts students. The total expenditure towards the grant of concession to college students alone during 1951-52 was about Rs. 27,000. In addition, students belonging to other backward communities were also given fee concession on production of poverty certificates. In the case of students of secondary schools, besides fee concession they were given lump-sum grants of Rs. 25 each for middle school classes and Rs. 40 each for high school classes for the purchase of books and dress. Nearly 8,000 students were benefited under the scheme in 1951-52, the total expenditure being Rs. 2.5 lakhs. For the purchase of books for the primary school students Government spent about Rs. 70,000 during the year.

In Uttar Pradesh special facilities for education and technical and vocational training and opportunities of employment were provided to people belonging to backward class. In pursuance of the State's plans to improve the general economic conditions of Harijans, the District Magistrates were instructed to give preference to the schemes of Harijans who wished to settle on land for agricultural purposes, when making allotment under the provisions of the U. P. Land Utilisation Act. During 1951-52 the cost of exemption from fees of Harijan students from primary to university stage, incurred through the re-imbusement of the institutions, by means of grants, totalled about Rs. 9 lakhs. The provision for scholarships and free supply of books to Harijans rose from Rs. 3.7 lakhs in 1945-46 to Rs. 8.28 lakhs in 1951-52. Scholarships for higher stages of education were given during the year to 403 students as against 80 in 1945-46. The number of scholarships and stipends that were given during the year to students in various stages of education was phenomenal when compared with that in 1945-46.

In Vindhya Pradesh about 45 per cent. of the population belong to scheduled castes, scheduled tribes and other backward classes. During the year efforts were made by the Government to ameliorate the living conditions of these castes and tribes. There were six night schools and 37 other schools especially for scheduled castes and backward classes. In addition, there were also 270 schools of various types in areas where the hilly tribes and Adibasis mostly reside. Special ashrams were being run by non-official bodies for the benefit of members of backward classes.

The Centre has sanctioned about Rs. 5 lakhs for the welfare of the tribal people in the State. The State Government has submitted to the Centre a five-year plan involving an estimated expenditure of Rs. 20 lakhs, to bring about better living conditions to the backward class people in the State.

In West Bengal a new Department of Tribal Welfare has been created and placed in exclusive charge of a Minister, aided by a Deputy Minister, so that the amelioration of the economic and social conditions of the tribal people of the State may receive the undivided attention of a single department. About Rs. 12 lakhs are being spent every year for the promotion of education among the backward classes by grant of scholarships, stipends and other assistance to deserving students. The scheduled castes and scheduled tribes are represented in the State Assembly by 40 and 12 respectively and in the Union Parliament by 6 and 2 respectively.

CHAPTER VIII

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATION

Railways

The Fifth Year of Independence was an important year in the working of the Railways in India. Not only have the Indian Railways emerged successfully from the difficulties of the post-partition period but they have acquired a clear perspective of their immediate future and better capacity to deal with the growing demands made on them.

Prior to the integration of the States the Railways suffered from the consequences of multiplicity of systems, and lack of uniformity in procedure and policy. These difficulties were increased with the taking over of the ex-States Railways after Federal Financial Integration. The regrouping of the Railways into six units, each serving a fairly compact geographical area, self-sufficient as to both traffic and resources, was finalised by the Railway Board in 1950.

The first phase of the plan was implemented on April 14, 1951 with the formation of the Southern Railway by the amalgamation of the M.S.M., Mysore and S.I. Railways. Within seven months from then, on November 5, 1951, the Central and Western Railways were set up, the former being an amalgamation of the G.I.P., N.S., Scindia and Dholpur Railways, and the latter the outcome of the fusion of the B.B. & C.I., Saurashtra, Rajasthan and Jaipur Railways. Regrouping was completed with the inauguration simultaneously of the Northern, North-Eastern and Eastern Railways on April 14, 1952. The Northern Railway has been formed by combining the E.P. with the Jodhpur and Bikaner Railways, and the Allahabad, Lucknow and Moradabad Divisions of the E.I.R. The North-Eastern Railway represents a simple fusion of the O.T. and Assam Railways. In the Eastern Railway has been merged the remaining four Divisions of the E.I.R. and the B.-N.R.

The regrouped systems have been functioning smoothly and satisfactorily. The systems formed earlier have progressed satisfactorily towards integration and the advantages expected have begun to materialise, through the reduction in the number of headquarters, gradual elimination of duplication of facilities and services, etc. The Government has given special attention to the human aspects of the problem, such as those arising from dislocation of staff, and the policy of Government generally has been to limit the transfers to only those where they are voluntary or where alternative housing accommodation is available.

The high levels of freight traffic moved in recent years have generally continued during the year under review. The tonnage moved during March 1951–March 1952 was 90.7 millions, and the ton mileage 27,934 millions, an increase respectively of 3.7 per cent. and 5.4 per cent. over the figures of the previous year. During the year there was a decrease of less than 5 per cent. in the number of passengers and the passenger mileage from the peak level touched in the previous year, and this is because the upsurge of post-war passenger travel is gradually subsiding.

The finances of the Railways have maintained the upward trends which started in 1948–49. The gross traffic receipt for the financial year 1951–52 was Rs. 288 crores, about Rs. 25 crores more than in the previous year. This increase was due mainly to the enhancements in passenger fares introduced with effect from April 1, 1951.

The total ordinary working expenses during the financial year 1951–52 amounted to Rs. 196 crores—Rs. 16 crores more than in 1950–51. Including the appropriation to the Depreciation Fund and allowing for the payment to worked lines, the total working expenses amounted to Rs. 226 crores. Making allowance for the miscellaneous receipts and expenditure, the total net revenue for the year was Rs. 55.41 crores. Deducting Rs. 33.35 crores as dividend to General Revenues, the profit for the year was Rs. 22 crores. The financial results of working thus represent an improvement on the record of the previous years.

The balances in the Reserve Funds denote the soundness of the financial administration of railways. According to the revised estimates for 1951–52, the Depreciation Reserve Fund is expected to close with a balance of Rs. 114.74 crores, while the Reserve and Development Reserve Funds will have balances respectively of Rs. 26.30 crores, and Rs. 21.79 crores. Thus a total amount of Rs. 162.83 crores in these Reserve Funds has been maintained despite the withdrawal of Rs. 51 crores. About the same position regarding the total balances in the reserve is being visualised for the current year.

Although rehabilitation has had to take precedence, three new major projects were taken up, work on two of which has been completed during the year. One of these is the opening on April 7, 1952 of the Mukerian-Pathankot line, about 27 miles in length and of special strategic importance. This line short-circuits the route between Delhi and Pathankot via Amritsar by 44 miles. The construction of this short line includes two major bridges at Beas and Chakki and the total estimated cost is Rs. 3.77 crores. Another important line which was opened on March 29, 1952 is the Arantangi-Karaikudi link, which provides a short link between these points. Besides eliminating the need for a wide detour for passengers travelling between these two places, it affords a through connection from Madras via Mayavaram to the South, providing, in the event of an emergency, an alternative through Indo-Ceylon route. The link is expected to expedite the movement of rice and paddy from the Mettur Project area to deficit areas and to assist the development of the Kauveri-Mettur Project area. This is one of the schemes approved by the Central Board of Transport and financed from the Development Fund instituted under the provisions of the revised Railway Convention of 1949. The third project, which is expected to be completed and opened in October, 1952, is the Kandla-Deesa link to serve the new port of Kandla now being developed as a major port to offset the loss of Karachi which formerly provided the outlet for the hinterland of Rajasthan and part of the Punjab.

In accordance with the policy of attaining self-sufficiency as regards railway equipment, an effort is being made to develop indigenous resources to make good the present deficiency. Thus in regard to locomotives, the Chittaranjan Locomotive Workshops and the Telco are expected between them to meet the full requirements of locomotives for Indian Railways. As regards wagons, the private builders have at present an installed capacity exceeding the normal requirements of our railways. It is only in regard to coaches that there is a substantial deficiency. A new project to set up a coach-building factory at Perambur, near Madras, has been taken up during the year. The factory has been designed to produce 350 broad-gauge coaches a year. Production is expected to be started within the next three or four years. For such additional requirements the need for which might be felt later, capacity is being developed with Indian manufacturers for the production of metre-gauge steel coaches, while railway workshops will continue to build any special types not suitable for mass production.

Restoration of the lines dismantled during the War has been urged from time to time by the public affected in the areas concerned. The number of such lines within the territory of India is 26, of which two have already been restored. All cases of dismantled lines were considered by the Central Board of Transport and it has been decided that work on the restoration of 11 of these lines should commence during the three years from 1951-52. For five lines, the Central Board of Transport could find no justification; the remaining eight dismantled lines are expected to be considered later. The lines on which work has been in progress and which would be taken up during 1952-53 are: Bijnor-Chandpursia; Unnao-Madhoganj-Balamau; Jogindranagar-Nagrota; Madura-Bodinayakanur; Shoranur-Nilambur; Vasad-Kathana; Bobbili-Salur; Bagalpur-Mandar Hill; Utraitra-Sultanpur-Zafferabad.

Three new lines are also to be taken up for construction during 1952-53, namely, Kastagram-Paniharpur (Eastern), Madhopur-Murliganj (North Eastern), and Quilon-Ernakulam (Southern).

The arrears of rehabilitation are being steadily overtaken. In view of the limited domestic resources as against the leeway to be made, it has been necessary to order a large number of locomotives, coaches and wagons. Of these, 876 locomotives, 1,800 coaches, and 13,000 wagons have already been received.

In the course of another year or so, an additional supply of 500 locomotives, 1,300 coaches, and 16,000 wagons are expected to be delivered. These are not all. The programme of rehabilitation includes also track, station buildings, additional facilities to the traders and the travelling public. A five-year plan of reconstruction was drawn up last year, and the annual allotment has been progressively increased to Rs. 81 crores from Rs. 60 crores in 1948-49.

With capacity limited as to power, coaches and wagons, Railways have had to rely on improved efficiency of working for their ability to move an increasing quantum of traffic. This is specially seen in the movement of freight. There has been a remarkable improvement in the index of gross ton-miles per goods-train hour in 1951-52, as compared with 1949-50 and 1950-51. Similarly, the wagon-miles per wagon-day registered a substantial improvement during 1951-52 on both broad and metre-gauges. The average wagon load during the run also reflects a distinctly better performance during the year. The average daily loadings have also been better than during the two previous years. As regards the utilisation of power, the engine-miles per day per engine on line during 1951-52 have shown an increase on both broad and metre-gauges as compared with the previous two years.

All these are significant indices of the efficiency of working and it is because of the greater efficiency of working that Railways have been able to move a larger volume of traffic.

The finances of Railways have caused less concern in recent years than the facilities and the conveniences Railways have been able to afford to the public. This has been the case particularly with passenger traffic. With their attenuated stock and power, Railways found it impossible to cope with the phenomenal post-war increases in passenger traffic; and there has been serious overcrowding of passenger trains. Special steps, such as increasing the number of train services were taken and as a result it is now possible to give some relief to the congestion in passenger trains. During the year 1951, 186 new passenger trains were introduced and 75 others were extended on the different Railways.

The operation of the Janata Expresses has provided an important additional service exclusively for third class passengers. In addition to the 16 Janata Express trains which were running up to the end of 1950-51, six were introduced during the year.

The outstanding achievement of Railways during the year, however, was averting famine in Bihar. When a grave situation developed in Bihar with less than three months left for the outbreak of the monsoon which would, it was apprehended, isolate the worst affected districts of North Bihar, the Railways were called upon to rush food-grains to facilitate stock-piling before the transport system in rural areas was immobilised by the trains. To add to the problem, an overwhelming proportion of the movement of imported grains from Calcutta to North Bihar involved transshipment at break-of-gauge points, including the ferries, thus imposing a severe limitation on the development of transport capacity. A new transshipment yard near Banaras Cantonment was, therefore, planned and constructed in record time to balance fluctuations in traffic clearances via the ferry at Mokameh Ghat across the Ganges due to the vagaries of the river channel. In addition, works were promptly undertaken to increase the capacity at other transshipment points such as Bhagalpur and Sakrigali Ghats. As against 74,000 tons of food-grains that Bihar received from outside in 1950, in 1951 it received 7.8 lakh tons, of which nearly 5 lakh tons were received during the period April to August. Thus enough stocks of food-grains were transported to the scarcity areas in ample time averting successfully what at one time loomed as a disaster, not dissimilar to the Bengal famine of 1943.

In recognition of the need for improving rapidly the standards of passenger amenities, particularly for third class passengers, Railways have adopted a systematic programme, costing Rs. 3 crores per annum. In addition to the facilities provided for third class passengers, such as a special compartment for long distance passengers, reservation of seats, new type of coaches, advance booking, etc., more facilities have been provided in stations. About 235 waiting rooms and waiting halls were additionally provided or extended, and the provision or extension of such facilities to the number of 285 was under progress during 1951-52. Electric fans were provided in waiting halls in about 85 stations. Sanitary conditions in trains have been improved and the Railway Medical Department has adopted special measures to maintain hygienic conditions in station premises. Supply of drinking water has been extended to wayside stations. During the five months from March 1951, about 190 additional water taps were provided on platforms, while more than 2,000 additional watermen were employed during the summer season. Additional conveniences to the lower class passengers are the supply of electrically-cooled water at certain important stations, bathing facilities, etc.

During the nine months from March 1951, about 4,500 fans were additionally provided in third class compartments and about 1,100 in first class compartments.

Mention must be made of the new type of coaches which have been introduced for the use of lower class passengers. These coaches, manufactured at the Hindustan Aircraft Limited, Bangalore, besides being all metal and therefore, stronger in construction, provide additional facilities, such as liberal depth of seats, knee-room, provision of fans in each bay of seats, hand-basin and mirror. In the course of the year 1951-52 an experimental proved type of coaches will be placed in service which will have a larger floor area, more comfortable seats, better light fittings, etc.

and modern fittings. It is not possible to make good the omissions of the past decades within a short period, but for the first time in the history of our Railways, a systematic attempt is being made on a programme basis to raise the standard of third class travel to the standards obtaining in foreign countries.

As the largest employer of labour in the country the policy of Indian Railways towards their employees has a special significance. The Government are committed to a policy of progressively improving the standards and conditions of work of their staff. There has been a significant reorientation in policy in the matter of labour relations. An increase of dearness allowance was granted with effect from June 1, 1951, to supplement the previous ad hoc grant, in view of the price increases. Government has accepted the principle of providing quarters for all essential operating staff, who form over 60 per cent. of the total railway employees. In the financial year 1951-52 Rs. 3.5 crores were allotted for the provision of quarters. The provision for 1952-53 has been increased to Rs. 3.7 crores. From 1947 to 1951, about 22,500 quarters were built by various Railways. For medical, educational and welfare items about Rs. 5 crores more have been allotted for expenditure during 1952-53.

The relations between labour and management on Indian Railways have remained cordial during 1951. Towards the end of the year, an important step was taken for further improving the relations with labour by the decision of the Railway Board to set up a permanent negotiating machinery for dealing with disputes between Railway Labour and Railway Administrations. The machinery is to operate in three tiers. The first is at the Railway level, recognised Unions having access to District or Divisional Officers and subsequently to officers at the Headquarters, including the General Manager. At the next tier, differences not settled at Railway level will be taken up by the respective Federations and the Railway Board. In regard to matters of sufficient importance in which agreement is not reached between the Federations and the Railway Board, a reference will be made to a Tribunal composed of Labour Representatives and Railway Administrations under a neutral Chairman. One other decision of considerable importance taken by the Railway Board was the relaxation of the provisions of the Disciplinary Rules of Railway servants in certain directions, and the provision of certain facilities for the defence of individual cases.

Roads, Road Transport, etc.

The two important recommendations made by the Nagpur Conference of Chief Engineers that met in 1943 are that roads should be classified according to their function and that the Centre should take over from the State Governments the entire liability for the maintenance and the development of the system of roads which are declared to be National Highways.

The total mileage of the roads so far selected for the purpose of National Highways is about 13,400. The recurring cost of maintenance of this National Highways System all over India exceeds Rs. 3.5 crores at present. An expenditure target of Rs. 23 crores has been fixed for capital works for development of the National Highways System during the five-year period ending 1955-56.

On the commencement of the National Highways System in 1947-48, there were approximately 1,600 miles of missing road links and 120 missing major bridges in the Highways. Out of these, 160 miles of missing road links and 17 missing major bridges have been completed and 320 miles of links and 18 major bridges are now under construction. During the remaining four years of the first Five-Year Plan it is expected that the construction of an additional 450 miles of missing road links and 43 major bridges will be taken in hand. In accordance with the spirit of the Nagpur Plan the Centre advises all the States on the plans and programmes for the development of roads other than National Highways.

Special encouragement for the development of village roads on a cooperative basis is now being given by earmarking between Rs. 15 lakhs and Rs. 20 lakhs annually from the Central Road Fund Reserve. The Central Roads Organisation is also engaged, in collaboration with the Indian Roads Congress, in advising the various Road Research Stations covering the various aspects of road construction and in formulation and dissemination of standards and designs.

The State Governments went ahead with their schemes of building new roads, improving the existing ones and reorganising and nationalising their transport system.

In Ajmer till the end of the financial year 1951-52 the main traffic roads were maintained by the Central P.W.D., but now it has become a State subject and provision has been made for the construction and maintenance of the roads in the State budget for 1951-52. A large number of feeder fair-weather roads constructed during the famine of 1939-40 were repaired and metalled during the year.

In Bihar, the scheme for the nationalisation of certain passenger transport services, originating from Patna for the first instance, has been sanctioned by the State Government. A committee has been formed for implementing the scheme, pending formation of a corporation under the Road Transport Corporation Act, 1950. Preliminaries for launching the scheme are now in progress. The State Government was, during the year, running bus service in Seraikella and the undertaking has proved profitable.

But permits were granted on essential routes in the newly developed and congested areas and in belts like Kosifree area where transport facilities are meagre. The restriction on the issue of fresh bus permits was also withdrawn.

The working of the mobile squads had, on the whole, been satisfactory. Measures were also taken, through police, to tighten control over transport vehicles.

In Bombay, since the Government introduced nationalisation of State Transport in 1948 and the State-sponsored State Transport Organisation was later turned into a Statutory Corporation, it has expanded phenomenally. This organisation today possesses 1,535 vehicles, operates 870 routes and serves over 175,000 passengers daily. It may be of interest to know that the State Transport will receive 1,500 Canadian-manufactured vehicles under the Colombo Plan.

During the year, a programme for the development of 260 roads and bridges was prepared by the Government and this programme was estimated to cost Rs. 10 crores. Construction was started at 172 works out of which 46 were completed. Urgent road works costing Rs. 3,710,098 were taken up in the merged areas.

With a view to providing better travelling facilities and adequate transport, which were previously lacking, the Himachal Pradesh Government has nationalised transport. The entire Pradesh has been divided into three regions and one sub-region. The Transport Department of the State has at present a fleet of 147 vehicles and 3 motor cycles. A well-equipped workshop has been set up at the headquarters of each region. The transport services are at present operating roads totalling about 800 miles.

In Hyderabad the roadways are very meagre as compared to the rest of India. The present Five-Year Plan has drawn up a scheme for the construction of 152 miles of new roads estimated to cost Rs. 128.57 lakhs.

In Madhya Bharat there are about 4,500 miles of roads, and the State Government spends annually about Rs. 35 lakhs on their maintenance. The motor service, a portion of which is run by the Madhya Bharat Roadways, traverses 35 per cent. of the existing routes of the State. Almost all important places are covered by regular motor bus service. It may be of special interest to know that this service operates, both ways daily, the two longest passenger bus service in India, viz., Gwalior-Indore (308 miles) and Gwalior-Ujjain (293 miles).

The number of buses and the income have increased during the past few years. As a preliminary step towards the nationalisation of motor transport, a Transport Nationalisation Committee was set up and its report is, at the time of writing, under the consideration of the Government.

The Punjab Government has decided to nationalise transport progressively. At present the Transport Department is operating 195 buses from Jullundur, Ambala and Amritsar. The total outlay till the end of financial year 1951-52 was Rs. 3,800,000 and the total net profit was calculated at about Rs. 1.5

millions. Operation of State buses has been extended to 10 new routes with effect from the 1st August 1952 with a view to extending more transport facilities to the remotest parts of the State. The Government has decided to open new and closed routes and extend road transport facilities to almost all motorable roads. To facilitate inter-State traffic, agreements on traffic have been made with the adjoining States of Himachal Pradesh, PEPSU and Delhi. It is expected that such agreements will be finalised in the case of U.P., Rājasthan and Jammu and Kashmir during 1952-53.

In Travancore-Cochin, the State Government has introduced a programme by which all the main roads will be given a special surfacing such as concrete, tar-crete or cement grouting depending on the extent of traffic. So far about 75 miles have been specially surfaced. In the sphere of bridging important rivers, while during the 12 years before 1948 only one major bridge was constructed, since then four major bridges have been started of which one was completed in 1951 and the others are now nearing completion.

In Travancore nationalisation of transport started in 1938. The popular Government took up nationalisation with great vigour and this has resulted in increase in the number of buses and frequency of trips. Transport workshops on modern lines have been established for the building of bus bodies, including double-deckers, and for attending to all sorts of repairs.

In Uttar Pradesh the total capital so far invested in roadways amounts to Rs. 3.25 crores and the Government Roadways owns over 1,300 buses, about 500 trucks and 50 taxis; it operates on more than 460 miles of metalled roads and carries over 242 routes about 4 crores of passengers annually. The City Bus Services which are running in the larger cities of the State have also become very popular. The Roadways now possesses a number of well-equipped workshops and a large central workshop at Kanpur. Special amenities like time-tables, waiting sheds and refreshment stalls are now provided for the passengers. During the year a large number of metalled roads and some miles of cement concrete tracks have been constructed.

The Vindhya Pradesh Government has a heavy programme for the financial year 1952-53 to provide more transport facilities, costing about Rs. 52 lakhs. In the Five-Year Plan it has been proposed to build 77 bridges and to convert 148 miles of fair-weather roads into metalled roads and to construct about 200 miles of fair-weather roads.

In West Bengal the State Transport Service operated during the year on a total mileage of 5,337,185 and carried 59,046,222 passengers. The service now consists of 199 single-decker and 37 double-decker buses. The construction of the Central workshop and garage at Belghūrria and the garage at the Lakes was completed. The workshop is equipped with the latest machinery and is, so far as we know, the largest and most modern in the country.

Ports, Shipping, Lighthouses, Inland Waterways, etc.

During the year much progress was made towards the development and administration of ports in this country. The foundation-stone of the harbour at Kandla was laid by the Prime Minister on June 10, 1952. On this major port Rs. 87.16 lakhs were spent during the financial year 1950-51 and a provision of Rs. 1.75 crores has been made for the financial year 1951-52. The construction of the main harbour is expected to start within a few months and the works comprise 25 items, including a main wharf, four berths, three transit sheds, four double-storeyed ware-houses, a tidal basin for lighters and country-craft, a passenger jetty, an oil jetty, a railway track between the wharf and the transit sheds, a floating dry-dock berth and a heavy lift-berth in the bund.

In July 1952, the Port Trusts and Ports (Amendment) Act was passed. This Act aims at achieving uniformity in port administration with a view to bringing about a greater measure of Central control and supervision in matters of policy and to effecting a considerable degree of decentralisation of authority in matters of day-to-day administration in the major ports of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras.

On the recommendations of the National Harbour Board, which in November, 1951 considered the question of financing the development projects of the major ports of Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Cochin and Visakhapatnam, details of the programme were obtained from each major port. The total estimated expenditure on the projects (excluding Visakhapatnam port) during 1952-57, according to the proposals received, was approximately Rs. 53.5 crores. The port authorities scrutinized these projects in May, 1952 and revised the programme bringing down the expenditure to Rs. 26 crores. Rapid survey of important minor ports was carried out during the year.

A word about the working of the major ports of the country. While the working of Bombay and Madras ports in 1950-51 resulted in surplus and is expected to yield surplus during the year 1951-52, the working of Calcutta port showed a deficit in the former year and is expected to show a deficit during the latter. During the year under report the Calcutta Port Commissioners have undertaken capital expenditure of a number of important works including the installation of a mechanical-cum-leading plant, construction of quarters at Shalimar for class four servants and the provision of an additional warehouse accommodation for tea. The Bombay port incurred capital expenditure in 1951 on some important works including the reconstruction of transit sheds and warehouses, construction of quarters for the shore and tug cruise and also for the non-scheduled staff, khalasis, etc. The Port Trust continued to absorb displaced employees of the Karachi Port Trust, the total number of such persons up to the end of November 1951 being 1,697. During the year the Madras Port Trust undertook capital expenditure on some important works including the construction of new warehouses, a new sand pumping equipment to reduce dredging, the extension of the sand screed by 300 feet and purchase of one steel Hopper barge of 1000-ton capacity.

Shipping* is in the private sector of our economy. There are at present 24 Indian Shipping Companies owning 108 ships in all with a gross registered tonnage of 411,250. This does not take into account Indian-owned vessels of less than 150 gross registered tonnage and the six vessels of the Mogul Line, a British Shipping Company presenting a total tonnage of 26,550, which are registered in India.

The Reconstruction Policy Sub-Committee recommended in 1947 that India should have a fleet of 2 million G.R.T. of shipping within 7 years and that Indian shipping should secure the following targets in the various trades during the same period :

- (1) 100 per cent. of the purely coastal trade of India ;
 - (2) 75 per cent. of India's trade with Burma and Ceylon and with geographically-adjacent countries ;
 - (3) 50 per cent. of India's distant trade ;
- and (4) 30 per cent. of the trade formerly carried in Axis vessels in the Orient.

The Government of India decided in 1947 to assist the Indian Shipping Companies in achieving these targets. Steps were taken to reserve the coastal trade of India for Indian ships only and a system of statutory licensing was introduced under the Control of Shipping Act, 1947, to give effect to this policy of coastal reservations. Some other principal steps taken by the Government to encourage the development of Indian shipping are detailed below :

- (1) The establishment of an Eastern Shipping Corporation on the State-cum-private ownership basis with an authorised capital of Rs. 10 crores, 74 per cent. of which will be contributed by the Government and the remaining by the Scindia Co. ;
 - (2) Allotment of Government-owned or controlled cargoes to shipping companies engaged in overseas trades ;
 - (3) Negotiations with the British shipping interests which have yielded additional opportunities for Indian shipping in the near trades, in the India-Singapore trade and in the India-UK-Continental trades ;
 - (4) The sale of Visakhapatnam-built ships to Indian shipping companies on instalment basis ;
- and (5) Grant of loans to the shipping companies for the purchase of tonnage under the Planning Commission's scheme. A provision of Rs. 3 crores has been made in the budget for the year 1952-53 for this purpose.

* In the previous issues of the series, "Shipping and Lighthouses" was not dealt with, and therefore, here an effort is made to cover the period since Independence

Under the scheme drawn up by the Planning Commission it is expected that at the end of the five-year period coastal shipping will attain the figure of 300,000 G.R.T. which is considered to be all that is needed for catering to the entire needs of the coastal trade of India. As regards tonnage for overseas trades it is proposed under the Planning Commission's scheme to make an addition of about 110,000 G.R.T. to the existing tonnage of about 173,000 G.R.T. When the Five-Year Plan has been fully implemented by the end of 1955-56 the total Indian-owned tonnage, it is expected, will be about 6 lakh gross tons. This will enable Indian shipping companies to increase their share in some of the important overseas trades, such as the India-UK-Continental, the India-U.S.A. and the India-Australia runs, and to participate in some more trades such as the India-East Africa run in which they have not yet entered.

Simultaneously with the development of shipping the Government has taken steps to provide increased training facilities for officers of the merchant marine and arrangements have also been made for the training of ratings. The training ship "Dufferin" which previously trained cadets both for the executive and for the engineering line, is now reserved for cadets on the executive sides and a separate Directorate of Marine Engineering Training has been started to take care of cadets for the engineering side. In addition, a Nautical and Engineering College has been started to provide advance course of training to Mercantile Merchant Officers to enable them to qualify for a higher examination. For the training of ratings the Government has established two ships, the "Bhadra" and the "Mekhala" the former at the port of Calcutta and the latter at the port of Visakhapatnam. These two training institutes are turning out a thousand seamen every year.

Lighthouses and Light ships is a Central subject and is administered by the Central Lighthouses Department which is under the charge of an Engineer-in-Chief and is assisted by an Advisory Committee set up under the Indian Lighthouses Act, 1927. The Lighthouses Department is self-supporting and it derives its entire revenue from light dues which are recovered under the authority of the Lighthouses Act from ships visiting the country's ports. For the purpose of administration the lighthouses are divided into two broad categories—the "General" lights and the "Local" lights. General lights are those which are of use to shipping generally and are under the responsibility of the Central Lighthouses Department. The Local lights, on the other hand, are of benefit to the ships entering or leaving the port and are under the responsibility of State Governments or the port authorities concerned.

With the contemplated development of Indian Shipping it has become necessary to provide an adequate lighthouse service. With this end in view the Government has decided to reorganise the Central Lighthouses Department. This department has drawn up an ambitious development programme for the next five years costing Rs. 200 lakhs. It is hoped that this will be met partly from its own reserves which have been accumulated from the savings from its revenues from light dues and partly from a loan which it proposes to take from the Government.

The Centre is, according to the Constitution, responsible for shipping and navigation on National Waterways but so far Parliament has not declared any inland waterway as National Waterway and, therefore, the State Governments have, at present, full responsibility for all waterways in the country. In the absence of a single authority to co-ordinate activities in these waterways there has been some deterioration on the more important rivers. The Central Government, therefore, recently set up, with the concurrence of the Governments of West Bengal, U.P., Bihar and Assam, the Ganga-Brahmaputra Water Transport Board to co-ordinate the activities of the State Governments in regard to navigation on the Ganga-Brahmaputra system of rivers. The Centre made a contribution of Rs. 2 lakhs to this Board during 1951-52 and will provide a similar amount during 1952-53. The State Governments are to make annual grants of Rs. 1 lakh each to the Board. The Government of India deputed three experts to participate, along with other experts drawn from the ECAFE region, in a study tour of Europe and North America. This team returned to India after studying the technological advances made in the Western countries and has submitted an interim report.

Most of the rivers of the Ganga region which were navigable for inland crafts a century ago, are no longer navigable as a result of the development of irrigation canal and lack of demand for navigation consequent on railway development. Investigations and surveys are being carried out with a view to examining the possibility of reviving navigation in this region. It is considered that the problem could be met to some extent by using shallow draft tugs for towing barges on the shallow stretches of waterways. As a first step, it has been proposed to run a pilot administration project with shallow draft tugs. The assistance of the Technical Assistance Administration has been sought in this connection and it is hoped that the services of an expert will be available from October, 1952.

In this chapter mention must be made of tourism in this country. The objective is to organise publicity in foreign countries and to ensure that visitors from abroad are provided with all the necessary facilities during their sojourn in this country. The year under review witnessed the expansion of the Tourist Organisation and its activities in several directions. A chain of Regional Tourist Offices has been established in Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay and Madras. Besides, various State Governments have appointed Honorary Regional Tourist Officers to maintain liaison with the Central Tourist Organisation. A number of facilities such as accommodation, catering, transport, guide services, etc., have been improved in cooperation with trade interests concerned. A tourist introduction card is also issued to all overseas tourists so that they can secure the assistance of Government officials in obtaining essential facilities like quick customs clearance, railway reservation, residential accommodation, etc. Steps have also been taken to bring out a variety of tourist publicity material. During 1951, about 20,000 tourists visited this country.

Civil Aviation

During the year Civil Aviation made steady progress. Five new aerodromes and five communication stations were opened in the country. Bilateral Air Transport Agreements were concluded with the Netherlands and the U.K. An air transport service was established between India and Afghanistan.

During 1951, nine air transport companies were operating the scheduled air transport services and nine others operated non-scheduled services. In spite of the restricted operations from the middle of July to the end of October, 1951 due to shortage of aviation spirit, during the year March 1951–March 1952, scheduled services showed, on the whole, a slight increase.

International Indian air transport services continued their services during the year as before. The frequency of the Indo-U.K. service was restored to four a week. To help Air India International acquire two aircraft of the latest type (super constellation type 1049 C) and enable it to compete successfully with the foreign international airlines, the Government decided to give the Company a loan of Rs. 53 lakhs for the year 1952 and another loan of Rs. 25 lakhs in the next year.

On 15th August 1951, the Himalayan Aviation Ltd. commenced operation of a service between India and Afghanistan avoiding Pakistan territory altogether, as a sequel to Pakistan's refusal to allow the operation of the service along the direct route. Pakistan subsequently agreed to a non-traffic halt at Karachi and the service is now operating along the route Ahmedabad-Karachi-Saidhan-Kandhar-Kabul.

In December 1951, Airways (India) started an "airist" class scheduled air service between Delhi and Assam on the Delhi-Agra-Kanpur-Patna-Bagdogra-Gauhati route, thereby providing a direct link between Northern India and Assam. This service gives cheaper air travel by eliminating luxuries. On October 1, 1951, a revised scheme was introduced for appointment of subsidy to those air transport companies which operate scheduled air transport service under efficient economic management.

During the financial year 1951–52, five new aeronautical stations were established at Ranchi, Imphal, Muzaffarpur, Kotah and Khatmandu, and the total number is now 57. Also, besides strengthening the existing channels of communications a few new ones were opened.

Overseas Communications Service

At present the Overseas Communications Service operates Wireless telegraph service, radio telegraph service, photo telegram service and submarine cable telegraph service between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and New Delhi on the one side and the important cities of the world on the other. During the financial year 1951-52, radio telephone service with Egypt was opened (2nd July 1951), direct wireless telegraph service with Thailand and Russia were opened (15th March and 18th June 1951, respectively) and the second direct wireless telegraph circuit between Bombay and New York, which was suspended in 1948, was resumed (2nd July 1951).

Since Independence, India has received proposals from a large number of countries for the establishment of direct wireless circuit but due to lack of equipment and efficiency it has not been found possible to accept the proposals. A plan for the development of India's external tele-communications services has been approved at an estimated cost of Rs. 1 crore to be spread over a period of five years. This five-year plan contemplates the opening of a wireless tele-communication station at Calcutta and the expansion of the existing stations at Delhi, Bombay and Madras.

Posts and Telegraphs, etc.

First and foremost mention must be made of the very creditable manner in which the Department of Posts and Telegraphs had acquitted itself during the General Elections. Called upon to meet the needs of the biggest elections so far held in the world, this department, with careful planning, executed its work to a degree of efficiency that brought it messages of appreciation from all over the country and from all sections of the public. New post offices were opened and old ones were converted into combined posts and telegraph offices. During the election period regular mail service was extended to all villages and arrangements were made to provide daily mail service to all villages where polling stations were established, and a mail service of at least once a week to all other villages during the fortnight preceding the polling date. Due to this procedure daily mail facilities were extended to over 3,000 villages and weekly mail facilities to over 25,000 villages. In Himachal Pradesh and Bihar mobile postal unit was attached to the polling party moving from place to place.

Special steps were taken to ensure the delivery of election literature posted by candidates and parties within a period of two days in urban areas and seven days in rural areas. Facilities for the posting and delivery of mails, including registered articles, on all days of the week, not excluding Sundays and public office holidays, were provided to the Election Commission. Similar facilities, except that of delivery of mails on Sundays, were extended to the Regional Election Commissioners and the Chief Electoral Officers of the States. Candidates and political parties contesting the elections were allowed to post and also collect their registered mail at the window of the post office on public office holidays, on which days no booking or delivery of registered articles is normally effected.

The postal department was also called upon to ensure the safe transmission of postal ballot papers from Defence Services and other areas.

engaged on polling duties. On these postal ballot papers the use of Service postage stamps was authorised to obviate the voter having to pay the postage charges himself. Special instructions were issued to all post offices to ensure the careful and expeditious handling of election correspondence at all stages particularly of postal ballot papers. Many more special facilities were provided by the Posts and Telegraphs Department during the election to election authorities, parties and candidates and the public in general.

India has made a steady progress in extending the telephone service to the different parts of the country and is nearing self-sufficiency in the matter of telephone equipment. During 1951, 22 new telephone exchanges were installed and telephone exchanges at 45 stations were rehabilitated and expanded. Altogether the additions during the year were 11,883 exchange communications and 6,476 extensions. Two hundred and thirty-eight public call offices and 88 trunk public call offices were opened during the year.

In 1951, 33 single channel, 18 three-channel and one twelve-channel carriers were installed in the country. The "Own Your Telephone" scheme which has been working in about a dozen important cities in the country was extended during the year to Indore, Dhubri and Bangalore. Two exchanges were opened, and the messages rate system of charging was extended to Nagpur and Simla.

In October 1951, the radio telephone service between India and the U.K. was extended to Ireland and in July 1951, a direct radio telephone service was opened between India and Egypt.

All India Radio

Despite the considerable financial stringency exercised by the All-India Radio during the year, AIR output continued to grow, and swelled in 1951 to 73,072 hours as against 64,529 hours in 1950. Of this, classical music claimed 16,610 hours and spoken words and items including news 24,726 hours. Broadcasts are now made in 17 languages including Sanskrit and 12 dialects in the Home Service and 13 languages, including two dialects of Chinese in External Services.

All-India Radio played an important part in the General Elections by (a) broadcasting during the pre-election period a large number of talks planned to educate the electorate and (b) announcing, once party nominations had been made and the elections had commenced, reports of the list of candidates and the results of the elections. Both the talks and the news announcements were also announced in full by each station for its area. As a matter of policy, talks on behalf of political parties or those which could be construed as campaigning for election, were not permitted, and during this period AIR scrupulously maintained its policy of complete neutrality and objectivity.

In connection with the General Elections, the News Services had to undertake the task of giving the listener a factual, objective and impartial picture of the progress of the elections, presentation of election issues as set-out in party manifestoes and speeches of party leaders, the polls and the results as declared from day-to-day. The main results of the elections, including day-to-day figures of the party position in various legislatures, were covered. In addition to this, all AIR stations announced results and voting figures of constituencies in their respective areas every evening on the results being released officially.

• During the year educational broadcasts were extended to Travancore-Cochin. In November, 1951, regular service to Europe was inaugurated. It will not be out of place if mention is made here that the External Services division "addressed" overseas audiences for about 21 hours a day.

The Five-Year Plan that was recently approved by the Planning Advisory Committee of Parliament is expected to cost about Rs. 352 lakhs with recurring expenditure of Rs. 93.99 crores per year.

Spread over a period of five years 1951, 1952-55, 1956 the plan provides for the setting up of 1 KW pilot transmitters at Bangalore, Hyderabad, Poona, Gwalior, Jodhpur, Imphal, Rajkot and Chandigarh; the installation of 50 KW Medium-wave transmitters at Bombay, Ahmedabad, Bangalore, Calcutta, Jullundur and Delhi; the construction of studio buildings at Calcutta and Madras; the extension of studio facilities at New Delhi and the provision of additional technical facilities at Mysore, Trivandrum, Hyderabad and Aurangabad, where broadcasting stations have been taken over by the Union Government from the State Governments under the financial integration scheme. Suitable provision has also been made for the setting up of 20/10 KW transmitters at Nagpur, Gauhati, Cuttack, Vijayawada and Allahabad, and the installation of high power short-wave transmitters for the External Services. Jaipur and Indore are to be provided with 20/10 KW transmitters and pilot type studios.

CHAPTER IX

INDUSTRIES AND DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

During the year an industrial plan was formulated for India and the plan visualises ordered industrial developments in specific directions during the next five years. This plan, prepared by the Planning Commission, involves a total outlay of Rs. 1,793 crores on developments initiated in the public sector—Rs. 1,493 crores to be spent on restoration of more or less the pre-war availability of essential consumer goods by the end of 1955–56, taking into account the expected increase in population over the period ; and Rs. 300 crores to be spent on ensuring somewhat higher rate of development during the next five years. The first part of the plan would be implemented at all costs and the second if sufficient external assistance becomes available.

In the first part of the plan the share of industries is Rs. 101 crores distributed as follows : large-scale industries Rs. 79.5 crores ; cottage industries—Rs. 15.8 crores ; scientific and industrial research—Rs. 4.6 crores and mineral developments Rs. 1.1 crores. Indian industries have been grouped into the following three categories and the order of importance is (i) Defence Industries ; (ii) Producer Goods Industries ; and (iii) Consumer Goods Industries. Defence industries fall within the purview of the public sector ; the producer goods and the consumer goods industries will mainly be controlled by the private sector.

Taking into account the objectives of the industrial planning and keeping in view the needs of the country, the Planning Commission has fixed the order of priority for the development of the industries as under : (a) Full utilisation of existing capacity in producer goods industries like jute, and consumer goods industries like cotton textiles, sugar and soap ; (b) Expansion of production capacity of producer goods industries like steel, cement, fertilisers, heavy chemicals, machine tools, etc. ; and (c) Completion of industrial units on which a part of the capital expenditure has been incurred.

The Commission has drawn out a big programme for the private sector of industries, in consultation with the representatives of various industries, and the increase in the output of some of the improved intermediate products will be of the following order : steel—300,000 tons, sulphuric acid—78,000 tons, soda ash—34,000 tons, caustic soda—18,000 tons, and cement 2,000,000 tons. The production of diesel engines will be higher by 41,000 and that of pumps by 47,000. In consumer goods industries the increase in output will be : mill-made cloth—900,000,000 yards, sugar—400,000 tons, footwear—10,000,000 pairs, soap—168,000 tons, salt—450,000 tons, paper and paper board 56,000 tons. This increased flow of goods will reduce the pressure of demand in many lines and, in certain cases, make it possible to increase the volume of exports.

Industries in the private sector will have to accept not only the objectives of social and economic policy but also its own obligation towards the worker, the investor and the consumer. Since the bulk of public resources under the plan is to be devoted to the development of agriculture, irrigation and power, cottage industries, and social services, it follows that for the development of industries, resources must, to a large extent, come from the private sector. The Industries (Development and Regulations) Act, which emphasises the need for associating capital with labour for the development of industry was passed in October 1951.

In view of the prevailing scarcity of capital the need for relieving the middle class unemployment and the desirability of decentralisation of industry, the Planning Commission has stressed the importance of development of small-scale industries. The Commission has suggested a number of measures for the development of small-scale industries and for removing the difficulties of small-scale industries in respect of raw materials, finance, machinery and equipment, research and marketing of products. The small-scale industries can also help in the manufacture of components and accessories in the case of textiles, automobile and bicycle industries. The first part of the Five-Year Plan provides for a total expenditure of Rs. 16 crores on cottage and small-scale industries.

The Commission has assigned cottage industries a central place in the programme of rural development. The cottage industries which would offer scope for organising intensive development programmes are: Khadi, manufacture of palm gur and gur, the village oil industry, production of neem oil, utilisation of dead cattle, manufacture of hand-made paper, manufacture of woollen blankets, and, in certain areas, hand pounding of rice and manufacture of matches. For the organisation of cottage industries, the Commission relies mainly on industrial cooperation and non-official organisations engaged in constructive work in the field of cottage industries. If rural cottage industries are to be developed, the Commission says that it is necessary to deal effectively with the deficiencies from which they suffer and improve them in respect of: (1) organisation, (2) preferential local demand, (3) reasonable efficient methods of cottage or small-scale production, (4) raw materials, and (5) finance.

The general improvement to the industrial output of the country was, to a large extent, the result of the smooth industrial relations that prevailed and the judicious policy of the Government regarding exports and imports. During the year industrial relations steadily improved except in one sector, viz., banks.

During the year the export and import policy was revised by the Government to meet the situation that arose due to heavy deficit in food-grains, shortage and rising prices of essential raw materials and strong and sustained demand for improved exportable commodities from India. While encouragement was given to the export of commodities like jute manufactures, tea, mica, shellac, etc., restrictions were imposed on the export of commodities like cotton textiles, ground-nut, raw cotton, etc., which were required for internal consumption. The import policy was liberalised to secure the highest possible internal production and an adequate supply of essential commodities needed by the people. The licensing procedure was simplified in respect of imports and exports and this had enabled the importers and the exporters to maintain the volume of trade at a very high level.

As a result of the several steps taken to stimulate progress, industrial development has had an impressive record to its credit during the year. The index number of industrial production was 117 for 1951 as against 109 for 1948, 106 for 1949 and 105 for 1950. Thus, the downward trend for the last three years has been definitely arrested and, what is more important, the highest level of industrial production in the post-war period has been reached during 1951. The level would have been much higher but for difficulties connected with the procurement of essential industrial raw materials, most of which are imported.

The cotton mill industry advanced its production of cloth from 3,665 million yards to 4,080 million yards or by 11 per cent. This does not include handloom production, which is estimated at 800 million yards. Production of yarn amounted to 1,304 million lbs. as against 1,174 million lbs. in the previous year. This too represents an improvement of 11 per cent. During the year 422,703 spindles were installed.

While the production level of jute manufactures was low in the earlier months of 1951, it improved later to such an extent as to encourage the industry to restore the working hours to 48 per week. Since 31st March 1952, however, the working hours have been reduced to 42½ hours a week as a temporary measure. The aggregate production in 1951 was 873,000 tons as against 835,000 tons in the previous year.

Production of steel in 1951 was the highest since 1947 and amounted to 1,040,000. The three major steel producers in the country have undertaken schemes to expand their production. These schemes are expected to materialise in 3 to 7 years and will result in an additional production of over 450,000 tons of steel per annum. The Tatas have a programme for expansion and modernisation of their steel works which will raise their annual production of finished steel from 750,000 tons to 931,000 tons by the end of 1957. The expansion scheme of SCOB will raise their annual production of finished steel from 200,000 tons to 400,000 tons and is expected to be completed by 1954. The expansion programme of the Mysore Iron and Steel Works is expected to step up their annual production from 40,000 tons to 100,000 tons.

There was spectacular expansion in the output of cement, which improved from 2.6 million tons to 3.2 million tons, which is an improvement of 23 per cent. Proposals have been sanctioned which will step up production in the next three years by an additional 1.3 million tons per annum. There was a similar expansion in the output of paper and paper board, which increased from 109,000 tons to 131,000 tons, or by 20 per cent. The capacity of the industry is expected to increase to 143,000 tons by the end of 1952.

During the year 1951 there was improvement in the production of most chemicals. The only exception was sulphuric acid. There was an improvement of 30 per cent. in the case of caustic soda and 60 per cent. in the case of bichromates. There was improvement in the production of soda ash, liquid chlorine and bleaching powder. Now that the Sindri Factories have gone into production, ammonium sulphate is expected to show considerable improvement in the next year. Production of paints and matches went up by 21 per cent. and 10 per cent., respectively.

A number of engineering industries showed better, and in some cases striking, results during 1951. Production of diesel engines advanced from 4,596 to 6,850. About 7,000 more power-driven pumps were produced than in the previous year, which represents an improvement of 24 per cent. Steel belt lacing advanced from 96,994 boxes to 133,291 boxes. The ball-bearing industry made a steady advance. The manufacture of piston ring made a spectacular advance from 2.5 lakhs to 14.4 lakhs. Among non-ferrous metal industries, the extraction of virgin metals improved in respect of aluminium, copper and lead, while in respect of semi-manufactures aluminium and zinc advanced, brass and copper receiving a set-back owing to reduced imports of the metals. Manufacture of wires (non-electrical) and pipes advanced, except in the case of lead pipes, while that of rods was lower. The manufacture of conduit pipes improved from 3 million rft. to 4 million rft. The value of machine tools manufactured improved from Rs. 29 lakhs to Rs. 41 lakhs. Production of small tools advanced from 450,000 to 1,018,000. More looms and ring frames were produced than in the previous year. There were various degrees of improvement in production in respect of belting, abrasives, mathematical instruments, shafting and welding electrodes.

The electrical group of industries advanced almost all along the line. Production of dry cells improved by about 4 million cells. Storage batteries improved from 187,000 to 203,000, while the manufacture of electric motors expanded from 81,831 H.P. to 141,900 H.P. Power and distribution transformers advanced from 171,000 KVA to 194,000 KVA. About a million more lamps were manufactured. Electric fans improved from 200,000 to 223,000. About 75,000 radio receivers were produced as against 45,000 in the previous year. Among cables and wires, rubber insulated cables and flexibles made an impressive advance from 35 million yards to 42 million yards. Domestic refrigerators and electrical house service Watt-Hour meters were produced for the first time in the country in 1951.

More automobiles were assembled, the number being 22,252 as against 14,602 in the previous year. With increase in the assembling of automobiles, the manufacture of automobile tyres and tubes also increased. The former improved from 6.4 lakhs to 8.5 lakhs and the latter from 7.0 lakhs to 8.2 lakhs. Manufacture of cycle tyres and tubes also increased.

Rubber footwear, leather tanning, vegetable tanning and footwear production showed improvement during the year.

Very impressive improvements were recorded in various other articles. The percentage of improvement in soap was 10, paints 22, matches 10, sheet glass 16, enamelware 50, ceramic 18, leather cloth 150, plywood for tea chests 44, sewing machine 39, hurricane lanterns 40, incandescent lamps 70 and razor blades 140.

Let us now consider salt. For the first time in 100 years India achieved self-sufficiency in salt in 1951. During previous years India's policy was to import salt from foreign countries, but export salt produced in India to countries like Japan for earning hard currency. During the year 1951 though India had increased her export quantity she had not to import any salt from abroad. The production in 1951 was 7.47 lakh maunds and export was 4.7 lakh maunds. A salt research station has already been established at Wadala and investigations are conducted to improve the quality and reduce the cost of production.

Improvement in coal production also must be recorded here. In 1951 it reached the record figure of 34 million tons as against 32 million in 1942. There was an increase in coal exports. During 1951 India exported 9.88 lakh tons to Pakistan and 1.5 million to other destinations.

*Development Projects

India's most urgent problems are food production and economic development. After our experience with imports and loans of food-grains and other essential commodities we are driven to the conclusion that the real and lasting solution of these problems lies in pushing ahead with our own plans, and the main hope in this regard are India's river valley projects. That this is so is realised is evidenced by the Planning Commission's assigning the highest priority to these projects.

* Community Projects are generally dealt with in the Chapter on "The Five-Year Plan", and work in this connection in a few States is reviewed in the Chapter on "Self-Government and Rural Development".

to the utilisation of the country's water resources for irrigation and power projects in the first Five-Year Plan. Nearly a third of the total budget of Rs. 1,500 crores for this plan has been earmarked for the river valley projects, and some of these projects are among the world's largest.

A rough survey of the possibilities of utilisation of our water wealth has revealed that the irrigated area can be doubled within the next two decades. Hundreds of miles of water-ways can be made navigable and power to the extent of about 40 million KW generated. Additional food production would not only cover the present deficit but also provide, to some extent, for the future growth of the country's population.

The first Five-Year Plan provides for 102 projects. These projects are expected to extend irrigation to 8.84 million acres and provide one million KW of additional hydel power within the five years at a cost of Rs. 511.78 crores. The ultimate benefits, when these projects are completed, will be the extension of irrigation to 16.6 million acres and an additional power of 1.96 million KW at a total cost of Rs. 782.48 crores.

It is impossible to narrate here, in detail, the working of the various projects in this country that are now at different stages of construction. Let us, however, consider how far two or three of the largest dams have progressed towards completion and how far the country will benefit when they are completed.

The important features of the Bhakra-Nangal-Dam Project are : construction of a main storage dam 680 ft. high—world's highest straight gravity dam—on river Sutlej near Bhakra ; a diversion dam at Nangal ; a hydel canal with two power houses and a network of canals to irrigate over 3.4 million acres.

The Nangal Dam has already been constructed. It is designed to divert the requisite supplies from the Sutlej to the Nangal Hydel Canal and to provide a balancing storage to firm up variations in supply due to load fluctuations at the Bhakra Power Plant. Construction of the hydel canal from Nangal to Rupar has made considerable progress. A total of 144,000 KW of power will be generated at this canal. The first power station is under construction and is expected to be completed by March, 1954. Many important areas including Delhi will be supplied with power from this project.

Work at the Bhakra Dam can be started only after diverting the entire flow of the river from the site of the dam. For this purpose two gigantic tunnels, each 50 feet in diameter, and about half-a-mile in length, are being constructed, one at either bank.

The Damodar Valley Project intended for the benefit of Bihar and West Bengal, envisages the control of the capricious Damodar by impounding its flood waters in a series of reservoirs to be created by the construction of dams across the main river and its tributaries. In the first phase of development which is included in the Five-Year Plan, four dams are to be constructed. The reservoir will have an aggregate storage capacity of 2.44 million acre feet. Power will be generated at all the four dams and the installed capacity will be about 124,000 KW. In addition a thermal plant is being erected in the heart of the valley at Bokaro, the ultimate installed capacity of which will be 200,000 KW.

The regulated flow below the dams will be picked up at Durgapur, where a barrage is to be constructed for developing the flow into a network of canals designed to irrigate more than a million acres of kharif and 3 lakh acres of rabi crops in West Bengal.

The Hirakud Dam Project is one of the three units envisaged for the development of the Mahanadi Valley. The other two projects will be the Tikarapara Dam and the Naraj Dam in the middle and lower reaches of the river. The Hirakud Project is designed to control floods in the deltaic area of the valley, irrigate 1.9 million acres of land and generate nearly 200,000 KW of firm power.

The principal features are a main earth dam across the river about eight miles upstream of Sambalpur, a subsidiary dam at the tail of the power channel and a network of flow and lift irrigation canals. Extension of navigation in the river below the dam and construction of a coastal port are also being studied.

Lay-outs for the power station and sub-stations and the high tension transmission lines radiating from Hirakud have been finalised, and more than a third of the work on the 650 miles of irrigation canals has already been completed.

And now to one or two of the weir and canal projects. The Kakrapar Weir and Canal Project will be the lowermost project in the integrated development of the Tapti river basin. The weir will be about 2,175 feet long and 45 feet high above the deepest river bed. Construction work is under way.

Canals which will total 850 miles, intended to irrigate over 6 lakh acres of land in Surat district, are being excavated. Over 450 miles have already been completed. The diversion dam and part of the canal system will begin to function for kharif irrigation in 1953. The development of this project is expected to increase the food yield by about 160,000 tons and produce 16,000 tons of additional cotton. The project is estimated to cost a little more than Rs. 6 crores.

The Ghataprabha Canal Project is the first stage on the development of Ghataprabha valley. The canal project consists of the construction of a left bank canal running for about 44 miles from the existing pick-up weir across the Ghataprabha river in Belgaum district. It will provide seasonal irrigation to about 100,000 acres of land. Begun in 1949 the project has already started irrigation over the first 8 miles and is expected to be completed in 1955-56.

Besides these and the hundred and odd projects that are now being executed, there are a number of other major projects vital to the economic growth of the country; they have been investigated and found feasible of execution. Construction of these projects is, however, conditioned by the availability of finance and how much aid and mutual assistance will be forthcoming from the Commonwealth countries. The more important of these projects are the Kosi, Krishna-Pennar, Chambal, Koyna and Ukai schemes.

The nation is now investing nearly Rs. 100 crores every year on these projects—more than the total investment so far made on irrigation projects in the Indian Union. But dividends have already started to flow, for from the middle of 1951, about 100,000 acres of land began to be irrigated from the Mayurakshi project. Benefits of a sizable nature should commence next year and in the years to come till India becomes self-sufficient in food and our posterity lives in plenty.

Any review of the functions and scopes of the development projects in this country will be incomplete without a reference to the Sindri Fertilizer Project and the 11 National Laboratories. The fertilizer factory at Sindri was completed and the production of ammonium sulphate begun at midnight on October 30, 1951. The factory has already achieved production to the extent of one-third of its capacity and during the year 1952-53 this factory is expected to reach the full production target of 1,000 tons of ammonium sulphate per day.

It is a matter of satisfaction that the national Government has so speedily started implementing the plan for establishing the National Laboratories. Boldly conceived and planned by committees of scientists and industrialists, the laboratories are erected near the main industries which they are intended to serve. A new feature of the laboratories are the pilot plants where the results of research can be tested to determine their commercial value. Possessing the latest equipment, manned by the best talent available in the country and free from profit motive, these institutions will be able to approach the national problems from a broad perspective, keeping in view the good of the country as a whole rather than that of a particular industry. The National Laboratories, however, will not supplant but supplement the efforts of other research institutions.

Since the Government is anxious to bring about a speedy improvement in the condition of the people, the National Laboratories will concentrate on problems of practical importance to the country. The National Laboratories are: (1) National Chemical Laboratory, Poona; (2) National Physical Laboratory, Delhi; (3) National Metallurgical Laboratory, Jamshedpur;

(4) Fuel Research Institute, Dhanbad ; (5) Central Glass and Ceramic Research Institute, Calcutta ; (6) Central Food Technological Research Institute, Mysore ; (7) Central Drug Research Institute, Lucknow ; (8) Central Road Research Institute, Delhi ; (9) Central Building Research Institute, Roorkee ; (10) Central Leather Research Institute, Madras ; and (11) Central Electro-Chemical Research Institute, Karaikudi.

Silk*

Silk holds a special position in the domain of our dress. On ceremonial occasions—be it social or religious—we can hardly do without silk. For a newly wed bride silk sarees are an important item of dress and in religious functions also it is customary to wear silk, which is regarded as a symbol of purity.

And, speaking of silk, there is no other silk which has finer texture, softer feel, more varied design and greater popularity than BENGAL SILK.

CHAPTER X

LABOUR

Independence has indeed meant a square deal for labour. The worker is no longer left to the mercy of his employer. Not only is his dignity as a human being now recognised, but his status has been raised from that of a mere wage-earner to that of a partner in industry. Today workers in India are nearer the ideal of democracy and cooperative commonwealth than they are in many other countries.

India has about six million industrial workers and 34 million agricultural workers, and they constitute the backbone of the country's industrial structure. Labour welfare, health, housing, improved conditions of work, minimum wages, employment and training and the trade union movement are the various features of a programme of social security in independent India, that is a welfare State. Despite shortcomings the Government can justifiably claim that it has done its best to ameliorate the conditions of the working class in the land. The achievement in the realm of social security has brought about a marked improvement in their economic status and offers the workers opportunities to lead a better life. If the rise in prices remains unchecked, it is mainly because the phenomenon is universal and some of the causes are beyond the control of the Government of this land. It may be said, however, that but for the effective steps taken by the Government the adverse situation would have affected the Indian workers more seriously.

The two important legislations passed during the year under review are : The Plantation Labour Act and the Employees' Provident Fund Act. The former provides for the welfare of labour, and the regulation of conditions of work in the tea, coffee, rubber and cinchona plantations in the country. Model rules were being prepared to ensure uniformity in this matter. The latter Act was first promulgated as an ordinance and then replaced by an Act. It provides for the compulsory provident fund for employees in industrial establishments and applies to all factories employing 50 or more persons in the textile, iron and steel, cement, engineering, paper and cigarette industries. The employers' contribution is $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. of the basic wages and the dearness allowance of the employee. The employees also contribute the same amount. The factories owned by the Government and local authorities have, however, been excluded from the scope of this Act because the benefits enjoyed by the employees in the above factories are more favourable to them than those provided in the Act.

During the year labour welfare and industrial housing received pointed attention from the Government of India. In 1951 the Centre provided

Rs. 7,244,000 under the general welfare account and Rs. 1,935,000 under the housing account. Sanction was accorded for the extension of the Central Hospital building at Dhanbad and for the construction of a central hospital near Asansol in the Raniganj coal-fields. The Government also gave its approval for the construction of four other hospitals and dispensaries and tuberculosis clinics. The Government spent thousands of rupees on BCG vaccination, anti-malaria measures, medical help and sanitary services in the coal-fields at Jharia, Raniganj, Sambalpur and other places.

For social education and other welfare of the coal-miners and their dependants the Government accorded sanction for the construction of 20 multi-purposes welfare centres. It was also decided to provide radio sets with loud-speakers in the collieries in the Pench Valley in Madhya Pradesh. Free supply of garments for the coal-miners and pithead baths were strictly enforced. The statutory provisions for creches were also strictly enforced.

The coal-mines provident fund and bonus scheme holds more popular during the year. By the end of March 1952 about 5,608 colliery employees had joined the fund and a sum of Rs. 22 million had been contributed by the employers and the employees. Up till March 15, 1952, about 5,608 colliery employees had been paid Rs. 202,239 from their provident fund. The mica-miners also received equal benefits from the Government. The budget of the mica-mining areas of Madras. A grant of Rs. 9 lakhs and 20,000 for labour welfare has provided for the construction of a ward of eight beds for the exclusive use of mica-miners in the Tuberculosis Hospital which they propose to construct. Another grant of Rs. 64,000 was made by the Government for the anti-malaria measures in the mica field in Bihar and Madras.

A grant of Rs. 4 lakhs was secured from the Central Tea Board for the welfare of tea plantation labour. The State Governments concerned were requested to prepare welfare schemes which inter alia provide for training in subsidiary occupations like tailoring, knitting and weaving. Besides, the Government of India arrived at an agreement with the ILO to secure the services of an expert to organise vocational training for plantation workers.

To achieve the objectives of the Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act, 1948 different schemes were framed for the ports of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. These schemes provide for the registration of workers and employers, the payment of guaranteed minimum wages, attendance allowance and disappointment money to casual workers. Of the three schemes, the Bombay scheme is being implemented from February 1, 1952.

During the year it was decided that 539 houses should be constructed for the workers in the Railway collieries at a cost of Rs. 1.97 millions. The houses will give some minimum amenities like community latrines, external water-supply, street lighting, roads and drains. Under the Plantation Labour Act, 1951, the planters built 4,915 houses for workers in South India in 1951, and 10,183 houses in North India between April 1 and September 30, 1951. The Industrial Housing Scheme which had hitherto been confined to Part A States and some of the Part C States was extended to all the States. Ten States which participated in this scheme were advanced loans for this purpose. The Government expense under this head has been increasing year after year.

During the year an important step was taken by the Government in regard to forced labour. A statement giving a resumé of the measures undertaken by the Government to abolish forced labour was placed before the Parliament on September 10, 1951. Administrative action required for legal protection against forced labour was taken and data collected to help the State Government in this matter. The State Governments were also requested to give the widest publicity in the rural areas to the provisions of the Constitution on forced labour.

Under the Point-Four Programme of the USA facilities for training were given to eight officials. A team of three experts in industrial hygiene will also make a thorough study of the problems of industrial hygiene in this country. Meanwhile training facilities for officers of the Central and State Governments have been opened in the U.K., Australia and New Zealand under the Commonwealth Technical Cooperation Scheme (Colombo Plan).

The Government of India took part in all conferences convened by the ILO. India has asked the ILO for the services of experts in the field of productivity and systems of payment by results, analysis of the results of the Agricultural Labour Enquiry, vocational training for plantation workers and social security administration. The ILO was also approached to award fellowships in various fields of labour. As a first measure of technical assistance the ILO convened a seminar on labour statistics in New Delhi in November 1951. Statistical officials from several countries including India took part in the discussion.

During 1951, five more employment exchanges were added to the network at Kotah, Bhilwara, Sambalpur, Mysore and Belgaum. About 1.38 million registrations were effected in 1951 as compared to 1.21 millions during the preceding year. The number of vacancies notified to the Exchanges increased during 1951. Consequently the number of persons who were found employment by the Employment Exchanges also increased during the year. Among those who had found employment were a large number of displaced persons and members of scheduled castes.

In the field of training during 1951 an additional 3,272 vacancies were sanctioned for the displaced persons in the Adult Civilian Training Scheme and under a special arrangement with the Ministry of Rehabilitation 1,000 of these vacancies were set apart for apprenticeship for training in U.P. and West Bengal. The first batch of trainees in vocational trades was tested in July-August 1951. Under special arrangements about 250 demobilised Servicemen were also posted for training at the Ministry of Labour's training centres.

The States also approached labour in the proper spirit and gave this problem the attention and importance it deserved.

During the year there was some discontent and agitation amongst the labourers in Ajmer. The cause of this unrest was the abnormal rise in the prices of essential commodities. To counteract this unrest, the Government fixed minimum wages in the textile industry where the agitation was most pronounced. Minimum wages in tobacco (including bidi making) manufactory have already been fixed and fixation of wages in other scheduled employments was also under the consideration of the Government.

In the State there were 70 disputes during the year. Sixty-five of them were settled by conciliation and five were referred to the Industrial Tribunal.

Bhopal maintained comparatively cordial industrial relations throughout the year under review and consequently there was an all-round increase in production. Most of the industrial disputes were settled through conciliation and a few were referred to the Industrial Tribunal for adjudication. With the enforcement of the Minimum Wages Act, surveys and enquiries were completed in respect of the conditions of work in some scheduled employments like road construction, building operations, stone breaking, bidi making, etc.

The machinery set up by the Government of Bihar for the settlement of industrial disputes has proved to be very effective. During the year, 74 such disputes, out of which 33 involved stoppage of work, were settled by conciliation and 45 referred to the Labour Tribunal for adjudication. The number of workers involved was 12,082 and the number of man-days lost 44,816. The disputes arising out of the slow-down notices were promptly settled as a result of which the number of man-days lost during 1951-52 was brought down to half of the corresponding figure in the preceding year. The minimum wages were fixed within the time-limit fixed by the Government of India.

In Bihar during the year two industrial housing schemes were at work—one planned by the State Government and the other by the Central Government. Under the former scheme Rs. 15 lakhs were advanced to the Tata Locomotive and Engineering Co. Ltd., Jamshedpur. They had already built 359 houses for their workers; more than 300 houses were under construction at the end of the period under review. A further sum of Rs. 25 lakhs was sanctioned to be advanced to the above company and another sum of Rs. 566,460 was sanctioned to be advanced to The Dwarkadas Radhakrishna & Bharitiya Engineering Works, Sahebganj. Under these schemes the recipients would contribute half the expenses, and the other half which the Government advances as loan carries 3 per cent. interest.

Industrial relations in Bombay State during 1951-52 continued to be satisfactory. Although the number of work stoppage recorded a slight increase over that of the previous year, the number of workers involved was much low. The conciliation machinery set up by the Government successfully dealt with about 500 disputes while conciliation failed in about 450 and disputes were either withdrawn or not pursued in 570 cases.

The State Government got 126 Joint Committees and 288 Works Committees set up. Some of the joint committees were set up voluntarily by the employers with the approval of the employees' union. The committees represent the spirit of the industrial truce and help maintain mutual appreciation of difficulties of both the employees and the employers and contribute to efficiency in production and harmonious relations between the two parties. Unit production committees were set up in some establishments also on the voluntary basis, and they functioned efficiently. During the year 47,585 workers were employed under the decasualisation scheme as against 12,171 workers during the previous year.

The total number of registered and working factories in the State stood at 8,470 and 7,677 respectively as against 7,927 and 7,383 during the previous year. The average daily number of workers in the factories was 780,867 including 51,365 women workers. The latter are covered by the Bombay Maternity Benefit Act and during the year about 4,860 women workers claimed the benefit under the Act and received Rs. 188,433. The amount of compensation paid to workers under the Workmen's Compensation Act in 1951 was Rs. 823,582.

About 800 literary classes were started and about 8,000 workers were made literate. There were 289 apprentices in the industrial training workshop at Ahmedabad. The Employers' Provident Fund Scheme and the Employees' State Insurance Scheme will come into force in this State within a few months.

The Welfare Section of the Labour Department was engaged in the management of 52 labour welfare centres in Bombay, Ahmedabad, Sholapur and Hubli.

Almost all the labour laws of the Central Legislature were in force in Coorg. To enforce effectively the Payment of Wages and Weekly Holidays Act the District Magistrate of Coorg continued to be the certifying officer and statistics authority and the State appointed an inspector of factories and two field assistants to do the work connected with the Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules, 1951.

The recommendations of the Advisory Board constituted under Section 7 of the Minimum Wages Act regarding minimum rates of wages for employment in Coffee plantations and cardamom malais were accepted by the State Government. The recommendations of the Board in respect of employment in agriculture were, at the end of the period under review, pending final orders by the State Government.

The policy of the Delhi State towards labour is to promote the welfare of the workers and maintain industrial peace of the State. A full-fledged conciliation machinery and tribunal were set up and due to their labour the number of strikes and number of man-days lost fell considerably low during the year.

The State has enforced 12 labour laws to safeguard the interests of the workers. The enforcement of these Acts has not only improved the standard of living and the working and service conditions of the workers but has also afforded the workers the necessary protection against the unfair practices of the employers and other risks and hazards arising out of employment.

Forty-two industrial establishments have Works Committees and 25 have been certified under the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act. For effectively enforcing the Minimum Wages Act, two whole-time inspectors have been appointed for regular checking and a Minimum Wages Committee has been constituted to advise the Government in regard to the minimum wages of some of the employments. The Employees' State Insurance Act has also been enforced in the State and a pilot scheme under this Act has been introduced. This scheme provides necessary security to the workers against the loss of income due to accident, sickness and maternity.

The total number of factories registered in Hyderabad during 1951-52 was 1,036. The Government devoted special attention to improving the working conditions of labour. The minimum wages have so far been fixed under the Minimum Wages Act in the bidi factories and tanneries. Committees have been set up to fix minimum wages for five categories of employment specified in the schedule to the Minimum Wages Act.

The construction of 300 houses for industrial workers was nearing completion in Hyderabad City. Labour welfare centres have been planned and the Government has sanctioned Rs. 10,000 for them during the year. Besides finding employment for ex-Servicemen, the functions of the Regional Directorate and Resettlement were extended to cover civilian employment seekers also. To resettle the personnel released recently as a result of the disbandment of the State Forces, a sum of Rs. 12 lakhs has been allotted for various farming schemes.

In Madhya Bharat a minimum wage of Rs. 26 a month has been fixed for the operatives of the textile mills, and standardisation of wages for different occupations has also been effected in the textile industry. A minimum wage has also been fixed in the sugar industry and partially in some of the smaller concerns—the latter have represented against this measure. In regard to agricultural labour also, the required data were being collected in line with the all-India scheme which would form the basis of the ameliorative measures contemplated for this class of workers, especially fixation of their minimum wages, hours of work, holidays and so on. To achieve uniformity with the rest of India, all progressive labour laws have been adopted.

At Indore two labour housing schemes are already under execution. Housing has been provided by the management to a substantial number of workers at the Gwalior centre. In addition to what the employers themselves are doing as required by the Factories' Act, Government has been spending yearly Rs. 12,000 in Indore for labour welfare. Extension of labour welfare activities at other centres was under the active consideration of the Government at the end of the period under review.

For settlement of major industrial disputes, an independent judiciary has been constituted with three labour courts and one industrial court. Besides, a beginning has been made in the direction of introducing what is called 'Industrial Democracy' by the constitution of Works Committees in most of the textile mills consisting of representatives of employers and employees in equal numbers.

During the year C.P. and Berar Industrial Disputes Settlement Act was applied in Madhya Pradesh to the textile industry. Recognised unions of textile workers were registered for all the textile centres in the State and the stage was set for settlement of all disputes by negotiation and conciliation. Except for a long strike which occurred in the Empress Mills, Nagpur, towards the end of 1951, the real cause of which was more political than economic, the period was one of comparative peace and harmony between labour and management.

During this period the labour office successfully conciliated 46 disputes and investigated into 358 complaints; 13 agreements were registered. Standing Orders in more than 50 establishments were certified thus regulating the relations between the employers and the employees in these establishments.

During the year the State Government finalised the Minimum Wages Rules, 1951 under section 30 of the Minimum Wages Act, 1948 and the Madhya Pradesh Housing Board Rules, 1952. The Shops and Establishments Act continued to be in force in 21 of the more important towns of the State.

The State Government set up a Housing Board in January 1951 to look after the industrial housing scheme. This board completed all the preliminary work connected with the building of houses for industrial workers at Jabalpur, Pulgaon, Achalpur and Nagpur. Work was already started at Jabalpur and the Board was given Rs. 20 lakhs which the State Government received as interest-free loan from the Centre.

The State Government has started labour welfare activities on a somewhat moderate scheme. On the basis of Employees' Provident Fund Act, 1952, recently enacted by the Central Government, a draft scheme was prepared and circulated throughout the State for action.

In the field of labour welfare the Madras Government has decided to introduce, at the first instance, the working of the Employees' State Insurance Act in one centre. The Government has collected data with a view to locating areas where the Act could be enforced.

Mysore took a keen interest in promoting the welfare of labour in the State. The Bangalore City Improvement Trust Board constructed during the year 60 blocks of four units each for accommodating labourers. The expenditure, so far, has been about Rs. 5 lakhs. For the housing of the labour force in the Mysore Iron and Steel Works at Bhadravathi a considerable amount was spent during the year. Out of the Rs. 20 lakhs that the Centre granted as interest-free loan to the State, Rs. 10 lakhs have been provided in the current year's budget for housing scheme.

Due to the industrial backwardness in Orissa the necessity of a machinery for the administration of labour laws was not keenly felt. But the recent enactment of important labour legislations by the Central Government made it incumbent on the State to set up a separate labour department for the proper administration of the various legislations.

In this review of the labour activities of the State during the year mention must be made, inter alia, of the Plantations Labour Act, 1951 that was passed on the 2nd November 1951. This Act provides for the welfare of the labour and regulates the conditions of the work on plantations. A bill entitled the Orissa Maternity Benefit Bill, 1951 was introduced in the State Legislature in its September session and has been referred to a select committee. The model rules relating to Employees' Insurance Courts under clauses (a) to (c) of sub-section (1) of section 96 of the Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948 were finalised during the year. Draft Minimum Wages Rules and Industrial Statistics (Industrial & Labour Disputes) Rules were published during the year with a view to eliciting public opinion; the question of finalising these rules was under the consideration of the Government. The Bihar and Orissa Mining Settlement Act, 1920 was extended to the ex-State areas except some of the scheduled areas of the State. Chapter V-A of the Employees' State Insurance Act regarding employers' special contribution to the corporation was brought into force in Orissa and was operating from the 24th November 1951.

In the sphere of labour welfare care was taken to maintain a high standard of housing conditions, sanitation, arrangement for water-supply and medical, educational and recreational facilities for workers in factories. From the Centre the State Government received an interest-free loan of Rs. 10 lakhs for industrial housing schemes and this amount was distributed to three industrial establishments in the State. The recipients of this amount would advance one-half of the amount received towards the construction of quarters for the labourers employed in their undertakings.

During 1951-52, Punjab enforced minimum wages, as recommended by the tripartite committees, in respect of workers in oil mills, tea plantations, rice, flour and dal mills, tanneries, leather factories, etc. and for subordinate staff under the local authorities. Minimum wages in respect of tea plantations have affected about 10,000 workers and in many cases improved their wages by about 40 per cent. Similarly, 30,000 workers in oil mills, road construction, building operations and private construction enterprises and 12,000 subordinate staff under the local authorities are covered by these provisions. With the enforcement of minimum wages in agriculture from October 1, 1951, a very large number of workers were also affected.

Recently the Employees' Provident Fund Act was passed providing for the institution of provident fund for employees in six scheduled industries.

The number of industrial disputes has been steadily declining. During 1951, there were only 18 disputes as compared with 58 in 1950.

The Minimum Wages Act enforced in Rajasthan is likely to benefit 50,000 labourers engaged in carpet, shawl and bidi factories, road and house building, and rice, flour and dal mills. The workers in the mica-mines and public motor transport will also be benefited. Unified pay scales were introduced for workers engaged in 18 power houses with varying generating capacities. Works Committees will also be formed in all the major and minor industries in the State. An Industrial Tribunal was constituted for settling industrial disputes. Two more labour welfare centres were started during the year.

Prior to the formation of the Saurashtra State, most of the States that now constitute Saurashtra, had no labour legislation whatsoever. Exploitation was rampant. Wages were very low. But at present, the labour legislation in the State has been brought in line with the progressive legislation in other States. The Government has undertaken labour welfare activities. Conciliation machinery has been set up by the Government. During the year 1951-52, there were 313 cases of conciliation out of which 242 were successful and 18 remained pending. During the year, there were 50 stoppages of work involving loss of 92,295½ man-days of work. Twenty-two disputes were referred to the Industrial Tribunal out of which 18 have been settled.

Trade Union activities also progressed. Seventy-six more Unions were registered during 1951-52, with a total membership of 27,282.

The working hours of the adult workers have been fixed at 48 hours a week and 9 hours a day. Besides, period of work, rest interval, exemption to women workers from the provisions of 9 hours a day, the minimum age for employment of a child worker and the age-limit of an adolescent, certificate of fitness for employment of young persons, holidays with pay, etc. are

LAND REFORMS

In the fifth year of freedom Congress Governments in the States took epoch-making steps in the direction of redeeming their pledge to the tillers of the land. Epoch-making, for example, was July 1 in Uttar Pradesh, when, at one stroke of the pen 31,000,000 out of 41,300,000 acres of land held by the intermediaries were acquired by the Government, the zamindars retaining an area of 72 lakh acres of sir lands. In most of the other States—in Bihar, Madhya Pradesh, Madhya Bharat, etc.—the process of acquisition of intermediary interests followed a slightly different course in so far as their landed property did not vest in the State on a single day. Instead, large estates were notified and taken over by the State in instalments. Thus, for example, in Bihar all estates paying Rs. 50,000 and more as land revenue were taken over by the State. This has meant the abolition of such big zamindaris as those of Darbhanga, Ramgarh, Tikari, etc. In Madras, the process of acquisition begun earlier was continued and in this State the intermediary system is now more or less abolished and parasitism in zamindari and inam lands extending to over 11,400,000 acres has been done away with. The Madhya Bharat abolition legislation will affect nearly one lakh of intermediaries and about 18,636 sq. miles of land.

The Congress has always emphasised that abolition of intermediary interests in land is not an end in itself but is a means to an end, which is to make our cultivators prosperous, to make the country self-sufficient in food and to achieve economic independence for our toiling masses through a co-operative commonwealth. It follows, therefore, that whereas the abolition of intermediary interests in land is, no doubt, important, the post-abolition land reforms are even more important. The chief plank of these reforms is to see to it that land is held for use and as a source of employment. This naturally means stopping sub-letting of land except in special cases (like widows, minors, disabled persons, etc.), fixing a ceiling on holdings, protection to tenants, consolidation of fragments and development of cooperation and cooperative farming. In all these matters the Governments have taken significant steps in the various States, a brief account of which is given below.

A very large portion of Ajmer is held by istimardars who pay a nominal revenue to the Government. Formerly the tenants in the istimardari areas were considered "tenants-at-will". The Ajmer Tenancy Act which came into force last year gives the tenants the right to acquire the status of hereditary tenants, abolishing the payment of all unauthorised levies.

The State Legislative Assembly recently appointed a committee to report to the Government as to the best method of the abolition of all intermediaries between the tillers of the soil and the State. On the basis of the report of this committee, Government would bring forward in the winter session of the Assembly a bill seeking to effect far-reaching land reforms to improve the lot of the peasantry.

Assam's progress in the matter of land reforms was checked because further enforcement of the latest Acts was stayed by the Courts. The Assam State Acquisition of Zamindaris Act, 1951, which received the assent of the President on the 28th July 1951, was challenged by some proprietors while it was in the Bill stage. The cases were still pending with the Assam High Court. The State had, however, taken steps during the year, to frame rules under this Act.

The Assam Management of Estates Act was passed in 1949 with a view to protecting the natural wealth of the estates. When the Government issued necessary orders for taking over management after completing all preliminary arrangements, the Assam High Court, on petitions filed by the proprietors, stayed further proceedings. At the end of the period under review the petitions were pending in the Assam High Court.

The vast majority of tenants in Bihar enjoy occupancy right in respect of their lands. The Bihar Tenancy Amendment Act allows the tenants to manufacture bricks on their lands and to use their lands for charitable or education purposes. An amendment of the Act gives the ryots the rights in trees except where such trees have been recorded in the name of another ryot.

In the first phase of zamindari abolition, the State Government has decided to acquire 146 estates with a gross annual income of Rs. 50,000. The Government will have to give as compensation Rs. 150 crores if all the zamindaries and jagirdaries in the State are to be acquired under the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950.

In Bombay the Tenancy Act, the Anti-fragmentation Act, the Money-lenders' Act, liquidation of inam and other feudal tenures and other progressive measures enacted since Independence constitute a land-mark in the sphere of agrarian reforms.

Coorg liberalised the revenue rules with regard to the grant of loans to Harijans and landless poor. These people are allowed land to the extent of 3 acres to each person for cultivation purposes without recovering land or timber value. As a matter of policy new grants are limited to a maximum of 50 acres per individual taking into account the land already held by the applicant.

The land reforms enacted in Delhi fall under two categories : (a) Consolidation of holdings ; (b) Tenancy reforms.

Consolidation of holdings was done under the Cooperative Act and the Punjab Act of 1936. In all, 78 villages were consolidated under the provisions of these Acts. In October 1951, however, it was decided to take up all the 358 villages of the State by instalments of 100 villages a year. The work of consolidation was to be undertaken under the Punjab Consolidation Act, 1948. 72 villages have, up till the end of the period under report, been completed under this Act and the work was making satisfactory progress.

The land tenancy system in Delhi State is extremely antiquated and is governed by two Acts. The 65 villages of the State (east of River Jumna) are governed under the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, while in the remaining villages (west of Jumna) the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887 is in vogue. Considering that in a small State like Delhi it was undesirable to have two tenancy systems the Delhi State Government has now undertaken reforms of the tenancy system on the lines of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950. A land reforms commissioner has been appointed who has been charged with the duties of preparing a scheme to ensure a unified tenancy system in the State. An official committee in that connection consisting of official and non-official representatives has already been appointed to go into the question.

Before the integration of Himachal Pradesh a large number of taxes were levied in the different units. The State Government abolished 27 taxes and several customary dues which were levied by the erstwhile Punjab States. Begar (forced labour), which was in the existence in one form or other in all the units, has been stopped by the State Government.

Occupancy rights as specified in the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1888 were conferred on the Bethus, who were in cultivatory possession of State lands for three generations or more on payment of an amount equal to $1\frac{1}{4}$ times the land revenue and cesses for the time being, chargeable on land revenue. The Punjab Tenants (Security of Tenure) Act, 1950, which is now enforced in Himachal Pradesh, gives security to the tenants who have been in possession of land for not less than four years because they cannot now be ejected from their holdings.

In Hyderabad the Government has since Independence introduced a series of land reforms which will constitute a sort of Magna Carta for the tenant-farmer and free him from his age-long bondage. The sarf-e-khas, the personal property of the Nizam, and the Jagirs which between themselves constituted above 41.5 per cent. of the entire area of the State, were taken over by the State in quick succession during 1949. Then came the Hyderabad Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act. This Act has made it possible to transform the tenant-cultivators into peasant-proprietors which has been the end and the aim of agrarian reforms. In the consummation of these objectives lies the peace of the tenant and progress of the peasantry, and increased food production as a corollary. To help these protected tenants who may not have enough money to take advantage of the facility of purchase of lands, the Government is opening Land Mortgage Banks which will advance loans repayable in easy instalments.

Other measures have abolished forced labour, the system of granting lands on one year's temporary tenure, and the practice of tahibandi, that is, the seasonal delimitation of lands which could be irrigated for the dry crop in accordance with the volume of water available.

In Jammu and Kashmir the Land Compensation Committee was instructed by the Constituent Assembly to examine and report upon the desirability or otherwise of the payments of compensation for lands expropriated under the "land to tiller" policy of the Government. The committee sent a questionnaire to all the public bodies and organisations of the State and published it in local newspapers so as to elicit public opinion on this important issue. The committee heard in person and recorded evidence at different centres in the State.

After a thorough investigation and examination the Committee came to the conclusion that the "stand of the land-owning interests on the antiquity of the institution of landlordism, the paucity of returns of land investments, the legal obligation of payment of compensation, the precedents of some of the Indian States, the sanctity of property rights in land and some other conditions has not stood the test of historical, economic and factual analysis". The committee recommended that, both in principle and in policy, the payments of compensation to the expropriated proprietors was not desirable. The recommendation was accepted unanimously by the Constituent Assembly.

Land tenure in Madhya Bharat was partly ryotwari and partly zamindari and there were 1,332 jagirs comprising of 5,046 villages with the population of nearly 1,124,532. The jagirs were spread throughout the State and this feudal system was a great handicap in the progress of the State. Some of these jagirs had police rights as well as the rights of taxation. The Bill to abolish this system was brought before the State Legislature in its October session of 1951 and was passed. Thus came to end this age-old system.

The Zamindari Abolition Act which was passed in March 1951 was enforced with effect from October 2, 1951. A uniform rate of compensation, eight times the net income would be paid to Madhya Bharat zamindars irrespective of sizes of their zamindaries. The total number of zamindars in Madhya Bharat was 121,993, the total amount of malguzari being Rs. 10,028,657. Over 90 per cent. of the zamindars belonged to the lower group paying less than Rs. 250 per year by way of malguzari.

The non-occupancy tenants would pay nothing to the Government for obtaining tenant rights. The sub-tenants would pay four times the rent amount. Sub-tenants of non-occupancy tenants would pay one year's rent to acquire tenancy rights. In regard to debt liabilities of zamindars, it has been proposed that only secure debts should be taken into consideration.

The Madhya Pradesh Government had during the first four years since Independence introduced several important measures of land reforms. But what should be given importance in a review of the happenings during the fifth year of freedom is the Madhya Pradesh Abolition of Proprietary Rights Act, 1950 which was brought into force on the 26th January 1951. This has been a landmark in the revenue administration of the State. The immediate task that had to be done in enforcing the Act was assessing the compensation payable to the ex-proprietors numbering nearly 1.5 lakh persons. To complete this work expeditiously a separate department was constituted and it was able to complete the work of assessment before the 31st March 1952. Till this work was completed it was not possible to frame an equitable scheme for the disbursement of compensation, because the details of the scheme had to be settled with reference to the total liability on account of compensation and the financial resources of the State Government. The total amount of compensation that would be payable to ex-proprietors would come to about Rs. 480 lakhs and the total amount of rehabilitation grant to Rs. 9 lakhs. It has been proposed to disburse the rehabilitation grant in one instalment. As regards the compensation, it has now been decided that instead of issuing bonds carrying interests at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and redeemable in a period not exceeding 30 years, small proprietors should be paid outright immediately the total amount of compensation due to them and the others should be paid in cash in annual instalments, not exceeding eight. The amount that would be disbursed during the year 1952-53 is estimated at Rs. 229 lakhs which includes Rs. 9 lakhs on account of rehabilitation grants.

More than 95 per cent. of the holdings of Mysore are less than five acres in extent. What is called the land reforms policy will, therefore, apply to about only ten per cent. of the ryots in Mysore. To set right whatever difficulties or deficiencies there were in the case of a small number of ryots in jagir and inam villages, the Mysore Government took some steps and appointed a committee to examine and suggest revision of the existing land revenue system in the State as well as to examine the desirability of abolishing all classes of jagirs and inams. From the recommendations of this committee, the Mysore Tenancy Act (Act XIII of 1952) has been promulgated with the object of promoting harmony in the relationship between tenants and landlords. The minimum period of lease of land is fixed at five years and the arbitrary eviction of tenants is limited to half the produce of the lands. The issue of a written receipt by landholders for the rent received by them is made mandatory. The provisions of the Act were brought into force in nine taluks of the State on the 1st August 1952.

A Bill has been drafted in respect of the abolition of inams and jagirs in the State. It is pending before the Legislature. Another important measure of reform recently introduced in the State was the enactment of Mysore Cultivation of Fallow Lands Act (Act XVII of 1951) to enforce compulsory cultivation of lands left fallow.

The Land Revenue and Land Tenure Committee appointed by the Orissa Government in 1946 recommended for the (1) elimination of intermediaries between the ryot and the State ; (2) establishment of anchal sasans ; (3) prohibition of sub-letting ; (4) protection of cultivating tenants ; (5) enforcement of the rules and principles of good husbandry ; and (6) prevention of fragmentation of consolidation of holdings.

The State Government, accepting the recommendations of the committee with regard to all intermediary interests between the State and the ryot enacted the Orissa Estates Abolition Act. This Act which was passed by the Legislature in September 1951 received the assent of the President in 1952. This outstanding piece of legislation enacted during the fifth year of Independence aims at abolition of intermediaries, by whatever name known, between the State and the ryot.

The Orissa Government has also accepted the recommendations of the committee in regard to the establishment of anchal sasans and a bill to regulate the powers, duties and functions of anchal sasans and the constitution of anchal sabha was under preparation. Principles of good husbandry and the prevention of fragmentation of consolidation of holdings have been embodied in the Orissa Agricultural Bill which was passed by the State Legislative Assembly in October 1951. This bill was, at the end of the year under review, awaiting President's assent.

Pending enactment of permanent legislation with regard to prohibition of sub-letting and protection of cultivating tenants the Government of Orissa enacted temporary legislation in 1948, known as the Orissa Tenants' Protection Act which gives protection to certain cultivating tenants against eviction and also fixes the quantum of kind-rent to be paid by them.

Besides these measures the State Government has taken during the last five years various steps towards the achievement of the goal in view.

The Rajasthan Jagir Abolition Bill received the assent of the President in February 1952 and was promulgated in Rajasthan on the 18th February, 1952. According to this, jagirs of the annual rental income of Rs. 5,000 or less and jagirs whose income is utilised for the maintenance of any place of religious worship or the performance of any religious services would not be resumed. Out of the resumable jagirs the Government would resume only jagirs as are under the management of Government or the Court of Wards or are situated in settled villages. The jagirdars would be entitled to receive compensation for the resumption of their jagirs at ten times the net-income. Jagirs to be thus resumed number 497 and their combined annual revenue has been estimated at Rs. 11,546,300. The annual compensation to be given to jagirdars of resumed jagirs for 15 years works out at Rs. 3,801,671. Provision has been made for the allotment of suitable areas of khudkash land for the jagirdars, subject to a maximum of 500 acres of unirrigated land. Where irrigated land is included in such an area, one acre of irrigated land will be taken to be equivalent to three acres of unirrigated land. All jagir lands will be subject to land revenue. The ordinance provides for the protection of tenants against ejectment and grant of suitable tenancy rights to them. The amount of premium which can be charged for the conferment of full khatedari rights on such tenants as do not already possess them, has also been fixed at ten times the rental.

During the last session, the newly-formed Rajasthan Assembly enacted four progressive measures of land reform. By the Protection of Tenants Amendment Act the peasants who occupied land even after 1948 are protected from irregular ejectment. The Agricultural Rent Control Act will save the cultivators from excessive rent. The Produce Act Amendment fixes the share of the landlord at one-sixth of the produce in kind-rented areas till settlement. The Rajasthan Government has adopted the principle of land settlement for all areas uniformly, and the abolition of kind-rent is only a question of time and the Produce Act Amendment provides interim relief only. A committee for the allocation of land for self-cultivation to the landless bhoomias has been appointed. The fourth measure was the Famine Suspension of Proceedings Act. The draught-stricken peasants had hardly any surplus left with them to satisfy their creditors and the legislative provision for suspension of proceedings against them will provide them necessary relief.

The most important legislation passed in Saurashtra during the year is the Saurashtra Land Reforms Act which is a composite measure regulating the relationship between the girasdars and their tenants and ultimate assumption of the girasdars' rights by the State. The rent payable by the tenant is limited subject to the provisions regarding the reservation of personal cultivation of land by the girasdars, the tenant being entitled to acquire occupancy rights on payment of six times the value of his assessment. Thereafter the girasdar ceases to derive any income whatsoever from the tenant's land, the Government paying his compensation in instalments.

The end of the age-long zamindari system in Uttar Pradesh towards the close of the fifth year of political freedom may be taken as heralding in the State an era of social and economic freedom or real Swaraj. The implementation of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, which had received the President's assent on the 24th January 1951 and which was published on the 26th January 1951, was delayed by the vested interests, who made every conceivable effort to hinder the progress of the scheme. All controversies, however, were laid at rest on the 5th May 1952 with the Supreme Court decision upholding the Act, and all estates in areas to which the Act immediately applied vested in the State on the 1st July 1952.

directly or indirectly found employment from each such loan. The families that have benefited from loans, big and small, would number about 252,000.

Technical and vocational training has been given to more than 52,000 displaced persons. Another 9,000 are under training. About 28,000 newly constructed shops, 27,000 evacuee shops and 2,000 evacuee industrial establishments have been allotted to displaced persons. A number of industrial areas have been developed, and assistance is given in numerous other ways to displaced businessmen and industrialists.

A large number of West Pakistan displaced persons are benefiting from the various relief schemes which continue to be in operation. About 37,000 persons live in homes and infirmaries and for their maintenance the State has assumed complete responsibility. Over 16,000 widows, old and infirm persons receive monthly maintenance allowances. Relief assistance has also been given to about 2,500 pensioners and holders of postal policies whose dues have not been forthcoming from West Pakistan.

Let us now consider the refugees from East Pakistan. The problem of these migrants is peculiar in many ways and somewhat different from that of the displaced persons from West Pakistan. While new migrants from East Bengal are all the time coming in, many old ones are continually moving back to their original homes every time there is an improvement in the political situation in East Bengal—some even after receiving rehabilitation benefits in India. The Government of India has, therefore, at no stage been able to have full measure of the rehabilitation problem with any degree of finality.

Occupationally, a substantial proportion of the East Bengal migrants belonged originally to the middle class. Their quick resettlement in India depends largely on their own capacity to adapt themselves to new callings. This demands a certain amount of mental resilience which is often lacking. The inability of most East Bengal displaced persons to adapt themselves to new surroundings has repeatedly been the cause of the failure of many schemes to rehabilitate them outside West Bengal. They prefer to stay put in West Bengal which consequently has over 82 per cent. of the total East Bengal displaced population in this country, according to the 1951 census.

A new factor which has recently been observed is that economic distress in some of the East Bengal districts is driving into India new migrants, a high percentage of whom are destitutes, beggars and others who have always lived on charity, a proportion of them being even Muslims. Rehabilitation of such people is posing special difficulties.

The progress of rehabilitation in the eastern region must be viewed against the background of the factors mentioned above. Progress has necessarily been less spectacular than in the west, but it must be remembered that conditions which obtain in the west do not exist in the east. Here are a few facts about what has been done in the eastern region.

Out of 515,000 families to be resettled in India, 337,000 families have been resettled on land and ancillary occupations in the rural area. Employment exchanges have placed the earning members of nearly 30,000 families in jobs. Small loans through State Governments or bigger loans through the Rehabilitation Finance Administration have been sanctioned to several thousand others. In technical and vocational training centres, 8,000 persons have completed their training and 4,000 more are under training. About 37,000 unattached women and children and old and infirm persons are being looked after in homes and infirmaries. At the end of April, 1952 there were 40,000 persons living on doles in relief camps in the eastern region.

Assistance in the form of freeships, cash grants, loans and stipends has been given to several lakh students from West and East Pakistan from primary to collegiate stages, and even in regard to post-graduate and special courses of study. Over Rs. 40,000,000 have been spent in connection with the education of West Pakistan students and further large sums have been spent on East Pakistan students. Grants-in-aid have been given to several institutions disrupted on account of Partition as also to non-displaced institutions which provide facilities for education of displaced children. Aid has also been given to some State Governments for expanding educational facilities for displaced children.

Numerous training and work centres have been set up for women to enable them to live on their own earnings or to supplement the family income.

The total expenditure on displaced persons up to the end of March 1952, exceeded Rs. 146 crores. Of this sum 45.3 per cent. has been spent on evacuation and relief and rehabilitation grants; 31.3 per cent. on housing; 22.8 per cent. on resettlement and education loans; and 0.6 per cent. on establishment.

These are colossal sums. The burden on Government has been heavy. It might have been lighter if the Pakistan Government had played the game with those who had to leave their ancestral homes in Pakistan by allowing them to manage their properties, or by paying them the income from the properties which they are not allowed to manage. But Pakistan did nothing of the kind. Numerous attempts made by India to solve this problem of evacuee property have proved futile.

As India and Pakistan step into the sixth year of their independent existence, negotiations on the important problem of evacuee property continue to be in a state of deadlock. Pakistan is adamant that only one solution is possible. Under this solution, lakhs of humble men and women are to be asked to overcome individually a barrage of legalistic and other difficulties in order to sell or exchange their small worldly belongings. Even if this solution is given a second costly trial, there is bound to be a vast residue of petty properties—the "small" man's properties—after bigger properties have been sold or exchanged. What is to be done with these? Pakistan or other advocates of individual sales and exchanges give no answer to this vital question.

Hindus and Sikhs living in West Punjab and those of Punjabi extraction living in other provinces of West Pakistan abandoned 6,722,000 acres of land. Non-Punjabi Hindu and Sikh migrants from other provinces and states of West Pakistan (Sind, N.-W.F.P., etc.) have left nearly 3,000,000 acres of land bringing the total land abandoned in West Pakistan to between nine and ten million acres. As against this, the total land left behind by Muslims in India is a little over five million acres. It is an undisputed fact that the land left behind by Hindus and Sikhs in West Pakistan is rich fertile land irrigated by one of the finest canal systems in the world. Muslim-abandoned land in India is much inferior in quality.

The urban properties left behind by Hindus and Sikhs in Pakistan, including houses, plots and industrial undertakings, total up to 4.7 lakhs. Muslims have left behind in India less than 3 lakh urban properties. It is generally admitted that the houses of Hindus and Sikhs in West Pakistan were better built and more valuable than Muslim houses in India.

In solving the staggering problem of rehabilitating the refugees, the States played their part admirably. Below are given how Bombay, Punjab, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal, the four States where along with Delhi more than 90 per cent. of the displaced persons are rehabilitated, faced this problem during the year under review.

Bombay had to absorb over 2.5 lakhs of displaced persons mainly from Sind. It can be said now that the Government of Bombay has to a large extent succeeded in solving the problem of their rehabilitation. Every possible State assistance was given to them to rehabilitate themselves with extension of various concessions, State loans and other facilities, establishment of their settlements and townships and other measures.

Immense progress has been made in the Punjab during the past 12 months in the rehabilitation of displaced persons. Various schemes introduced to provide residential and business accommodation to the displaced population and also provide financial assistance for different purposes have been progressing well.

In the 14 new townships, hundreds of new houses and sheds were built and plots laid out and sold to the people. To cater to the requirements of people of lower income groups 14 cheap housing schemes have been developed in the State. Since August, 1951 about 2,600 cheap houses were built and another 500 are now under construction.

Other efforts for the rehabilitation of the urban population relate to the provision of gainful employment to them. The most important of these efforts is the scheme of industrial townships which have been planned at Jullundur, Ludhiana, Jagadhri, Panipat, Sonapat, and Bahadurgarh. Out of 1,700 plots laid out in these areas for construction of factories on them, about 1,000 have been already allotted. Construction work on 79 more factories was started during the year.

Loans were also given to help the displaced persons in rehabilitating themselves. House-building loans aggregating to Rs. 28.01 lakhs were disbursed since August 1951. Displaced students were given help in the shape of cash grants and stipends. Loans are also advanced by the Rehabilitation Finance Administration for the construction of factories in the industrial areas of the State. During the year this organisation had sanctioned loan amounting to over Rs. 7 lakhs to 46 industrialists.

The scheme for training displaced persons in various crafts was revised during the year, and the rate of stipends per trainee raised from Rs. 25 to Rs. 30 per mensem. Four training-cum-production centres have been opened in the women's home where work was provided to 403 women workers and trainees. In addition to these, three training-cum-production centres have been established in the infirmaries at Khanna, Palwal, and Rewari townships.

The Work Centre Scheme aims at providing means of gainful employment for persons living in mud-hut colonies or outside these colonies. Industries and crafts selected for this purpose include mainly those which can be organised on the basis of cottage industries such as smithy, weaving, spinning, hosiery, button manufacturing, etc. Fifteen such centres are being run in the State at present.

As regards the rural population, the State Government made their rehabilitation possible by giving quasi-permanent lands for cultivation, and loans for the purchase of tools, implements, tractors, pumping sets and other agricultural requirements. The total amount of loan so far given is about Rs. 4.4 crores.

In Uttar Pradesh, rehabilitation of displaced persons was regarded by the Government as a matter of great importance. It was found possible during the year to close down relief camps; free feeding and other relief measures are being extended now only to destitute widows and unattached children at widows' homes and orphanages.

For the housing of the displaced persons the Government has constructed over 7,000 pucca houses and over 2,000 wooden stalls and more are under construction. A scheme for an additional 3,500 single-room quarters and 1,530 double-room quarters was under way. The schemes for developing new townships for displaced persons were launched at Modinagar and Hastinapur in Meerut district, at Naini in Allahabad district and Krishnanagar in Mathura district. They are expected to provide accommodation and employment to about 10,000 families.

A large number of families of displaced agriculturists have been settled in the Ganga Kadar and Tarai colonization areas and nearly 18,000 acres of land have been allotted to them. Loans have been advanced by the Government to enable displaced persons to settle in trade or agriculture. The scheme of loans to students was revised and non-recoverable stipends under the revised scheme were granted to students reading in colleges and technical institutions. Training-cum-production centres were being run for displaced women at several places. For the rehabilitation of displaced persons from East Pakistan the State Government agreed to settle fifty families on land suitable for jute cultivation. At the request of the West Bengal Government, the Government of Uttar Pradesh also agreed to the establishment of a home at Chunar, in Mirzapur district for 250 families and unattached displaced women and children, from East Pakistan and to arrange for their training in various arts and crafts.

With these and similar other measures a large majority of the displaced persons in Uttar Pradesh have been placed again on their feet.

A statistical survey made by the Government of West Bengal in December 1951 placed the total number of refugees in the State at 2,301,514. Admissions into camps since then have been 79,805.

The schemes for their rehabilitation included settlement in Government-sponsored colonies of 44,963 families, on khas mahal lands of 9,005 families, rehabilitation on lands acquired by Government of 135,008 families, under the Union Board schemes of 13,918 families, rehabilitation by private negotiation of 13,051 families and schemes for temporary cultivation of migrants' lands of 71,955 families making the total of 287,900 families or 1,439,500 persons taking five persons per family as the average.

Urban schemes were grants of house-building loans, professional loans and business loans; and rural schemes were land purchase loans, house-building loans, business loans, small trade loans, agricultural loans and loans for weavers, paddy-huskers, and horticulturists. Facilities were provided for education and vocational and technical training; and employment was secured through the employment exchanges.

Up to December 1951, the West Bengal Government had spent Rs. 10 crores on grants and loans and Rs. 13 crores on relief, education and technical training.

CHAPTER XIII

THE DEFENCE SERVICES

Any record of events in this country during any period since Independence will be incomplete without allotting a proud place to the splendid service the Armed Forces have rendered to the country. Not only by their steadfastness, loyalty and patriotism but by their wholehearted and willing cooperation with the people of this land in their fight against the sufferings and disasters that unfortunately visited them more often since Independence than before, have the men in uniform earned the admiration and gratitude of their countrymen. We as a nation have every reason to be proud of our Services whose personnel are not only the defenders of our frontiers but also the real and sincere servants of the people.

During the year the Armed Forces had not such spectacular tasks as suppressing Razakars in Hyderabad or checking the Tribal and Pakistani invaders in Kashmir. Yet, enough has happened across the border to warrant India's strengthening her defence. During the year there were about a hundred raids on Indian territory from across the Pakistan border. Armed Pakistanis have, now and then, tried to take forcible possession of narrow strips of Indian territory lying on the border. Our gallant men standing guard on the borders have acquitted themselves in a manner that has discouraged the enemy from further and greater ventures.

India was, during the year, "threatened" by the clenched fist of Pakistan. India alerted herself quickly on the matter. Troops were moved to the border and stationed at vulnerable points. Pakistan's clenched fist was no more a threat to this land.

In India as everywhere else in the world, the primary role of the Armed Forces is the defence of the country. To effectively defend the country when called for the task, they must, during peace time, train themselves for war. To begin at the source of training, there is the National Defence Academy. The Academy will be permanently located at Khadakvasla, near Poona, where buildings are now under construction. Meanwhile the old Indian Military Academy at Dehra Dun, to which has been added a Joint Services Wing, is functioning as the Provisional National Defence Academy. Here experiments in primary combined training for the Cadets of the three Services, the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, have been going on for more than four years now and already Cadets to be trained under this scheme have been commissioned.

The other Inter-Services Training Institution is the Staff College at Wellington. This college trains officers to the three Services for command and staff appointments and consummates the work of Inter-Services Cooperation. In a ten-month course completed at the college during the year under review selected students from the U. K., the U. S. A., Canada and Australia participated on a reciprocal basis. There are also other training institutions of the different Arms of the Services. They are being progressively developed.

The need for self-sufficiency in arms and equipment cannot be over-emphasized in a neutral country like India that plays an important role in world politics and occupies the strategic position that she occupies today. Self sufficiency has been reached in regard to some items. In others it has not been reached due mainly to the shortage of essential materials, lack of qualified technicians and skilled labour and housing shortage. The machine tool prototype factory which comes under the production projects, is in its final stages of completion; and the artisan training school attached to it has accepted the second batch of 100 students for a three-year course of technical instruction.

In the modern world, defence science is very important. The Defence Science Organisation established in 1948 has made steady and good progress. The Defence Science Services will be instituted soon, which will include civilian scientists employed in the Ministry of Defence and in the Services. Independent of this service, an institute of armament studies will also be established which will carry out research in the performance of weapons and equipment.

No country in the world can afford to maintain during peace time fighting forces large enough to meet all its requirements in any emergency without straining its resources in men and material; and even the biggest armies in the world need replacements to make good the loss sustained in war. Hence the need for reserves. In India it has been decided to have a regular reserve of officers for the Army and the Air Force and details are now being worked out.

The Territorial Army was created in 1949 as a second line of defence. Recruitment to this Army, which is still in the formative stage, is progressing well. A number of units have already gone through two annual training camps and others will soon be receiving their training. Essentially a citizen army, it depends on the voluntary cooperation of the people to make it a success. A measure of assurance for the future has been provided by a recent piece of legislation giving security of service in their civil employment to those who join the Territorial Army.

In any emergency this Army will take the place of the Regular Army for maintaining internal security; it will be responsible for anti-aircraft and coastal defence and will provide field formation and units for the Regular Army, if and when required.

The National Cadet Corps, an organisation intended to give a background of military training to the youth of the country and to infuse in them a sense of discipline, has caught the imagination of our school and college students. An important addition to the Corps during the year was the Naval Wing consisting of two units. It already had a number of Air Wing Units. For the first time a batch of 15 cadets recruited directly for the National Cadet Corps have passed out of the Military Wing of the National Defence Academy. The Government has reserved a certain percentage of vacancies at the National Defence Academy for the N.C.C. Cadets.

Indian Navy

Owing to the need for exercising the strictest economy over expenditure and also owing to the difficulties of obtaining new ships, India could not expand her Navy at the pace she would like. During the year the emphasis was more on consolidation than on expansion. Even now for the training of officers we are depending on the facilities provided by the United Kingdom and Naval exercises are carried out with ships of the British Navy and Aircraft of the Indian Air Force and the Royal Air Force. But in the case of other ranks our naval training establishments are quite adequate; and training institutions are being expanded.

There are plans to establish a naval air station at Cochin and form a fleet requirement unit early next year. When formed it will provide the much-needed and essential air cooperation and anti-aircraft gunnery training for our ships as also training in sea reconnaissance and other duties. A steady stream of personnel who receive training here will form the nucleus for more rapid expansion when this becomes possible. The Navy soon hopes to form a "Fleet Train", that is, tankers, and repair and store ships. The Navy does not now have an aircraft carrier; yet every effort is made to keep in touch with modern trends and train the Navy's technical personnel accordingly so that the Navy can man the latest type of aircraft and ships as and when India acquires them.

India will soon have a modern Navy with an air-component and supporting shore organisations and training schools. But where does our Navy stand now? Admiral W. E. Parry just before relinquishing his post as Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy, said: "The Indian Navy has made remarkable progress in modern naval methods and in handling of modern ships, both as individuals and as a squadron. I feel confident that the Indian Navy would be capable of defending India in any maritime danger that might arise."

During the year also the Navy continued to act as an ambassador of goodwill to our neighbours. Ships of our Naval squadron visited Thailand, Indonesia and Malaya. In addition to providing valuable sea training these visits help to strengthen the ties of friendship between India and her neighbours.

Indian Air Force

Since Independence, the Indian Air Force has been working steadily towards its goal of providing air defence for the country. Every year has recorded valuable progress. As for training facilities, the Force is self-sufficient. The rigorous methods of recruitment and training ensure entry only of the best into this young service; India thus provides very fine material.

Like the Army the Air Force has rendered the people commendable service, the execution of which calls for a high standard of experience and skill. Among the many humanitarian operations carried on by the Air Force, mention must be made of the food-dropping in the areas in Assam which were affected by flood and earthquake.

The Hindusthan Aircraft Ltd. have designed and built the first Indian trainer, and initial trials have been very satisfactory. This is a great step forward in the field of aircraft production.

Off-the-field Activities

India's Armed Forces have an equally glorious record off the field. In distant Korea the Indian Field Ambulance fights not any human being but sickness and disease and brings relief to the victims of war, civilians as well as soldiers. This Ambulance has won international fame and its work has been duly appreciated by the grant of a number of awards.

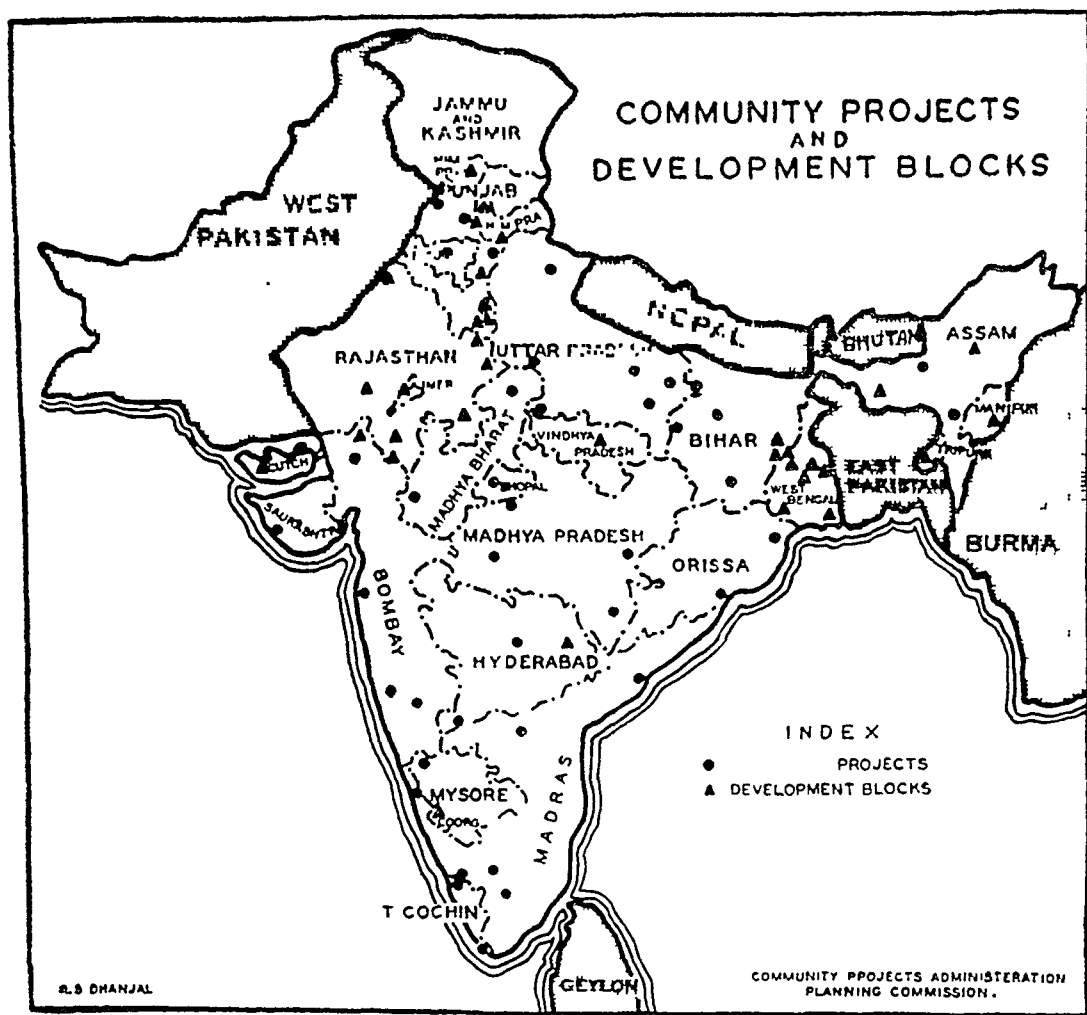

Within the country the Armed Forces have come closer to the people during the year. While in previous years they have helped in alleviating the sufferings caused by floods, earthquakes, locust invasions, etc., this year they have helped effectively to avert threatened disasters. What they have done in Saurashtra and in Rayalaseema are fresh in our memory. After their splendid work in Rayalaseema Shri C. Rajagopalachari, the Chief Minister of Madras, wrote to the Prime Minister: "The Army units have done an excellent piece of work, blasting the rocks and deepening about 120 wells in scarcely five weeks. The high hopes and great welcome with which they were received by the public wherever they went has been equalled by the success which has attended their task. They carry the gratitude of the entire population of the distressed areas and of my Government."

Our men in uniform have shown considerable interest in productive activities like Grow More Food campaign and tree plantation. By the end of 1951 the Army had cultivated 21,966 acres of land and produced about 9,000 tons of crops.

Finally, it must be recorded that though the division of the country had badly disorganised the Services, within the short period since Independence not only have the losses been made good, but the expansion of the Forces has also been kept steady and continuous. And today India's Armed Forces are well-organised, well-trained and well-equipped.

Ex-Servicemen

The Service personnel gives the best years of his life to the service of the country. In recognition of this the Government has formulated a number of schemes for the re-establishment of those servicemen who have to begin life anew after release. These schemes fall under five heads, viz., employment in Government or private service, settlement on land, vocational or technical training and industrial apprenticeship, formation of transport societies and organisation of small-scale industries.

CHAPTER XIV

THE FIVE-YEAR PLAN

The Five-Year Plan is conceived against the background of certain existing problems which have to be solved in the immediate present, like high prices of imported commodities on account of wartime inflation followed by a period of decontrol ; shortages of raw materials ; relief and rehabilitation of displaced persons ; existing development programme of the Central and State Governments, etc. It is a plan for a period of transition and its purpose is to restore equilibrium in the national economy while building the potential for rapid development in the future.

The draft outline of the Five-Year Plan was published by the Planning Commission in July 1951. Although the final report on the Plan has not yet been published, the Plan is in operation since April last year, and now the second year of the Plan is running.

During the year several steps have been taken for the implementation of the Plan at the Centre as well as in the States. The State Governments have set up special machinery for the implementation of the Plan for their respective areas and effective liaison between the Planning Commission and the machinery set up in the States has been established. The Commission has held discussions with different States regarding problems arising in the course of the year for the implementation of the Plan as well as on the programme of work expected to be completed in the next four years.

Although the State Governments have not yet succeeded in taking action in certain spheres as recommended by the Commission, every State has been trying to adapt its programme to the framework indicated in the Five-Year Plan. In each State, community projects are the special responsibility of the personnel responsible for co-ordinating all activities under the Five-Year Plan. The Five-Year Plan is now being organised into district plans, so that local initiative can be developed and local resources mobilised to the greatest extent possible. Planning Commission has not only sent directive and rendered assistance to the State Governments on important matters (like distribution of waters of the Krishna and Godavari rivers), but also ensured that projects should be scrutinised thoroughly prior to incurring any expenditure on them. Kosi and Chambal projects have been investigated and the Krishna-Pennar project is under the examination of a technical committee, constituted by the Commission.

The year 1951-52 saw the first steps in planning being taken. The Central Government budget considered the financial needs of the Plan and incorporated certain necessary measures to raise Central finances to the required level on the line indicated by the estimates made in connection with the Colombo Plan. In the case of the State Governments, the plans were finalised about the middle of 1951 and accordingly it was thought that action to bring their plans, including their targets of expenditure and of resources, in line with the provisions of the Five-Year Plan would be taken later.

A comparison of the revised estimates for 1951-52 and the budget estimates for 1952-53 with the provision made for these two years in the draft outline of the Five-Year Plan reveals that the scale of expenditure as indicated in the Plan has been closely adhered to. The total expenditure for the two years has been put down at Rs. 333 crores as compared to Rs. 316 crores in the draft outline report. Financial assistance from the Centre has to be rendered for about 25% of the expenditure on the State plans. The Central Government's expenditure on its own development programme and assistance to State Governments indicates that in respect of about 60% of the Plan, the outlay has been proceeding according to schedule.

During 1951-52 it has not been possible for the State Governments to take adequate steps to bring up additional revenues on the lines recommended in the draft outline report and the expenditure in the States sector is at present below the levels indicated in the Plan. The Commission has given special attention to the increase, often inevitable, in the level of non-development expenditure of some States and to the difficulties arising out of natural calamities in certain others.

In order to implement the agricultural programme in toto the Planning Commission had to undertake a reappraisal of the programmes as well as targets in this field before finalising them. With the cooperation of the Ministry of Food and Agriculture and through a series of discussions with the representatives of the State Governments on the basis of the data received from them, the Commission has concluded its work of reappraisal. The report of the committee appointed in January 1952 to review specifically the Grow More Food programmes of the States was also published in June 1952.

With the enactment of the Industries Development (Regulation and Control) Act on the lines recommended by the Planning Commission, facilities for planning in the private sphere are now available. Steps are being taken to establish Development Councils for a number of industries. During the year, certain measures were initiated with a view to increasing the production of pig iron and steel in the country in quantities larger than what was recommended in the draft outline. Provision has been made in the 1952-53 budget for establishing a pig iron plant and negotiations for expanding pig iron and steel production are in progress with the International Bank as well as with Japan. It is expected that on the industrial side the Plan will be adequately strengthened.

With a view to increasing rural employment, it has been decided to take special measures for the development of khadi production. The Government has under consideration the imposition of a cess of three pies per yard on all mill-made cloth and the establishment, from the proceeds of this cess, of a Khadi Development Fund. The Ministry of Commerce and Industry is engaged in reorganising its set-up for cottage and small-scale industries, so that an active programme of support and assistance to cottage and small-scale industries can be pursued. The problems of distressed industries like hand-weaving and coir are receiving special attention. The Government of India recently decided that in the purchase of stores, preference should be given to products of cottage and small-scale industries.

The Five-Year Plan provides a total sum of Rs. 18 crores for the amelioration of backward classes in addition to the amount provided by the Central Government under Article 275 of the Constitution. The development of scheduled tribes and scheduled areas is not to be held back on financial considerations. The Planning Commission hopes to give greater attention to this problem and to suggest the provision of funds on such a scale as may be administratively feasible. The amount provided in the draft Five-Year Plan need not be regarded as the maximum available for the development of scheduled tribes and scheduled areas.

For the development of the North-East Frontier Tribal area, a scheme costing Rs. 3 crores was prepared by the Planning Commission for the five-year period beginning 1952. While the scheme includes development projects in agriculture, forestry, education and health, by far the largest expenditure has been earmarked for development of communication which is of paramount importance in the area.

The Planning Commission has recently accepted special responsibilities in relation to the Indo-U.S. Technical Cooperation Programme and the community projects. Eleven operational agreements and two technical assistance agreements have been concluded between the Government of India and the Government of the United States of America within the general framework of the Indo-U.S. Technical Cooperation Agreement of January 5, 1952. The Technical Cooperation Agreement of January 5, 1952 provides for a fifty million fund (more commonly known as Fund A) for expenditure on agreed projects. There is also additional provision for expenditure from outside Fund A on projects which are primarily in the nature of technical assistance like provision of training facilities, technical service, etc. Projects financed out of Fund A come under the category of operational agreements and those from outside Fund A are known as technical assistance projects.

The eleven operation agreements relate to the community development programme, construction of 2,000 tubewells in Uttar Pradesh, Punjab, Bihar and PEPSU, supply of fertilisers, technical assistance and equipment for research on fertiliser use and soil fertility, supply of steel for agriculture, development of marine fisheries, locust control, training of village-level workers for community projects, malaria control, forest research and control of the spread of desert in Rajasthan, and construction plant and equipment for some of the river valley projects in India.

The two technical assistance agreements relate to a survey of the possibilities of expansion of Sindri Fertiliser Plant and supply of engineering services to the Damodar Valley Corporation.

Community Development Programme

An important programme of work launched under the auspices of the Planning Commission during 1952 relate to the Community Development Programme which is being partly assisted from funds obtained from the United States of America under the Indo-American Technical Cooperation Agreement. Under this programme, 55 community projects spread all over India will start operations on October 2. The preliminary survey of the project areas and the training of the staff have almost been completed. A training camp for the project officers who will be actually in charge of the field operations in their respective areas was held in Nilokheri during July-August this year.

The Planning Commission in its capacity as the central committee of the Indo-American Technical Cooperation Agreement gives the policy direction regarding the community development programme and the execution is under the charge of a special organisation set up within the Commission and called the Community Projects Administration with an administrator as its head.

The 55 community projects at present selected will cover about 18,000 villages with a population of about 15 millions. The estimated expenditure on the projects is about Rs. 38.8 crores of which the dollar expenditure representing the American aid is about Rs. 4 crores.

The project areas have been selected in all the States. Each project comprises of about 300 villages with a population of about 200,000. Where for any reason, a full project area is not justified, the Planning Commission has allotted development blocks each consisting of about 100 villages with between 60,000 and 70,000 people. The statewise allocation of projects and development blocks is as follows :

Assam (2 projects and 2 development blocks) ; Bihar (4 projects and 1 development block) ; Bombay (4 projects and 1 development block) ; Madhya Pradesh (4 projects) ; Madras (6 projects) ; Orissa (3 projects) ; Punjab (4 projects) ; Uttar Pradesh (6 projects) ; West Bengal (8 development blocks) ; Hyderabad (2 projects and 1 development block) ; Madhya Bharat (2 projects) ; Mysore (1 project) ; PEPSU (1 project) ; Rajasthan (7 development blocks) ; Saurashtra (1 project) ; Travancore-Cochin (2 projects) ; Ajmer (1 development block) ; Bilaspur (1 development block) ; Bhopal (1 project) ; Coorg (1 development block) ; Delhi (1 development block) ; Himachal Pradesh (1 project) ; Kutch (1 development block) ; Manipur (1 development block) ; Tripura (1 development block) ; Vindhya Pradesh (1 development block).

The community development programme is basically different from any other rural development programme. It is not a mere conglomeration of some of the development projects in the sphere of agriculture, health, education, transport or communication, but an organised attempt whereby the villagers themselves can become, as the Prime Minister said, the "Makers of their Destiny". The programme is, therefore, not an imposition from the top but is wholly a people's programme which must be carried out by the people themselves with such assistance from the State as may be required.

The Planning Commission has given a good deal of thought to the role of the people in national development as democratic planning will not succeed unless the sanction of an awakened public opinion operates powerfully and the force of public action, in pursuit of constructive ends, continually grows. The ignorance and apathy of large numbers have to be overcome. The Commission has, therefore, evolved a set of proposals aimed at creating a national organisation for large-scale constructive work on a voluntary basis.

This body, known as the Bharat Sevak Samaj, has been formed with the object of enlisting active public participation in all constructive work especially the Five-Year Plan. The Samaj is a non-political body and is open to any individual who can devote a certain part of his time and energy in constructive work. Only those who engage or profess faith in violent or subversive activities or communal hatred or have any connection with an organisation which countenances such activities are excluded from membership.

The Planning Commission has also constituted a National Advisory Committee on Public Cooperation which met for the first time in August this year. The committee which consists of leaders of different political parties and leading social workers of the country is intended to advise and guide the Planning Commission on all important matters bearing on public cooperation in national development. The National Advisory Committee for Public Cooperation also acts as the National Advisory Committee for the Bharat Sevak Samaj.

The functions of the National Advisory Committee are :

- (a) to review and assess the progress of public cooperation in relation to national development ;
- (b) to advise the Planning Commission from time to time regarding the progress of public cooperation in relation to the fulfilment of the national plan ;
- (c) to receive reports from the Central Board of the Bharat Sevak Samaj and to consider such specific matters as may be referred to it for advice by the Central Board ; and
- (d) to make recommendations and suggestions to the Central Board of the Bharat Sevak Samaj on matters of policy and on programmes relating to public cooperation.

The Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission will be the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the National Advisory Committee and the Member-in-charge of Social Service and Public Cooperation in the Planning Commission will act as Secretary of the Committee.

The Central Government has accepted in principle the proposal made in the Planning Commission's draft outline for setting up a National Development Council to strengthen and mobilise the effort and resources of the nation to support the Plan, to promote common economic policies in all vital spheres and to ensure the rapid development of all parts of the country. The fulfilment of the Plan calls for nationwide cooperation in the tasks of development, cooperation between the Central Government and the States, the States and the local authorities with voluntary social service agencies engaged in constructive work, between the administration and the people, as well as among the people themselves. Accordingly, the council was set up in August and the following functions were assigned to it :

- (i) to review the working of the National Plan from time to time ;
- (ii) to consider important questions of social and economic policy affecting national development ; and
- (iii) to recommend measures for the achievement of the aims and targets set out in the National Plan, including measures to secure the active participation and cooperation of the people, improve the efficiency of the administrative service, ensure the fullest development of the less advanced regions and sections of the community and, through sacrifice borne equally by all citizens, build up resources for national development.

The National Development Council, which will make its recommendations to the Central and State Governments will include the Prime Minister of India and the Chief Ministers of all States and the Members of the Planning Commission on its membership.

CHAPTER XV

THE GENERAL ELECTIONS

No event in this country since Independence is as significant as the General Elections that were held during the year on the basis of adult franchise. The eyes of the world were focused on India during those days. The nations of the world, and especially countries with a higher degree of literacy, looked at India with wondering eyes. It baffled many of them how a country that has sustained so many shocks and faced so many stupendous problems could settle down within a matter of a few years to conduct the most prodigious elections in the history of free and secret ballot the world has ever known. Great as India's achievements were during the last few years, greater still was this act of hers.

Politically speaking, the Indian election would rank as the greatest demonstration on earth. Elections took place all over this vast land of long distances and of poor means of communication. What amount of skill and labour was involved in arranging elections in lakhs of the inaccessible villages of the country! How many means of communication were to be employed before the preliminary arrangements for the election could be made! And how perfectly were the minutest details like building of polling booths, providing boarding and lodging for election officers and police protection looked into! And what a task it was to see that all the election material and the election officers reached the places of voting in time! The magnitude of the task can be gauged better if only it is remembered that preparations like the above were made for the participation in the election of 174.8 million voters, about 85 per cent. of whom were illiterate; and in addition to providing for the voters to cast their votes twice in each constituency, in double-member and treble-member constituencies extra arrangements had to be made for the election of one or two more representatives respectively. Added to this is the fact that almost all the seats were contested by several candidates which by itself gave greater labour in the conduct of the election.

The Government had to see that the election was conducted free and fair and in a peaceful and orderly manner. Arrangements for the election in this regard was almost perfect. From the fairness of the election and the secrecy and freeness of the ballot to the most trivial of details, everything was done with a sense of fair-play and decorum that would give credit to any Government in any country in the world. The election authorities, the election officers and even the policemen on duty behaved in a way as much as to say: "Democracy can function in our land as much as anywhere else in the world; we know how to conduct a fair election efficiently and orderly."

Realising the fact that to make the election a real success the illiterate voter must be educated to exercise his franchise intelligently, the Government took some effective steps. A series of broadcasts explaining the basic principles of democracy, adult franchise, procedure for election, preparation of electoral rolls, delimitation of constituencies, etc., was given on the eve of the election. Such talks were arranged not only in English but in all regional languages from all stations of the All-India Radio. This series was followed by talks, from all stations starting four to six weeks before the polling dates in each area, on the mechanics of election like ballot box, voting procedure, and advice against corrupt practices. Of special importance was the series of talks given by the Chief Election Commissioner which received wide publicity. Within the period from November 1951 to January 1952 more than 100 talks in several languages were given from the different stations of the All-India Radio.

The Government decided that broadcasting facilities should not be made available to any political party for electioneering purposes. In implementation of this decision the news-bulletins of the All-India Radio confined their publicity work to the electoral policy of parties on the basis of election manifestoes, speeches and statements of leaders and party statements designed to educate the electorate in regard to their responsibilities as voters without bringing any party interests, and factual news about the formation of parties and groups within the parties and their objectives.

Announcements of local election results were arranged from all stations of the All-India Radio when polling began, regional stations giving in their local announcements the voting figures in each constituency as obtained officially from the Chief Electoral Officer. A general round-up of the results of the day was included in the main news-bulletins from the Central News-Room of the All-India Radio. In order to assist the Press and the news-agencies, an up-to-date analysis of returns was supplied by the Press Information Bureau from figures obtained from the Chief Election Commissioner providing detailed information regarding votes cast, party affiliation of candidates and the up-to-date party positions in the State and Central Legislatures.

Two films dealing specifically with elections had been prepared, one entitled "Rights and Responsibilities" and the other entitled "Democracy in Action", which were distributed through the Films Division Circuits consisting of 3,197 commercial cinemas besides mobile cinema vans and portable projectors of State Governments. At the request of the Chief Election Commissioner, 720 copies of the film "Democracy in Action" were distributed in nine languages—Hindi, Bengali, Tamil, Telugu, English, Gujarati, Kannada, Marathi and Malayalam—and copies of this film were also made available to individuals and political parties on payment. Commercial cinemas have at least two shows a day, and the audience can be estimated at 300 people per show and the working days at at least 300 a year.

The Publications Division brought out a pamphlet entitled "Your Rights as a Voter" explaining the voter's rights, delimitation of constituencies, reservation of seats, polling procedure, etc., while the Press Information Bureau issued a series of articles on the mechanics of election in English and six Indian languages which received wide publicity in the Press.

The Government took special care to see that the services of the Posts and Telegraphs Department were not only available for election work but used without party discriminations. This department has done such a clean service that it would be the pride of any Government to have directed the work of one of its departments in such a disinterested manner during a country-wide election. All the special steps that were taken and the special privileges that were extended were enjoyed by all parties alike.

Among the numerous extra activities of this department mention must be made of the special steps that were taken in ensuring the delivery of election literature posted by candidates of all parties within a period of two days in urban areas and seven days in rural areas. Facilities for the posting and delivery of mails including registered articles, on all days of the week not excluding Sundays and post office holidays, were provided to the Election Commission. Similar facilities, except that of delivery of mails on Sundays, were extended to the Regional Election Commissioners and the Chief Electoral Officers of the States. All candidates of all political parties contesting elections were allowed to book and also collect their registered mail at the window of the post office on post office holidays, on which days no booking or delivery of registered articles is normally effected.

The post office was also called upon to handle a very large number of postal ballot-papers from Defence Services personnel and public servants engaged on polling duties. On these postal ballot-papers the use of service postage stamps was authorised to obviate the voter having to pay the postage charges himself. Special instructions were issued to all post offices to ensure careful and expeditious handling of election correspondence at all stages, particularly of postal ballot-papers.

Temporary telephone connections were given to the candidates, parties and Press. Each candidate, irrespective of the party to which he belonged, was given two connections in large cities and one at other stations, for a period of two months. Connections given to parties and newspapers were extended for a period of six months. The department also put out a pamphlet entitled "This is how we are going to serve you" detailing the facilities being extended by it to candidates and political parties.

It will be of interest to know the following facts which are of statistical importance. The total number of voters in the country was 174,777,647, the total number of constituencies 2,703 and the total number of the House of the People constituencies 401. The number of those who exercised their franchise was about 107 millions, that is, over 61 per cent. The vast electorate returned the Congress Party with absolute majority in the House of the People and in 18 out of 22 States ; in the other four States, Congress came out as the single largest party and in all the States except one (PEPSU) Congress is in power today. Congress won 362 out of the 489 elective seats for the House of the People and 2,247 out of 3,280 for the State Assemblies. The more important of those who came next in numerical strength in the House of the People are the Independents, the Communists, the Kisan Mazdoor Praja Party and the Socialists, and in the States Assemblies they are the Independents, the Communists, the Socialists, the K.M.P.P. and the Jan Sangh. Nineteen women candidates were returned to the House of the People and 82 to the State Assemblies.

The trends of the polling too are worth mentioning. The State that polled the largest percentage of votes is Travancore-Cochin with 70.8 per cent. for the House of the People and 69.37 per cent. for the State Assembly, Coorg following closely with 67.46 per cent. and 65.87 per cent. respectively. The States which polled the lowest percentages of votes are Vindhya Pradesh and Himachal Pradesh with the corresponding figures at 30.23 and 29.61, and 26.26 and 36.68 respectively. While in constituencies like Kottayam in Travancore-Cochin (80.5), Alleppey in Travancore-Cochin (78.1) and Gudivada in Madras (77) very high percentages of voters exercised their rights, in some polling stations in Jaipur and in some jungle areas in Orissa not a single voter turned to exercise his right. It is almost incredible, but all the same a fact, that 60 per cent. of the rural population exercised their votes as against 40 per cent. of the urban. The three constituencies where the successful candidates secured the highest percentages of votes are Baster in Madhya Pradesh (83), Vikarabad in Hyderabad (77) and Chaibassa in Bihar (75.9).

The conduct of this election extending over a period of about 3½ months kept a staff of nearly 5 lakhs drawn from teachers, Government servants and employees of local bodies engaged in manning the 224,000 polling booths and counting the 103.52 million votes in the Assembly election and 107.51 million votes in the House of the People election.

About 75 parties contested the election, quite a few of them having sprung up on the eve of the election. The various parties organised themselves and fought the election, by and large, on a decent plane.

Being the primus inter pares of the political parties in the country, the Indian National Congress had a stupendous task to perform during the election. The Congress had set up candidates in almost all the constituencies in the country. In selecting its candidates, in carrying on its propaganda and publicity and in the manifold tasks that fell on it during those busy days, the All-India Congress Committee office tuned itself up and worked with a degree of zeal and enthusiasm that has not been witnessed in that office on any other occasion after Independence. While not belittling the mite of the most obscure of workers, it must be said that the Congress owed its victory very largely to Shri Jawaharlal Nehru, the Congress President, who conducted a meteoric tour all over the country covering 18,056 miles by plane, 5,266 miles by car, 1,612 miles by train and 90 miles by boat in about nine weeks and addressing in the process millions of people at thousands of places, which is a record for any individual in any election.

The historical background and the high ideals with which the Congress sustained itself during the days of its struggle for Independence, made it inevitable that this party should demand for, and conduct election on, universal adult suffrage. That the Congress has succeeded in this regard would speak volumes about this organisation. The Congress Governments had taken particular care to see that all the political prisoners who wanted to participate in the election were released well in time. The political parties were allowed to carry on propaganda including criticism of the Congress Governments that were in power at the Centre and in the States with a degree of freedom which, one would wonder whether any other contesting party, if it were in power, would have allowed in this country.

The fairness of the election has been justified by the success that different parties had, though in isolated parts of the country. The election has shown not only that the Indian people are disciplined and democratically-minded but that our administrative machinery is capable of handling so vast an operation. The election has proved that the Congress has redeemed one of its major pledges by incorporating the principle of adult franchise in the Constitution and putting it into operation within such a short time after Independence. The election has above all proved how anxious those who are at the helm of affairs were to secure the mandate of the people in the ruling of the land.

is noted for her non-mulberry Silk such as Eri and Muga from time immemorial. The culture of Eri and Muga until recently was not known anywhere else in the world. Although Eri has been cultured in some other parts of India, Assam with all her natural and climatic advantages, still remains the foremost competitor while Muga culture is unknown to the Sericulturists in the world except in Assam.

2. Eri and Muga are the two potential assets of the Province as Sir Thomas Wardle says in his interesting hand book on Indian Silk—"Her Assamese women are clad in Silk of Eri and Muga of which we have yet known practically nothing, and silken stuffs are handed down from matron to spinster but little worse for the wear of a generation".

3. Our present annual production of empty Eri-Cocoons and Muga yarn is approximately 4,00,000 and 1,00,000 lbs. respectively. Lovely fabrics of creamy white and golden colour of Eri and Muga respectively and golden Muga yarn for embroidery work and fishing lines can be had at a reasonable price with the Assam Co-operative Silk House Ltd., Pan Bazar, P.O. Similarly, an order in the course of liquidation proceedings settling the list of contributors will become res judicata if not appealed against and cannot be re-opened at a subsequent stage of the same proceedings.^{15a} But a liquidator in the winding-up of a company or a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to ask the Proceedings under the Oaths Act.—A determination of a matter in issue otherwise than by the Court is not a judicium and will not operate as res judicata. Therefore, the decision of a question of title in accordance with the Oaths Act is not an adjudication which can operate as an estoppel when the same question of title is again raised in another suit regarding another property. This is because the terms of the Act indicate that the party consents to be bound only in respect of the subject-matter of the pending proceedings.¹⁷ But a decree arrived at after taking of an oath on a question of fact in the case is nonetheless a final adjudication and binding as regards the precise question raised in the former suit.¹⁸

1. A sues B for adjustment of accounts and for recovery of sums found due. A decree is passed in favour of A for Rs. 680. A and B both appeal, A on the ground that more is due and B on the ground that nothing is due to plaintiff but that money is due to him. Both the appeals are tried together and a single judgment is passed, whereby B is granted a decree for Rs. 1,400. A's appeal being dismissed, A prefers a second appeal from the decree in B's appeal but not from the decree in his own appeal. Is the second appeal barred by res judicata by reason of not appealing from the decree in his own appeal? No; by the dismissal of his appeal, the decree of the lower Court in his favour for Rs. 680 was simply confirmed and his not appealing from such a decree will not on any ground disentitle him to appeal against the grant of any relief to B in his appeal. If he succeeds in his second appeal, there is nothing to conflict with the decision in his favour for Rs. 680.¹

2. A sues B on a mortgage. B contends that the interest claimed is excessive. The suit is decreed in favour of A as claimed but costs are disallowed. A appeals against the disallowance of costs and B against the award of interest. In a single judgment both appeals are disposed of by which A is given the disallowed costs in his appeal and interest also is reduced in B's appeal. A then prefers a

(23) AIR 1923 Pat 174 (176). (Doctrine of constructive res judicata does not apply to proceedings under Bengal Tenancy Act, Ss. 109 and 105.)

1 and Madras¹⁰ that such an appeal is not barred. The basis of these decisions is that 31 Section 11 does not in terms apply to appeals but that the general principles of res judicata apply, that in applying such general principles, the substance and not the form of the appeal should be considered, that so considering it, the object of the appeal against one of the decrees is really and in substance to get rid of the adjudication or conclusion which gives rise to both the decrees, and that if the appeal succeeds it would have the effect of superseding the decree in the other. It was further observed in Mt. Lachhmi v. Bhulli, A.I.R. 1927 Lahore 289 (F.B.):

"The foundation of the rule of res judicata as understood by ancient and modern lawyers is that a question must be once fairly and finally tried by a competent Court and after this has been done all further litigation about it should be concluded for ever between the parties. The maxim is "no one shall be vexed twice over the same matter." This pre-supposes that the issue has been once fairly and finally tried in a former litigation which was independent of the proceedings in which the same matter is again in dispute. The essence of the rule seems to be that the two proceedings should be so independent of each other that the trial of one cannot be confused with the trial of the other."

Where two suits having a common issue are tried together and disposed of by a single judgment or by two judgments one incorporating the other, there has been in substance only one trial and one verdict and there is no question of the successful party being vexed twice over the same matter.^{10a}

5. A sues B and C; B alone sues A. A's suit is dismissed and B's decreed. A appeals against B's decree only impleading B. Or A sues B. B and C sue A: A's suit is dismissed and B and C's suit is decreed and A appeals only against B. Or A sues B, C and D. It is decreed subject to the payment to B by A of a certain sum. C and D appeal making A and B parties. B appeals making A alone a party. Both appeals are accepted and A's suit is dismissed. A files a second appeal against the decree in favour of B only. The judgments in all the cases are either single or incorporating one another. The appeal in each of the cases is barred inasmuch as the parties in both suits or appeals are not the same and the result of not appealing is to make the decree in favour of the party not appealed against final.¹¹

Where the matter litigated in the two suits is not the same, an appeal in one suit only will not be barred by non-appeal in the other.¹²

32. General principles apply to appeals.— See Note 29.

33. Matter directly and substantially in issue “constructively”—Explanation IV — General. — It has been seen in Note 7, ante, that a matter directly and substantially in issue may be so either actually or constructively.¹ A matter is directly in issue constructively when it ought to be put in issue for the determination of the suit. The rule of constructive res judicata is embodied in Explanation IV to the Section, but as has been seen already in Note 23 above, the rule is part of the general principles of the law of res judicata and therefore the Explanation has not introduced any innovation in the law of res judicata.^{1a}

An adjudication is conclusive and final not only as to the actual matter determined but as to every other matter which the parties might have litigated and have had decided as incident to, or essentially connected with, the subject-matter of the litigation and every matter coming within the legitimate purview of the original action both in respect of matters of claim or defence.² The principle underlying Explanation IV, in fact, is that where the parties have had an opportunity of controverting a matter, that should be taken to be the same thing as if the matter had been actually controverted and decided.³

The Explanation must be distinguished from the rule enacted in O. 2 R. 2; the latter Rule requires that the whole claim which has arisen at the date of the suit out of the cause of action should be included in the suit so as to avoid the splitting up of the claim arising out of one and the same cause of action; while Explanation IV enacts that every ground which could and ought to have been advanced in support of the claim shall be deemed to have been adjudicated upon, whether it was actually urged or not.⁴

Where a matter is constructively in issue it cannot, of course, be said to have been actually heard and decided. It could only be deemed to be heard and decided.⁵ If the effect of the decision in the former suit is necessarily inconsistent with the defence that ought to have been, but not raised, that defence must be deemed to have been finally decided against the person who ought to have raised it.⁶ But a matter constructively in issue will not be deemed to have been decided where the case has not been tried upon the merits, as where the prior suit was dismissed for non-joinder of parties.⁷

But, though the applicability of the rule of constructive res judicata does not and cannot require that the matter should have been actually heard and decided in the former suit, it does not dispense with the other essential requirements of the Section such as the sameness of the parties, the competency of the Court, and litigation under the same title.⁸

The Explanation does not apply where the ground of attack or defence has actually been raised but is not decided by the Court.⁹ Nor can it be applied against a person who has been successful in the previous suit.^{9a} A plea raised at a late stage and rejected on that ground must be taken as not having been raised at all, and, if it should have been raised at the proper time, will be deemed to have been constructively in issue and will be barred in a subsequent suit.¹⁰

The Explanation applies to the plaintiff to the same extent as it applies to the defendant.¹¹

Section 21 of the Code and Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act which preclude an objection as to territorial jurisdiction or the valuation of a suit, being raised in a Court of appeal or revision for the first time, are only instances of the application of the general doctrine of constructive res judicata. Hence, though the above Sections refer only to subsequent stages of the same suit and not a separate suit, the question as to territorial jurisdiction or valuation impliedly decided in a prior suit cannot be re-agitated in a subsequent suit between the same parties.¹² (See also Section 21 Note S.)

34. Where relief claimed in later suit is same though under different capacities and vice versa. — See Note 38, infra.

35. Grounds of attack or defence in subsequent suit which might and ought to have been alleged as grounds of attack or defence in former suit. — The object of Explanation IV is to compel the plaintiff or defendant to rely upon all grounds of attack or defence which were open to them.¹ A party is bound to bring forward his whole case in respect of the matter in litigation, which was open to him upon the points for decision in the suit. He cannot abstain from relying upon, or abandon, a ground of claim which is in question and proper for consideration,

Pleas not permitted by law.—A plea which is not permitted by law to be raised in a suit cannot be said to be one which might have been raised.² Thus, where, in a suit to establish title under a certain transfer, the defendant could not, under the law, as it then stood, raise the plea that the transfer was fraudulent under Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was held that a subsequent suit to set aside the sale on that ground is not bad.³ Similarly, in a suit for a declaration that a decree is null and void, the plaintiff could not ask for the relief of restitution as such relief by way of suit is barred by Section 144 sub-clause 2.⁴

Pleas based on facts not within the knowledge of the party at the time of the former suit.—Where the facts on which a plea might have been raised by a party were not within his knowledge at the time of the former suit, it could not be said that he might have raised it.⁵ Thus, where A filed against B succession certificate proceedings in respect of a deceased person's estate and obtained a certificate, but B was not aware at the time that a will had been executed by the deceased person by which he (B) had been appointed executor, a subsequent application for revocation of the certificate granted to A is not barred under Explanation IV to Section 11.⁶ But the want of knowledge or mistake must be one of fact. A plea not raised owing to a wrong view of the law cannot be said to be one which could not have been raised. Thus, where a person who was a sub-mortgagee wrongly sued as an assignee of the mortgage and the suit was dismissed, a subsequent suit as a sub-mortgagee is barred inasmuch as the previous suit was based not on the want of knowledge of any fact but on a wrong view of the law.^{6a}

Pleas based on facts not in existence at the time of the former suit.—A plea based on facts which did not exist at the time of the former suit but which came into existence subsequently, cannot be said to be one which might have been raised in the former suit.⁷ Thus, A brings a suit against B for declaration of his title as owner of certain lands. The suit is dismissed on the ground that A is not the owner. At the time of the suit A is in adverse possession of the land but has not perfected his title by adverse possession. After the dismissal of the suit, he perfects his title by adverse possession and subsequently sues B again on the basis of his title by adverse possession. The suit is not barred as the cause of action for the suit is based on facts not in existence at the time of the former suit.⁸ Similarly, a right to partition of properties is a continuous right and therefore a right to a partition at a particular time claimed in the previous suit does not, where the former decree has not been executed, bar a fresh suit for partition on a right to partition arising subsequently to the first suit; as to all points, however, which were or ought to have been decided in the first suit, they will, of course, be barred.⁹ Similarly, the mere fact that in a prior suit, a prayer for the settlement of a scheme was not granted, will not prevent a renewed attempt by way of suit to have a scheme framed when the occasion arises at a later date.¹⁰ A obtains a decree against B, his wife, for restitution of conjugal rights. The decree is not executed, but the wife returns to his house, stays with him for two months and again deserts him. A brings a second suit for restitution of conjugal rights. The suit is not barred inasmuch as it is based on a subsequent cause of action, not in existence at the time of the first suit.¹¹

former suit but ought to have been raised therein.¹ It depends upon the facts of each particular case whether a matter ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence in the previous suit,² and various tests have been applied to determine, in individual instances, whether a plea which might have been raised is also one which ought to have been raised.³ One of the most important tests is to see *whether the matters raised in the two suits are so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion.*⁴ In this view the following pleas cannot be said to be such as ought to have been raised in the former suit:—

(1) Pleas that will make the suit bad for multifariousness or will embarrass the trial thereof.⁵

(2) Pleas irrelevant to the suit,⁶ i.e., pleas which are not necessary, either

Failing in this suit he brings a fresh suit for the same relief on the ground that he is the heir of X (who had died even at the time of the former suit). The suit is barred. The plaintiff was bound to have set up both the capacities under which he became entitled to eject B.⁹

Where the assignee of a promissory note sues the promisor and the assignor and seeks relief against both jointly or severally, the only basis of the claim against the assignor could be that the assignment has failed for want of consideration. This ground of attack must, therefore, be taken to be one which might and ought to have been raised and impliedly decided.¹⁰

39. Grounds of defence. — A party having several grounds of defence to a suit is bound to set forth all such grounds and cannot reserve any one or more of them for a separate suit.¹ In Srimut Rajah Mootoo Vijaya v. Katama Natchiar,² their Lordships of the Privy Council said :

"When a plaintiff claims an estate and the defendant, being in possession, resists that claim, he is bound to resist it upon all the grounds that it is possible for him, according to his knowledge then, to bring forward."

But the grounds which will be barred must be grounds which will be answers to the claim made in the previous suit, that is, they must be such as, if raised, would defeat the plaintiff's claim.³ If not, the party is not bound to raise them.⁴

1. A sues B in ejectment. B is not entitled to retain possession as against A, but has got a right of redemption of a mortgage on the said property. He does not set up his right of redemption in A's suit, but brings a separate suit therefor, subsequently. He is not barred from doing so because the existence of the right of redemption is not a valid defence to the suit for ejectment and therefore need not have been raised in the former suit.⁵

2. A, a purchaser of certain properties from certain members of a joint Hindu family, sues to recover the property purchased by him impleading alienees of other properties from the same members as parties. The latter need not claim possession of their properties in that suit inasmuch as such a claim will not be an answer to the plaintiff's claim.⁶

3. A sues B for recovery of a certain sum of money. B is entitled to plead a set-off under O. 8 R. 6, of a sum of money due by A to him, but does not plead it. He subsequently sues A for such sum. He is not barred from doing so, because the plea of set-off is not an answer to the plaintiff's claim in the first suit but is a separate claim by defendant himself against such plaintiff.⁷ Where, however, the former suit was on a general balance of accounts, a set-off of moneys received by the plaintiff from the defendant would be an answer to the plaintiff's claim and therefore must be pleaded as a ground of defence.⁸ In a suit for possession of land based on title, a claim for compensation for the improvements made by the defendant ought to be set up by him in defence. If it is not so set up, a decree for possession passed in the suit would operate as a bar to the further agitation of the question of compensation in a subsequent suit.^{8a} A plea of constructive res judicata must be determined only with reference to the suit as framed and not with reference to what under the law the suit must have been.⁹

40. Application of the above principles to mortgage suits. — The principles stated in the foregoing Notes apply to all suits, including mortgage suits.^{1a} It will, however, be useful to illustrate their applicability to different classes of cases arising out of mortgage transactions.

Several suits for redemption of the same mortgage. — There was a conflict of opinion as to whether, where nothing is done under a prior decree for redemption, a subsequent suit for redemption is barred by res judicata. On the one hand, it was held that a prior suit and decree for redemption which had not been executed and in which, in default of redemption, the property was not decreed to be foreclosed or the right of redemption declared to be extinguished, did not bar a subsequent suit for redemption, as, notwithstanding the decree the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee continued.¹ The High Court of Bombay supported this view on the ground that the issue in a suit for redemption is not the existence of the mortgage, but how much must be paid by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in two suits based on different causes of action with regard to the same property—Defendant need not plead in each suit what is properly a defence to the other.)

Singh v. Mt. Hansraj Kunwar, A. I. R. 1934 Privy Council 205. In that case a decree for redemption was passed in the following terms :

"It is ordered and decreed that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for possession by redemption of mortgage in the following terms, viz., that he should pay Rs. 4,208-6-0 by the 15th of November 1896, that if he will pay the said sum he will get all costs . . . and that in case of default his case will stand dismissed."

No payment was made but a fresh suit was subsequently instituted for redemption. It was held that by the Proviso to Section 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the right to redeem subsists unless "it has been extinguished by order of a Court," that this right conferred upon the mortgagor by express enactment can only be taken away by means and in manner enacted for the purpose, that the words in the previous decree "his case will stand dismissed" could not be construed as meaning that the plaintiff was to be debarred from all right to redeem and that consequently it did not operate as res judicata. See also the undermentioned case^{3aa} which proceeds on the view that where the prior decree for redemption does not provide that in default of payment within the time fixed, the right of redemption must be extinguished, a fresh suit for redemption is not barred.

But even if a fresh suit may lie for redemption, all matters actually decided, such as the amount due, etc., will be conclusive and cannot be raised in the fresh suit.^{3b}

Suits for redemption and settlement of accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee. — In suits for redemption there ought to be a complete and final settlement of all accounts between the mortgagor and the mortgagee up to the date of the redemption.⁴ But a separate suit for mesne profits between the date of the payment under the preliminary decree and the date when the mortgagor is put in possession of the mortgaged property is not barred.⁵

Suits for redemption of several mortgages. — Where there are several mortgages by the mortgagor in favour of the same mortgagee, a suit for redemption of one of such mortgages cannot bar a subsequent suit for redemption of the other mortgages; the redemption of other mortgages is not a ground of attack in a suit for the redemption of the first mortgage.⁶ See Note 38, ante.

Suits for redemption and for ejectment. — A suit for redemption of a mortgage does not bar a subsequent suit by the mortgagor as a proprietor for ejectment of the mortgagee and vice versa, the matters involved in the two suits being totally different and distinct.⁷ Similarly, in a suit by a prior mortgagee against a puisne mortgagee for ejectment, the latter is not bound to set up his title to redeem as it is not a valid ground of defence to the suit in ejectment.⁸ Similarly, where mortgagor sues to eject the mortgagee, not entitled to possession under his mortgage, the latter need not set up his rights under his mortgage.⁹

Suits by puisne mortgagee against the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee.—A prior mortgagee who is made a party to a suit by a puisne mortgagee on his mortgage, but whose prior mortgage is not impugned or sought to be postponed in any way, need not set up his prior mortgage, as such a plea is a paramount claim not affecting the claim made on the puisne mortgage and therefore not a ground of defence.¹⁰ Where, however, the prior mortgage is impugned or sought to be postponed in any way, the prior mortgagee must set up his rights under the mortgage. Otherwise his rights will be barred.¹¹ Thus, where a person having a prior mortgage is impleaded only as a subsequent mortgagee or as the owner of the equity of redemption, thus impliedly negating the priority, he must, by way of defence, set up his priority or he will be barred from doing so later on.¹²

Suit by mortgagee against mortgagor and puisne mortgagee.—A puisne mortgagee who is impleaded in a suit on a mortgage brought by a prior mortgagee is not simply entitled to resist the suit on the ground that he is himself entitled to be redeemed by the mortgagor. Where therefore, in such a case, the prior mortgage is satisfied before sale under the decree in favour of the prior mortgagee, the puisne mortgagee can sue the mortgagor for sale on his mortgage.¹³⁻¹⁴

Where a usufructuary mortgagee brings a suit for possession against the mortgagor, a subsequent suit by the latter for redemption is not barred inasmuch as the plea of the right of redemption is irrelevant in the former suit and therefore not one which ought to have been raised.¹⁵ See Note 37, ante. But in a suit on a mortgage the defendant, mortgagor, is bound to put forward a counter-claim for any sum that may be due to him by the mortgagee arising out of the mortgage transaction, the general rule being that all claims relating to the mortgage between the parties thereto must be determined in one suit.^{15a}

In a suit to enforce a mortgage against the heirs of a mortgagor, an heir who has an independent title in the mortgaged properties is not bound to set up his title.^{15b}

Suit by mortgagee without impleading puisne mortgagee. — A mortgagee who omits to implead a subsequent mortgagee in his suit for sale is not debarred from afterwards bringing a second suit on the same mortgage against the subsequent mortgagee.^{15c}

Two mortgages in favour of same person — Suit on one of them only. — The High Courts of Allahabad,¹⁶ Calcutta,¹⁷ Madras¹⁸ and Patna,¹⁹ the Chief Court of Oudh^{19a} and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur^{19b} have held that it is open to a mortgagee holding more than one mortgage on the same property to bring a suit for the recovery of his debt due only under one of the mortgages and to sell the property under the decree in that suit subject to his rights under a prior mortgage. The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, taken a contrary view.²⁰ The conflict has now practically been set at rest, in cases of mortgages coming into existence after 1st April 1930, the Legislature enacting in Section 67 A of the Transfer of Property Act that a mortgagee holding two or more mortgages shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be bound to sue on all the mortgages. See also O. 34 R. 1 Note 10 for a fuller discussion. Also see O. 34 R. 12 Note 2.

Plea of paramount title in mortgage suits. — A defendant claiming paramount title is an unnecessary party in a mortgage suit and he need not raise such plea in the suit.²¹ Thus, where A mortgages properties X, Y and Z to B and then mortgages X alone to C but it appears that Y and Z did not belong to A at all but to C as owner and in a suit on his mortgage by B, C is made a party as subsequent mortgagee of property X, the question of C's paramount title to Y and Z need not be raised by him in that suit. A subsequent suit by him, therefore, for declaration of his title to Y and Z is not barred by res judicata.²² But if the party claiming paramount title invites the Court to decide the question of his title and the Court goes into it and decides the question against him, he will of course be bound by it.²³ Where a party claims paramount title in the mortgage suit and causes himself to be dismissed from the suit, he cannot sue subsequently to redeem the mortgage.²⁴

Suit for redemption by mortgagor — Pleas which the mortgagee might and ought to raise. — Where there are two mortgages by A in favour of B, one usufructuary and one simple, and A sues for redemption of the usufructuary mortgage, B need not set up his rights under the simple mortgage also inasmuch as it is not a ground of defence to the suit.²⁵ Where a suit for redemption is decreed, the mortgagee must, on failure of the mortgagor to deposit the mortgage amount within the time fixed, obtain an order for sale; if he does not do so, he will be barred from suing again on the mortgage debt.²⁶ Where a mortgagor sues to cancel a mortgage given in renewal of an earlier mortgage and for possession, the defendant-mortgagee is bound to set up his rights under the earlier mortgage; otherwise he will be barred from subsequently suing to enforce his rights thereon.²⁷

A mortgagee who had purchased the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property and whose mortgage amount was thus discharged in proportion, filed a suit on the mortgage for recovery of the whole amount denying the fact of his purchase when raised by the defendants. The suit was decreed to the effect that on payment of the whole amount, the whole of the mortgaged properties should be delivered to the defendants. The latter paid up the whole amount. Subsequently the mortgagee filed a suit for a declaration of his title to the property purchased by him. It was held that he was barred by res judicata from claiming such relief.²⁸

In a suit for redemption by a puisne mortgagee against the prior mortgagee and his sub-mortgagee, it is not incumbent on the latter to claim payment of the amount due to him and the failure to do so will not preclude him from subsequently suing his mortgagor for recovery of such money.²⁹ Nor need the mortgagee in a redemption suit set up in defence his right to specific performance of an agreement to sell.³⁰

Claim for personal decree in mortgage suits. — Where the mortgagee's right to obtain a personal decree in the event of the sale proceeds proving insufficient is adjudicated upon and decided in favour of the plaintiff, the same is res judicata in subsequent proceedings and cannot be challenged in an application under O. 34 R. 6.³¹ See also Note 123, infra.

Suit on mortgage against Hindu father impleading the sons. — In the undermentioned case,³² a suit was brought against the father of a Hindu joint family for the enforcement of a mortgage. personal decree was not granted. Then the plaintiff sought to proceed against the sons' interests in the joint family property. It was held that the granting of such relief to the plaintiff was barred by the principle of constructive res judicata.

41. Former suit must have been between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim. — A person may be a party to a suit or a person claiming under a party, or a person represented by a party or a complete stranger.¹ The general principle is that a person, not a party nor claiming under, or represented by, a party, to a litigation is not bound by it, the maxim being Res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet — things done between strangers ought not to injure a party. A decision, therefore, in a litigation between A and B will be binding on them and their privies,² but will not operate as res judicata (unless it were a judgment in rem) in a subsequent litigation between A and C.³ Such a judgment may, however, be admissible in evidence to prove that a right or liability had, in a previous suit, been unsuccessfully set up by one of the already so decided.¹ Thus, where in a rent suit a question of title was raised as between an intervenor and the plaintiff, he will be bound by the decision of that question.² Under the Code of 1859, the two suits had to be on the *same cause of action*³ in order that the principle of res judicata may apply and it was held, where an intervenor was added as a party, that the cause of action against him would be different from that against the original defendant, and that, therefore, there could be no bar.⁴ Under the present Code, the requirement as to the cause of action being the same in the two suits has been taken away.

46. Co-defendants.—As regards parties arrayed on the same side such as co-defendants, an adjudication between them may be res judicata in certain circumstances.¹ It will operate as res judicata if the following conditions are satisfied :

1. There must be a conflict of interest between the defendants concerned.
2. It must be necessary to decide the conflict in order to give the relief which the plaintiff claims, and relief to the plaintiff⁵ or the conflict has not been decided.⁶ It is not, however, necessary that the issue between the co-defendants should have been the only ground on which the Court could have decided the suit.⁷ Nor is it necessary that there should have been an active contest between the co-defendants. It is only necessary that there must have been a conflict of interest and this conflict may exist notwithstanding that one of the concerned defendants did not contest at all.^{7a} But, where a defendant in a prior suit was ex parte and a co-defendant was added as a party later, it was held that as the former was not even aware of the claim of the other defendant, no question between the defendants could be said to have been heard and finally decided.^{7b}

The decision between the co-defendants can be on a point directly and substantially in issue between them either actually or constructively. Thus, in an interpleader suit the several defendants-claimants are deemed to be claiming adversely to each other. If one of them puts forward a right as against the others, the latter must contest it on all grounds which might and ought to have been raised by them, and if they do not do so, the point will be deemed to be constructively in issue between them and to be impliedly decided.⁸

The doctrine of res judicata must, however, be applied to co-defendants with great caution.⁹ In a partition suit where there is a complete partition the rights of each party are determined, not only against the plaintiff but as against all the co-defendants and such determination will, therefore, bar a subsequent suit between the co-defendants on the points decided.¹⁰ But whether rights between co-defendants amongst themselves have, or have not, been determined in any particular case, depends on no hard and fast rule. It is necessary to bear in mind in each case the nature of the partition suit brought.¹¹ Where the partition is not a complete one but only the plaintiff is divided off, it will not be res judicata between the defendants inter se, as there could, in such a case, be no conflict of issues between them.¹²

In the case of a nominal or pro forma defendant there is really no conflict of interest between him and another defendant and so there can be no res judicata between them.¹³

47. Co-plaintiffs. — The same principles of res judicata applicable to co-defendants apply also to co-plaintiffs inter se. Therefore, if there is a conflict of interest between them and it is necessary to decide that in order to give relief against the defendants and the matter is decided, then it will operate as res judicata between the co-plaintiffs.¹ Where there is no such conflict,² or it is not necessary to decide it for the purpose of granting relief against defendants,³ or it is not decided either actually or constructively,⁴ there can be no question of res judicata between them.

48. "Parties under whom they or any of them claim." — The whole policy of the Code is that if the proceeding originally instituted is right and proper, any decision obtained therein is binding on all persons on whom the right or interest may devolve.¹ A previous decision, therefore, is binding on all persons who claim under the parties to the decision,² whether they have notice of it or not.³ The words "parties under whom they or any of them claim" are very wide but their meaning should be restricted so as to bind a person only in respect of the interest represented by the party in the former suit at the time of the suit, the ground of privity for purposes of res judicata being property and not personal relationship.⁴ "Parties under whom they or any of them claim" comprise two classes of persons —

- (1) parties actually claiming under a party to the previous suit, and
- (2) parties who were represented by a party in the previous suit in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for such person and others. See Explanation VI.

It is necessary for the application of the rule of res judicata that the parties to the former suit under whom the parties in the subsequent suit claim, should have been ranged on opposite sides or, at least, have had conflicting interests.⁵ Where the plaintiff and the defendant in the subsequent suit claim through the same person who was a party in the former suit, they cannot be said to claim under the parties to the previous litigation and the decision in that suit is, therefore, not res judicata.⁶ Even though the defendant in the subsequent suit was a party to the prior suit, the decision in the prior suit will not be res judicata between the parties to the subsequent suit, when both of them claim through the other party to the former suit.⁷

49. Parties claiming under parties in previous suit. — A person is said to claim under another when he derives his title through the other by assignment or otherwise.¹ But his title must have arisen subsequently to the commencement of the first suit.² Thus, where a person is adjudged an insolvent, any decision obtained against him subsequently thereto will not bind the Official Receiver as his title arose previous to the decision.³ Similarly, a purchaser, mortgagee, lessee or donee of a property is not bound by a decree obtained in a suit against the vendor, mortgagor, lessor or donor commenced after the date of the purchase, mortgage, lease or gift.^{3a} When the predecessor in the previous suit did not fill the same character as that in which the successor claims in the subsequent suit, it cannot be said that the latter is claiming under the predecessor.⁴

50. Hindu son, if claims through father. — A Hindu son gets his right to ancestral property by birth and does not claim through his father in respect of such right.¹ Much less can he be said to claim through the father where he actually claims as the heir of a third person.² But a suit brought against the Hindu father may bind the sons where the suit against the former was as representing his sons' interests also within the meaning of Explanation VI to Section 11.³ Where, however, it is clearly proved that, as a fact, there was no representation of the plaintiff's interests by his father in the previous suit, he will not, of course, be bound by the decision.⁴ See also Note 61, infra.

51. Co-heirs, if claim under each other. — One heir does not claim under another and cannot be barred by res judicata by a decision against the former.¹ See also Note 63b, infra.

52. Co-owners, if claim under each other. — Nor does one co-owner claim under another co-owner. A judgment rendered against one co-owner does not, therefore, bar a suit against another co-owner.¹

53. Co-tenants. — Ordinarily a decision against one tenant cannot operate as res judicata against co-tenants, who were not parties thereto.¹ In suits for rent under the Bengal Rent Act, 1869, where a registered tenant is sued for rent and a decree is obtained, the whole tenure is saleable under certain circumstances; in such cases, therefore, the other tenants will also be bound thereby.² In other cases the ordinary rule that only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor passes under the sale, will apply and the other tenants will not be bound by the decision in respect of their shares,³ unless the tenant sued actually so represented his tenancy that the decree should be regarded as a decree made in a suit against the tenant in his representative capacity.⁴

54. Transferor and transferee. — In accordance with the principle noted in Note 49 above, a transferee will be a person claiming under the transferor within the meaning of Section 11 if his transfer is subsequent to the institution of the suit by or against the transferor¹ but not otherwise.²

55. Mortgagor and mortgagee. — A mortgagee is a transferee from the mortgagor of an interest in the property mortgaged, and therefore, in respect of the interest transferred, the same principles as have been mentioned in Notes 49 and 54 will apply. That is, the mortgagee will be bound by a decision against his mortgagor in respect of the mortgaged property, if the decision was in a suit which was instituted prior to the mortgage¹ but not otherwise.²

In respect of the proprietary title to the property mortgaged, the mortgagee is not a representative of the mortgagor and therefore a decision against the former in respect of such title is not res judicata against the latter.³

Where a mortgagee sues a stranger for possession on the ground that the mortgaged property belonged to the mortgagor, he is really suing in a representative character on behalf of the mortgagor also and the decision will therefore operate as a bar in a subsequent suit by the mortgagor for redemption in which the stranger is also a party and tries to raise the same plea against the mortgagor.⁴

A mortgagor cannot be said to be claiming under his co-mortgagor.⁵ But the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that a suit for redemption by a co-mortgagor must be deemed to be one brought in a representative capacity on behalf of all the mortgagors and that, in that view, the decision will bind them all.⁶

56. Judgment-debtor, decree-holder and auction-purchaser. — An auction-purchaser in execution of a money decree purchases only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor and therefore claims under him and will therefore be bound by a previous decision against him in respect of such property.¹ An auction-purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree not only purchases the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, namely his equity of redemption, but also the mortgagee-interest which was vested in the decree-holder. (See O. 34 R. 5, Note 19.) He thus purchases the whole property which had vested in the mortgagor and mortgagee together. He therefore represents both the mortgagor and the mortgagee in respect of their respective interests.² Whether, in any particular case, he represents the mortgagor or the mortgagee depends upon the particular interest that is in question in the litigation.

The auction-purchaser in execution of a decree on a mortgage is a purchaser of rights as on the date of the mortgage and will not be affected by a decision in a suit subsequent to the mortgage, though the auction-purchase itself may be subsequent to the suit.³ A purchaser in execution of a puisne mortgagee's decree against the mortgagor and his sons who has purchased subject to a first mortgage, is not debarred in a suit by the first mortgagee on his mortgage from challenging the validity of the first mortgage as the sons themselves could have done, if the validity of that mortgage was not in question in the former suit.⁴ It has been held in some cases⁵ that even in the case of an auction sale in execution of a money decree, the auction-purchaser is a representative of a decree-holder in respect of his right to sell the properties of the judgment-debtor in execution of his decree. It is submitted that this view is wrong. A right to sell the judgment-debtor's properties in execution of a money decree is not an interest in property which alone is a ground of privity for the purposes of res judicata.⁶ See Note 19 to Section 47 for a fuller discussion.

In a revenue sale what is sold is not the right, title and interest of the defaulting proprietor but the whole property free from incumbrances. The auction-purchaser, in such a case, claims paramount title and not through the defaulting proprietor and is therefore not barred by res judicata by a previous decision against the defaulting proprietor.⁷

A files a suit against B to establish his title to certain property. The suit is dismissed on the ground that the property belongs to B. C thereafter attaches the property in execution of a decree obtained by him against B. A prefers a claim under O. 21 R. 58 and on its dismissal sues under O. 21 R. 63, making B and C both defendants. It has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that C, the decree-holder, must be held to claim under B and that therefore the previous decision in A's suit would operate as res judicata in the latter suit in favour of C also.^{7a} See also the following decisions of the Allahabad High Court^{7aa} which proceed on the view that an attaching creditor of A is a person claiming under him, in regard to whom a decision passed in favour of or against A would operate as res judicata. But the judgment-debtor does not claim under the decree-holder. Thus, where C, a decree-holder, sues A, the claimant under O. 21 R. 63 to establish the title of B, the judgment-debtor, to certain properties and the suit is dismissed, the decision will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by B against A on the strength of his title.^{7b} Where C, a defeated decree-holder, sued B, the judgment-debtor and the claimant, under O. 21 R. 63 to establish the title of B to the attached properties, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the decision would not operate as a bar in subsequent suit between B and A.⁸

The Bombay High Court has, in the undermentioned case,⁹ held that an auction-purchaser is the representative of neither the judgment-creditor nor the judgment-debtor. It is submitted that the view cannot be supported on principle.¹⁰

57. Lessor and lessee. — The lessor cannot be said to claim from the lessee and is not bound by the litigation against the lessee.¹ Nor can a lessee be said to claim under the lessor for the purposes of Section 11, unless his title as lessee arises subsequent to the previous litigation which is alleged to operate as bar.² A successor of a landholder to whom a special privilege is given under Section 26 clause 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, namely, the right to enhance a low rent agreed to by the predecessor is, in respect of the right of enhancement, not a person "claiming under" the landholder.³ Similarly, a transferee from a licensor who is not bound by the license under Section 59 of the Easements Act is also not bound by a previous decision in a suit by the licensor against the licensee.⁴ Similarly, where in a former suit between the landlord and the tenant, the heirs of the grantee of the tenancy set up a remission of rent, and it was held in favour of the heirs, and, subsequently, the heirs transferred the tenure and transferees against whom the landlord brought a suit for rent raised the same question of

58. Miscellaneous.—Where an inam was granted to A and his male descendants in perpetuity, the successors to the inam are representatives of the prior holders for the purposes of Section 11. Each succession of a male heir does not involve a re-grant by the Government.¹

An Official Assignee acting on behalf of creditors cannot be said to be representing the insolvent. A decision, therefore, against the insolvent in a previous proceeding is not binding on the Official Assignee acting on behalf of the creditors in a subsequent proceeding.²

A pre-emptor stands in the shoes of the vendee, and so a decision in a suit between the original vendor and the vendee relating to the pre-empted properties cannot be challenged in a subsequent suit between the original vendor and the pre-emptor.³

A decree for foreclosure obtained against a life estate holder without impleading the remainderman is not binding on the remainderman.⁴

59. Persons represented in prior suits—Representative suits — Explanation VI.—Explanation VI of the Section extends the meaning of the words “under whom they or any of them claim” by enacting that where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall be deemed to claim under persons so litigating. This Explanation is not confined to cases covered by O. 1 R. 8, infra but extends to include any litigation in which, apart from that Rule altogether, parties are entitled to represent interested persons other than themselves.^{1a} In order that a suit might be a representative one under this Explanation, it is essential that —

(1) the party litigating must do so in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for himself and others, and

(2) the litigation must be conducted bona fide in respect of such right.¹

Where these conditions are satisfied, then a decision in such litigation will bind all persons interested in the right litigated.²

The onus of proving the want of bona fides in respect of the previous litigation is on the party seeking to avoid the prior decisions.^{2a} Proof of negligence is not sufficient to establish such want of bona fides.^{2b}

The words "public right" have been added in Explanation VI in view of the new Section 91 and to prevent multiplicity of litigation in respect of public rights.³ As regards private rights, there must be a community of interest between the parties such as is referred to in O. 1 R. 8 of the Code.⁴ In other words, they must claim under a common title.⁵ But, in the case of a public right, such a right necessarily implies that it is claimed by the plaintiff in common with others and the expression in Explanation VI, "claimed in common for themselves and others" would be superfluous in the case of such a right and cannot apply to it.^{5a} Where it does not appear that all the persons intended to be represented are necessarily interested in obtaining the relief sought, a suit is not a representative one.⁶ Nor will the Explanation apply where the plaintiff claims a right for himself, though the right may be common to others also.⁷ Thus, where A sues B, a decree-holder, that his property is not liable to attachment in execution of B's decree, B cannot be deemed to represent other persons holding other decrees against A and seeking to sell the property.⁸

Whether a plaintiff, in a particular case, sues in a representative character or a defendant is sued or defends in a representative character, depends upon the facts of that case. It also depends upon the substance and not the form of pleadings. Thus, it is not necessary that the cause title of the suit or pleading should make it

Hindu widow suing for the benefit of the estate must be taken to be suing in a representative capacity within the meaning of Explanation VI of Section 11. The attention of the Court does not, in that case, seem to have been drawn to the decision of the Privy Council referred to above to the effect that it is the general principle and not Section 11 that applies to such cases.

Where a decree is passed against the widow on a ground personal to herself^{5a} or the litigation is not conducted by her bona fide for the benefit of the estate, it binds only her widow's estate and is not binding on the reversioner.⁶ Whether the widow represents the estate in a litigation may be gathered from the nature of the allegations put forward and the issues raised, tried and decided in the former suit. The mere allegation that she did or did not, would be of little value. Was it a claim by or against the widow personally or the inheritance which she represented? If the contentions raised are those connected with the inheritance and the trial was with reference to them, the widow must be held to be representing the estate. If not, the litigation must be deemed to be personal to her and not binding on the reversioners.⁷ Thus, a suit by a Hindu widow challenging an adoption,⁸ or for recovery of the inheritance,⁹ or for protecting or preserving the inheritance as against strangers,¹⁰ will be one brought by her as representing the estate. If, however, the suit is in relation to anything which she may have done herself to the prejudice of the reversionary heirs, she cannot be said to be litigating in respect thereof as representing the estate.¹¹ A decree thus obtained by a mortgagee on the basis of a mortgage not executed by her for legal necessity cannot bind the reversioners.¹² If the mortgage was for legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate, the decree against the widow would, of course, be binding on the reversioners.¹³

The "special cause" referred to in the *Shivaganga case*¹⁴ must be ejusdem generis with unfairness or irregularity in the proceedings referred to by the Judicial Committee, and does not include a mere failure to implead the reversioner in the

The above principles will apply also to the case of other female heirs with limited estates under the Hindu law.

63a. Suits by Hindu reversioners. — The right to sue a Hindu widow for a declaration that certain alienations made by her are not binding beyond her lifetime, belongs only to the nearest reversioner, except in cases where such reversioner has precluded himself from suing, in some way, by his own act or conduct, when a remote reversioner might sue.¹ During the lifetime of the widow the reversionary right is a mere possibility and is common to all the reversioners, for it cannot be predicated as to who would be the nearest reversioner at the time of her death. Where a suit is brought by the nearest reversioner in the lifetime of the widow that an adoption made by her is not valid or an alienation by her is not binding on the inheritance, it is not brought for his personal benefit, for the object is to remove a common apprehended injury to all the reversioners, presumptive and contingent alike. It is a suit brought in a representative capacity and on behalf of all the reversioners. The act complained of is to their common detriment just as the relief sought for is for their common benefit.² The decision in such a suit affects the reversioners as a body and under Explanation VI to Section 11 bars a fresh suit by another reversioner on the same cause of action.³ The principle would apply equally whether it is a decree after contest or on a bona fide compromise.⁴

65 Where in the previous suit the plaintiff who sued as a reversioner was held not to be a reversioner, he cannot be said to have represented the reversionary body and, therefore, the decision would not operate as res judicata against other reversioners.⁵ Again, where a reversioner sues not in a representative capacity but in a personal one, it will not operate as res judicata in a suit by the actual reversioner after the widow's death.⁶

63b. Decree against one only of several legal representatives. — Where one of several legal representatives is sued alone, he sufficiently represents the estate of the deceased for the purposes of the suit and in the absence of fraud or collusion the decree passed in such suit is binding on the estate and on all the other representatives.¹ But where a person is substituted as the legal representative of a deceased party without deciding whether he was such representative, the decision in the suit would not bar as res judicata, a subsequent suit by such representative for a declaration that the decree is not binding on him.² A suit against a wrong person as the legal representative of a deceased person is not res judicata in a subsequent suit against the real heir.³ As for execution proceedings against wrong representatives, see Section 52, Notes 5 and 6. See also Note 11 to O. 34 R. 1.

64. Suits by or against administrators. — An executor or administrator of a deceased person's estate represents the estate in litigation and a decision against him as such representative is binding on all persons who subsequently succeed to the estate.¹

65. Suits by or against a benamidar or agent. — A benamidar in fact represents the real owner and, so far as their relative legal positions are concerned, he is a mere trustee for the real owner and a decision in a litigation by or against him will bind the beneficial owner as res judicata.¹ The question may be viewed in another aspect, namely that, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it is to be presumed that the benamidar has instituted the suit or defends it with the full knowledge of the beneficial owner.² In yet another view the benamidar is only another name for the real owner and, as such, the real owner himself must be deemed to be a party for purposes of Section 11.³ Where, however, the benamidar protests that he is only a benamidar and does not want to carry on the litigation and wants the real owner to be brought on record, but without doing so a decree is obtained against him, it cannot be said that he represented the real owner and the latter will therefore not be barred by res judicata.⁴ The same principles would apply to a decision against an agent. It is binding on the principal inasmuch as he must be deemed to be a party to the suit.⁵

66. Suits by or against joint contractors or wrong-doers. — Where the liability of the joint promisors or wrong-doers is single or undivided, there is only one cause of action and as soon as it is sued upon and a decree obtained, it is satisfied and exhausted.¹ But where the obligation is joint and several a decree obtained against one without satisfaction is no bar to a suit against the other.²

67. Miscellaneous. — A creditor of a party is not a representative of the party for the purposes of Section 11.¹

The municipal board represents the public in disputes about wells, etc., vested in them, and a decision against them in respect of such matters will be res judicata in a subsequent suit by other persons.² A judgment obtained against the municipal council in a former suit will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit against the chairman of the municipal council.³ The reason is that for the purpose of applying the principle of res judicata the municipal council and its chairman cannot be viewed as two independent entities.

The Official Liquidator represents the debenture-holders and creditors as well as the company, and if an order is made against him in respect of the company's property, the order is conclusive in the winding-up, on all parties so represented.³

A decree against a vatan holder as representing the estate is binding on his successor.⁴ Likewise a decree passed against a jahgirdar as representing the estate is binding on his successors.⁵

68. Judgments in rem. — A judgment, as a rule, affects only the parties thereto and their privies. Judgments in rem form an exception to this rule, and are valid not only inter partes but against all the world. Sections 40 to 44 of the Evidence Act deal with the relevancy of judgments of Courts of Justice. Section 40 enacts that the existence of a judgment, order or decree which, by law, prevents any Court from taking cognisance of a suit or from holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognisance of such suit or to hold such trial. Section 41 deals with final judgments, decrees or orders of competent Courts in the exercise of Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty or Insolvency Jurisdiction, or what is known as judgments in rem, and it states that such judgments, decrees or orders are conclusive proof of the matters specified in the

11 Section, and, by Section 4 of the Evidence Act, evidence cannot be allowed to
-69 disprove the facts established by such judgments.¹ As regards judgments in rem, therefore, strangers are in the same position as the parties themselves.²

As regards judgments which do not fall within Section 41 of the Evidence Act, they can only be evidence if they come under Section 42 or any other relevant Section of that Act,³ but cannot be used for the purpose of preventing the other side from proving facts which he sets up.⁴

A judgment is not a judgment in rem because in a suit by A for the recovery of an estate from B, it has determined an issue raised concerning the status of a particular person or family.⁵ As has been said before, the judgment must have been given by the Court in the exercise of its Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty or Insolvency Jurisdiction.^{6a} The judgment of an Insolvency Court declaring a person to be a creditor of the insolvent does not confer any 'legal character' on him within the meaning of Section 41 of the Evidence Act and hence such a declaration does not operate as a judgment in rem.^{6b}

There is a broad distinction between the effect of a judgment in rem and a judgment in personam. The point adjudicated upon in the former is always as to the status of the res and is conclusive against the world as to that status; whereas in a judgment in personam the point whatever it may be which is adjudicated upon is conclusive between the parties or their privies.⁶

69. Decree against minor. — As has been seen in Note 41 ante, it is necessary, in order to maintain a plea of res judicata, that the person whose interest it is sought to be bound or his predecessor in title should have been properly represented in the former litigation.¹ When a decree is obtained against a minor who was not represented at all, or, what is the same thing in effect, represented by a person incompetent to act as guardian, the minor is no party to the suit and as such the decree is without jurisdiction and not binding on him as

res judicata.² Even where the minor was represented by a person competent to act, the decision will not operate as res judicata against him if his interests were not properly represented owing to gross negligence or fraud or collusion of the guardian.³ As to what amounts to gross negligence such as would vitiate the decision against a minor, see undermentioned cases.⁴

In the absence of gross negligence or fraud or collusion of the guardian, a decree obtained against a minor properly represented is res judicata,⁵ even in respect of pleas which might and ought to have been raised but which were not raised by the guardian.⁶ A compromise without the Court's sanction under O. 32 R. 7 is without jurisdiction and cannot operate as res judicata.⁷ It was held in the undermentioned case⁸ that where there are several defendants besides the minor defendants, having identical interests, a decision therein is binding on the minors, as the other defendants must be deemed to have litigated on behalf of themselves and of the minors under Explanation VI to Section 11. Where a major is improperly impleaded as a minor but no objection is raised by him in the suit nor any appeal preferred by him against the decree, he cannot have the decree declared not binding on him on the ground that he was a major.⁹

70. Litigation must be under the same title. — The expression "title" in Section 11 refers to the capacity or interest of a party, that is to say, whether he sues or is sued for himself in his own interest or for himself as representing the interest of another, or as representing the interest of others along with himself; it has nothing to do with the particular cause of action on which he sues or is sued.¹

On the death of K, A claimed certain lands as the real owner, on the allegation that K was a mere benamidar for him, and the suit was dismissed. A then sued to recover the same land as the heir of K. It was held that, in each case, he was suing only as an individual whether on the basis of a transaction being benami, or as the heir of K and that, therefore, his title was the same. It would be different if he had brought the second suit as representing all the heirs.²

The following classes of suits will, on the above principles, be suits litigated under the same title :—

(1) First suit for possession as reversioner of A. Second suit for the same relief as reversioner of B.³ The claim in each case is as an individual and therefore under the same title.^{3a}

(2) First suit as trustee. Second suit also as trustee.⁴ The claim in each case is as representing the persons interested in the trust and therefore under the same title.

(3) First suit against a firm. Second suit against a partner thereof.⁵

(4) First suit litigated as heir of husband. Second suit on the basis of a claim for dower.⁶

(5) First suit based on right by purchase. Second suit based on right as heir.⁷

Where in the previous suit, title is asserted as heir under the customary law, the decision in such suit will be res judicata in respect of a plea asserting title as heir under the personal law.^{7a} Where the plaintiff in both the suits sues as the reversionary heir in respect of a Hindu widow's estate, the mere fact that in one of the suits the plaintiff professes also to sue in another capacity, viz., that of a donee and owner of the property does not make the second suit one not litigated under the same title.^{7b}

In the former suit, a Hindu father sued his son claiming certain property as his self-acquired property. The second suit was by the father against a creditor of the son and was for declaration that the property was not liable to attachment in execution of a decree held by the creditor against the son. It was held that the creditor claimed under the son litigating under the same title and the bar of res judicata arose so far as the question whether the property was the self-acquired property of the father was concerned.^{7c} See also the undermentioned case.^{7d}

It was accordingly held in cases coming under that Code that where the cause of action in the subsequent suit was different from that in the former suit, the latter suit was not barred even if the issue decided was the same.¹ The Codes of 1877, 1882 and the present Code have substituted the words "no Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit" for the words "the Civil Courts shall not take cognisance of any suit brought on cause of action which shall have been heard, etc."

"which would have had jurisdiction over the matter, in the subsequent suit in which the first decision is given in evidence as conclusive;" in other words, it must be Court of concurrent jurisdiction with that of the Court trying the subsequent suit. This view was, however, negatived in Run Bahadur Singh v. Luchoo Kuer, I. L. R. 6 Calcutta 406. This conflict of view was settled by the Legislature by enacting Section 13 of the Code of 1882, that the Court trying the former suit must have been competent to try "such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised," thus adopting the view of Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J., above referred to as to the necessity of the concurrence of jurisdiction between the two Courts. The contrary view that had been expressed in I. L. R. 6 Calcutta 406 was on appeal, overruled by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Run Bahadur Singh v. Luchoo Kuer, I. L. R. 11 Calcutta 301.

Under the Code of 1882 and under the present Code also, it is not necessary that the Court trying the former suit should have been competent to try the subsequent suit itself.¹ Otherwise the rule of res judicata under the Section will not apply.² Where the Court which tried the former suit is incompetent to try the later suit, the fact that the decree in the prior suit is based on an award made by arbitrators cannot render the matters decided therein res judicata in the subsequent suit.^{2a}

The Section does not, in express words, say that the Court trying the former suit should have been competent to try that suit. But obviously, such competence is also quite necessary.³ As has been seen in Note 3 to Section 9 ante, if a Court

75. Where Court deciding former suit is one of exclusive jurisdiction.—As has been seen already in Note 73, Section 11 requires that the Court trying the former suit must be one of concurrent jurisdiction with that of the Court trying the subsequent suit. It does not deal with the effect of the decision of a Court of exclusive jurisdiction. Where the former Court is a Court of exclusive jurisdiction, matters decided by it will be beyond the competence of a Court trying a subsequent suit, which has no such exclusive jurisdiction. On general principles of res judicata the decision of the former Court of exclusive jurisdiction will be conclusive on the matter decided irrespective of the limitation that the former Court must be competent to decide the subsequent suit.¹ Thus, Small Cause Courts and Revenue Courts have been empowered by the Legislature to try particular classes of suits, to the exclusion of ordinary Civil Courts² and any decision arrived at by such Courts in the exercise of such exclusive power is conclusive and cannot be questioned by the ordinary Civil Courts.³ In some decisions, however, it has been held that a prior decision by a Small Cause Court

As to concurrent jurisdiction of Revenue Courts with the Civil Courts, see Note 77, infra.

77. Concurrent jurisdiction of Revenue, Rent and Settlement Courts and Civil Courts.—It has been already mentioned that the determination of a question of title is generally the function of a Civil Court. (See Note 76.) But if the Legislature invests a Revenue or Rent or Settlement Court with the power of deciding the question of title in certain cases, it becomes in such cases pro tanto a Civil Court of concurrent and competent jurisdiction and when such Court decides a question of title against a party, he is barred by the rule of res judicata from re-opening the question of title in a Civil Court.¹

A decision by a Revenue Court in a matter within its competence will, of course, be res judicata in a subsequent suit in another Revenue Court, where the other conditions of res judicata are satisfied.²

A suit is filed in a Court, the jurisdiction of which is limited to Rs. 5,000 for recovery of interest on a bond for Rs. 12,000. It is contended in defence that the amount actually lent on the bond is only Rs. 4,000 and interest is due only on that amount. The Court finds that the amount lent on the bond is only Rs. 4,000, and awards interest thereon. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff in the High Court for recovery of Rs. 12,000, the principal due under the bond, the defendant contends again that the amount lent is only Rs. 4,000 and that the question whether Rs. 12,000 or Rs. 4,000 was lent is res judicata. The contention is not correct, for, the jurisdiction of the former Court being limited to Rs. 5,000, it was not a Court competent to try the subsequent suit. Misssor Raghunardial v. Shro Bakesh, I. L. R. 9 Calcutta 439 : 9 Ind. App. 197 (P.C.).

It has been held by the Madras High Court that the same rule applies to a case where the plea is founded on general principles of res judicata apart from the terms of the Section.

80. Bona fide valuation of plaintiff determines jurisdiction.—A plaintiff cannot get rid of the bar of res judicata by including in a subsequent suit a clearly unsustainable and therefore not a bona fide claim and bringing it in a Court of higher jurisdiction. Nor can he evade the rule by deliberately or arbitrarily overvaluing the same claim in the subsequent suit.

It has been seen in Note 21, ante, that the word "suit" in Section 11 means such a matter as might have formed the subject-matter of a separate suit independent of the several provisions of the Code which enable a person to unite several causes of action in one and the same suit. Accordingly, it has been held that where A institutes a suit in Court X for possession of properties valued at Rs. 1,000 (the jurisdiction of Court X extending only up to Rs. 1,000), the decision therein will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by A in Court Y (a Court of a higher grade) for possession of the same properties valued at Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 42 mesne profits.³ But where the first suit is for rent valued at a certain amount and the second suit is for a declaration of title for possession and for mesne profits valued bona fide at a figure beyond the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the first Court, the second suit is not barred.⁴ Similarly, where by reason of the additional relief which cannot be said to be unnecessary, jurisdiction is given to a superior Court, the earlier decision will not bar the subsequent suit.⁵ See also Note 81, infra.

embodied in S. 11, are not part of the general principle of res judicata.])

81. It is not determined by the amount of demand or of the transaction from which the claim has arisen.—It follows from what has been said in Notes 21 and 80, ante, that a party who has lost in one Court cannot add causes of action to the original causes of action in the earlier suit for the purpose of swelling the amount of the valuation and then claim that the former Court is not competent to try the subsequent suit. If it were so, any defeated party can, by merely adding another claim, re-agitate the same question in a fresh suit instituted in a higher Court.¹ For the purpose of deciding a question of res judicata each cause of action in the subsequent suit should be treated as a separate suit and, if it be found that one of these causes of action was relied upon in the earlier suit, then, although taking all the causes of action together the second suit may be said to be outside the jurisdiction of the former Court, the former decision will operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.²

82. When the first Court is an inferior Court and the second Court a superior Court.—From what has been said in Note 78 above, it will be clear that the decision on an issue by a Court of inferior jurisdiction would not operate as a bar to the trial of that issue by a Court of superior jurisdiction in a subsequent suit, if the latter suit was beyond the jurisdiction of the Court of inferior jurisdiction.¹

A sues B for Rs. 58 for rent in a Munsif's Court. The defence is that C and not A is the landlord and C intervenes as a defendant. The Court finds that A is entitled to the rent sued for. C then sues A in the sub-Court for a declaration of title and possession of the properties valuing the claim at about 2 lakhs of rupees. The suit is not barred, for a Munsif's Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the subsequent suit. Run Bahadur v. Luchko Koer, I.L.R. 11 Calcutta 301 : 12 Ind. App. 23 (P.C.).

83. Jurisdiction as regards subject-matter.—There must be concurrency of jurisdiction between the two Courts not only as regards pecuniary value but also as regards the subject-matter. Certain Courts such as the Small Cause Courts and Revenue Courts, cannot deal with questions of title.¹ Similarly, in suits for rent between landlord and tenant, the Court cannot deal directly with questions of title though it may incidentally do so.² In all such cases, the said Court cannot be said to have concurrent jurisdiction over questions of title, with Civil Courts dealing with questions of title. A decision of such Court therefore upon an issue incidentally arising as to the title of immovable property cannot operate as res judicata in any subsequent suit for the determination or enforcement of any right or interest in immovable property.³ The same result will follow even if the small cause suit is transferred to the original side and tried by that Court, since the suit retains its character of a small cause even after transfer.⁴ But if a suit of a small cause nature is decided by a Judge on the original side for want of small cause powers, then a finding as to title will be res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.⁵

84. Jurisdiction of a special nature.—A mortgagee governed by the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Act XVII of 1879) first sued for interest due on the principal amount for certain years. It was decreed on the finding that the principal amount was Rs. 350. Subsequently the mortgagee sued on the mortgage contract for sale of the mortgaged property, a suit which fell within the meaning of Section 3 clause (ii) of the Act. It was contended that the former decision as to the amount of the principal sum operated as res judicata. It was held by the High Court of Bombay that the subsequent suit was of a special character given to it by a special law, and as Section 12 of the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act directed the Court in such a suit to go into the history of the transaction between the parties from the date of the transaction notwithstanding any admissions of the parties, the former decision did not operate as res judicata.¹

93. The Court must have been able to try the whole suit and not merely the issue. — See Note 73.

94. The competency must be of the trial Court in the former suit and not that of the Appellate Court therefrom. — The words "in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit . . ." refer to the competency of the original Court and the fact that the Appellate Court in the previous litigation was competent to try the subsequent suit would not make the earlier decision res judicata, if the former trial Court was not competent to try the subsequent suit.¹

95. The Court does not cease to be competent if the inability to try arises, not from incompetence, but from the existence of another Court with preferential jurisdiction. — Under the Small Cause Courts Act, a suit cognisable by a Small Cause Court is not to be instituted and tried by an ordinary Civil Court if, and so long as, within the local limits of its jurisdiction, a Small Cause Court is established competent to take cognisance of such a small cause suit. So that when a former judgment between the parties, of a Court acting on the regular side is relied upon in a small cause suit, the circumstance that the small cause suit could not have been tried by the former Court will not make it a Court of jurisdiction incompetent to try the subsequent suit.¹

Defendant had executed to plaintiff three bonds for Rs. 3,000, 250 and 300 respectively. In a suit in the sub-Court on the bond for Rs. 3,000 defendant pleaded payments to the extent of Rs. 4,000 on account of all the bonds. The defence was found true. Subsequently plaintiff filed a suit on the other two bonds in the Small Cause Court. The defendant pleaded the same defence relying on the former judgment and admitted a small balance. Held that the plea of res judicata was good on the ground that the inability of the former Court to try the small cause suit arose not from incompetence but from the existence of a Court with preferential jurisdiction. (Madho Rao v. Anwit Rao, A. I. R. 1918 Nagpur 163.)

96. The fact that appeals lie or do not lie to different Courts does not affect competency. — Explanation II — Under the Code of 1882, it was held by the Bombay and Madras High Courts and the Punjab Chief Court that a prior decision in which no second appeal lay (as for instance cases under Section 102 of the Code) cannot be pleaded as a bar in a case which was open to second appeal, the reason being that a decision to be res judicata must have been given in a previous suit in which the parties, according to the ordinary procedure, were entitled to take the case ultimately to the same or corresponding appellate tribunal to which the subsequent litigation wherein the decision is relied on as conclusive could be carried and that the words 'competent jurisdiction' in the Section admitted of the provisions of law relating to appealability being considered in giving effect to the plea.¹ But the Calcutta High Court maintained the contrary view that the Section did not require that the two suits must be open to appeal in the same way." In view of this conflict, Explanation II has been added in the present Code adopting the Calcutta view that it is the competency of the original Court that determines res judicata, irrespective of any provision as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court and the fact that appeals do not lie or lie to different Courts is immaterial.³ The undermentioned cases⁴ which had been overruled in later cases under the old Code would now be good law. It has been held by the High Court of Madras and the Punjab Chief Court that the Explanation is not retrospective in operation.⁵

97. The competency must have existed at the date of the former suit.—The words "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit" must be construed to refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time when the first suit was brought,¹ that is to say, if the Court which tried the first suit was competent to try the subsequent suit if then brought, the decision of such Court would be conclusive, although on a subsequent date by a rise in the value of such property² or from any other cause³ the said Court ceases to be the proper Court to take cognisance of the suit relating to that matter. Otherwise, a rise in value being a recurring incident of most properties due either to fortuitous circumstances or to the lapse of time, would knock at the bottom of all finality and lead to absurd results. But it has been held by the Madras High Court that the augmentation of a claim by accrual of interest is not similar to a rise in the value of one and the same property⁴ and therefore if a subsequent suit on a pecuniary claim has to be filed in a Court of superior jurisdiction on account of the accumulation of interest, the former decision would not conclude the matter.⁵ The same High Court has, however, held that if the claim for interest is not bona fide and is clearly untenable, the subsequent suit will be barred.⁶

98. Fraud, if affects competency—Judgment obtained by fraud or collusion.—A decree obtained by fraud or collusion is a nullity and cannot operate in what cases a decree can be set aside for fraud, see the undermentioned cases.⁹

99. Criminal and Civil Courts.—The finding of a Criminal Court is not conclusive in a Civil Court when the same matter is in issue in the Civil Court and the latter is bound to decide the question for itself.¹ But the judgment of the Criminal Court is a valuable piece of evidence.² A judgment in a civil action also cannot be used as conclusive in a criminal case.³ The decision, however, would be admissible in evidence if the parties are substantially the same and the issues in the two cases are identical.⁴ The decision of a Magistrate in a proceeding under Section 488, Criminal Procedure Code, is binding on the succeeding Magistrate on the general principles of res judicata.⁵ As to the applicability of the principle of res judicata in Criminal Courts, see the undermentioned cases⁶ and Section 403, Criminal Procedure Code.

100. The matter must have been heard and finally decided.—“Res judicata,” said Lord Romilly in Jenkins v. Robertson, (1867) L. R. 1 H. L. 117, “by its very words means a matter upon which the Court has exercised its judicial mind and has come to the conclusion that one side is right and has pronounced a decision accordingly. In my opinion res judicata signifies that the Court has, after argument and consideration, come to a decision on a contested matter.”

In other words, in order to support a plea of res judicata, it is not enough that the parties are the same and that the same matter is in issue, it must also be

Lal, Is Sulaiman, C. J., observed as follows: "While the suit is pending and the Court is still seized of the case, although it may be that a defendant may not be allowed to reopen a finding which has been recorded on a particular issue, there is nothing to preclude the Court itself from changing its mind and coming to a contrary conclusion, particularly if a new ruling containing a fresh interpretation of some provision of law comes into existence in the meantime." A remark in a judgment which is in the nature of an obiter dictum cannot operate as res judicata.^{1a} At the same time, the mere fact that the judgment contains observations made obiter will not prevent the point which arises in the case and is decided by the Court from operating as res judicata.^{1b} It is not necessary that the matter should have been decided in express terms in the former suit in order to constitute it res judicata; it is enough if an adjudication on the matter is necessarily involved in the decision in the prior suit.² Nor is it necessary that the decision should have been appealable.³

It has already been seen in Note 33, ante, that a matter constructively in issue could not be actually decided but could only be deemed to be heard and decided, except where the case was not tried upon the merits. A matter could not be said to have been heard and decided either actually or constructively, if it was decided behind the back of a party without notice to him.⁴

Where the former suit was tried according to the procedure then in force, the mere fact that such procedure was summary does not affect the finality of the decision.^{4a}

Where a matter has been heard and decided by two or more former decisions, one conflicting with the other, the last of such decisions in order of date will be the one which will operate as res judicata.⁵ The basis of this rule is that if a party who could raise the plea of res judicata does not do so when an opportunity is given to him, he must be deemed to have waived it.⁶

An application for a rule (revision) and its rejection does not prevent a Court, on a subsequent occasion, if the occasion arises, from granting a rule in the interests of justice.⁷

101. No matter left undecided can be deemed to have been decided.—It has been seen in Note 12 ante, that if a matter is not in issue at all, there can be no res judicata. It cannot be said in such a case that the matter was heard and finally decided.¹ It has also been seen in Note 100, ante, that where a matter, though in issue has, as a fact, been not heard and decided, either actually or constructively, it cannot operate as res judicata. The same principle will apply where a matter, though directly raised in issue, is expressly left open and undecided,² or where the suit has been allowed to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same matter.³ "It would be a contradiction in terms to say that the Court had finally decided matters which it expressly left untouched and undecided."⁴ But if the Court had no power to leave a matter open,⁵ or the order granting permission is in contravention of O. 23 R. 1 and consequently without jurisdiction, such reservation will not prevent the application of the rule of res judicata.⁶

1. A, a landlord, sues B for possession of certain properties with mesne profits on the allegation that B was his annual tenant. B pleads permanent tenancy. The only issue in the case is whether B is annual or a permanent tenant. The Court finds against the permanent tenancy and decrees A's claim; B appeals and then applies to the Appellate Court, to the effect that the question of permanent tenancy should be left open to be decided in a subsequent suit, but that, subject to such permission, the appeal may be dismissed. The Appellate Court passes the following order: "The permission asked for is granted. The appeal is dismissed with costs." B then sues A for a declaration that he is a permanent tenant of A. The suit is barred. The reason is that the only issue in the case being that of permanent tenancy, and the suit being decreed, the Court had no power to reserve the matter to be decided again in any other suit. It would be different if there were two issues one of which is sufficient for the decision and the other is left open.⁷

2. A sues to set aside a gift made by a Hindu widow out of her husband's estate alleging that he is the presumptive heir. The widow dies pending suit and A applies to amend his plaint by setting up a family custom of inheritance and claiming possession of the properties. The application is disallowed and the suit is dismissed but liberty is given to A to file a fresh suit for possession. A subsequently sues for possession on the ground of family custom. The suit is barred, since the

Court, having dismissed the former suit had no power under O. 23 to give liberty to bring a fresh suit.⁸

3. A files a suit against B. The suit is dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff has failed to produce evidence in support of his case, but his right to bring another suit in respect of the same matter is reserved. A suit subsequently brought by A against B in respect of the same matter, will nevertheless, be barred inasmuch as the reservation of liberty in a decree dismissing a suit for failure of proof, is without jurisdiction.⁹ It would be different where the suit is dismissed on a preliminary or technical point, but reserving the plaintiff's right to file a fresh suit.¹⁰ Where, however, an order is made granting leave to withdraw under O. 23 R. 1, the mere fact that it is erroneous or is made on unjustifiable grounds does not make it an order without jurisdiction, and a subsequent suit in accordance with the liberty given is not barred.¹⁰

Where a matter is decided by the first Court but is left undecided by the Appellate Court on appeal, the result is the same as if the matter was not decided at all. The reason is that when a judgment of a Court of first instance is appealed against, the finality of the decision is destroyed, the matter becoming again sub judice; and if the Appellate Court without deciding that issue, disposes of the case on other grounds, the judgment of the first Court upon that issue is no more a bar to a future suit than it would be if that judgment had been reversed by the Court of appeal.¹¹

102. Reservation of liberty to bring a fresh suit on an issue. — See Note 101.

103. Issues omitted or refused to be decided. —

If a matter which has not been heard and decided in a previous suit is not res judicata, it is impossible to say that a question not only not decided in the previous suit but expressly refused to be decided, or excluded from the decision in the suit, can be treated as res judicata.¹ Nor will the principle of constructive res judicata embodied in

109. Plaintiff's suit wholly dismissed — Adverse finding against defendant. — It has been seen in Note 7, ante, that an adverse finding against the successful party is not res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties. Thus, where a decree is one of dismissal in favour of the defendant but there is an adverse finding against him on one point, a plea of res judicata cannot be founded upon that decision; because the defendant having succeeded on the other plea, had no occasion to go further as to the findings against him.

In Thakur Mangundeo v. Thakur Mahadev Singh, I.L.R. 18 Calcutta 647, a landlord sued to eject his tenant who defended upon the ground that the tenure was permanent. A previous suit by the plaintiff had been dismissed on the ground that no notice to quit had been served, but the Court held at the same time that the tenure was not permanent. It was held that the previous decision was not res judicata, "the decree dismissing the suit being based, not upon the finding adverse to the defendant in that case, but in spite of it." "Where, however, the decree itself embodies the finding, it cannot be said to be not res judicata merely because the suit itself was dismissed on another point."

110. Suit wholly decreed — Adverse finding against plaintiff. — The principles stated in Note 109 apply equally to a case where a plaintiff's suit is entirely decreed in his favour with an adverse finding against him.

111. Finality of appealable decisions.—Where an appeal is filed against a decree, the finality of the decision of the lower Court is destroyed and the matter again becomes sub judice.^{1a} "Where an appeal lies, the finality of the decree on such appeal being taken, is qualified by the appeal and the decree is not final in the sense that it will form res judicata as between the same parties."¹ But the mere possibility of an appeal being filed does not affect the finality of the decree.² The view expressed in the undermentioned cases³ that a judgment liable to appeal is only a provisional and not a final adjudication and therefore cannot operate as res judicata does not appear to be sound on principle. No one can predicate when a decision is likely to become final. For, any party can appeal from a decision after an indefinitely long time taking advantage of Section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act, provided, of course, sufficient cause is shown.

If a decision is appealed against, it is the appellate judgment that must be looked into in order to decide a question of res judicata.⁴ An appellate judgment operates by way of res judicata as regards all the findings of the lower Court which, though not expressly referred to in it, are necessary to sustain the appellate decree.⁵ If the appeal is withdrawn or is dismissed on a preliminary point without a decision on the merits, or is dismissed for default of appearance of the appellant, the parties are bound by the decision of the lower Court on each point as actually decided by it.⁶ But if the appeal is allowed on preliminary points, then the findings of the trial Court are not res judicata.^{6a} Where there is a decree or an order as much as a judgment whereby the Court exercises its mind on a contested case; for "a judgment by consent is intended to put a stop to litigation between the parties, just as much as is a judgment which results from the decision of the Court after the matter has been fought out to the end." But an estoppel by a consent decree can arise only when the question raised in the subsequent suit was present to the minds of the parties and was actually dealt with by the consent decree. The question in all such cases would be whether the parties did intend that the question at issue should be finally settled between them by the consent decree and whether the consent decree did actually settle that question.³ In order to effect an estoppel it is also necessary that it should appear on record that the question had been put in issue. Thus, in a prior suit for a certain sum of money on account of cesses, defendants appeared in person, filed no written statement and simply confessed judgment whereupon a decree was passed against them, it was held that the prior decision did not preclude the defendants from disputing in a subsequent suit the right of the plaintiff to levy the cess.⁴

A compromise decree cannot create an estoppel between the parties to it, where the parties have subsequently entered into another compromise which has

1 been embodied in a decree.¹²

A party to a suit who is not a party to the compromise is not bound by the compromise or the decree based on it and such decree cannot operate as an estoppel against him.¹³

A consent decree can be set aside either by a regular suit or by an application for review of judgment; but not by a rule or motion.¹⁴ It can be set aside on any ground which would justify a cancellation of the agreement on which the decree is based.¹⁵

115. Declaratory decrees.—Where the decree in a prior suit is merely declaratory in its nature and does not give consequential relief, a subsequent suit for working out the rights so declared would not be barred¹⁶ though the decree will be conclusive as to the rights which were declared.¹⁷ See Note 36, ante.

It has been held that apart from the provisions of this Section, a declaratory decree is conclusive between the parties to it under Section 43 of the Specific Relief Act and hence, though in a particular case such a decree may not operate as res judicata under this Section, the re-trial of the questions decided by the decree will be barred under the provisions of Section 43 of the Specific Relief Act.¹⁸

116. Finality of decrees in redemption suits.—Where in a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree is passed to the effect that the right to redeem shall be extinguished upon the non-payment of the money within the time allowed, a second suit for redemption after the previous decree is allowed to become final by non-payment, is barred by res judicata.¹⁹ Where, however, the decree does not provide that the right to redeem shall be extinguished on non-payment of the mortgage within the time fixed, there will be no such bar.²⁰ See Note 40, ante. In any case, the findings as to the amount due and similar questions, arrived at in the previous suit, cannot be re-opened in the subsequent suit.²¹

117. Decision need not have been embodied in the decree.—It has been seen in Note 100, ante, that all matters necessarily involved in the decision will be deemed to have been heard and decided. It is not necessary that the decree should expressly refer to such a matter.¹

118. Decision need not be express but may be implied.—As has been seen in Note 100, ante, where a question was necessarily decided in effect, though not in express terms, the decision cannot be re-agitated as between the parties to the suit in any other form in any other suit.¹ But the decision in the former suit must necessarily involve an adjudication in a particular way on the issue raised in the later suit and such adjudication must be inconsistent with the claim made in the later suit.² Again, if the matter was not raised at all in the previous suit, there can be no question of implied decision in the prior suit.³ See Note 12, ante.

119. How to determine what issues were decided—General.—The question whether a matter was raised and then heard and finally decided is one of fact to be decided upon the circumstances of each particular case¹ and the burden of establishing the plea of res judicata lies upon the party setting it up.² It cannot be maintained where the decree or order upon which it rested has not been produced.³ Even if the judgment in the prior suit shows clearly enough what the Judge understood to be the questions for decision, the Court cannot give effect to the plea unless it can say for itself that the matters now in issue were in issue in the former proceedings; whether any issues were settled in those proceedings or the points in dispute were otherwise formulated must appear from the record.⁴ The bare wording of the decree is not the sole test of what the Court decided in the prior suit; so that if it is not clear from the decree, the Court may and should look into the judgment and the pleadings in the case.⁵ As the plea of res judicata is one in bar of legal rights, it should be given effect to only on a strict construction of the pleadings and of the decisions in the previous suits." In order to render a prior decision conclusive in a subsequent suit it must appear from the record of the former suit that the particular matter sought to be concluded was necessarily determined. If there be any uncertainty on this head in the record, as for example, if it appear that several distinct matters have been litigated, upon one or more of which the judgment may have been passed, without indicating which of them was thus litigated and upon which the judgment was rendered, the whole subject-matter of the action will be at large.⁷

120. Reference to judgment.—In order to see what was in issue in a suit or what has been heard and decided, the judgment¹ must be looked at. For, the decree, according to the Code, is only to state the relief granted or other determination of suit. The determination may be on various grounds, but the decree would not show the ground, and will not afford any information as to matters which were in issue or have been decided.^{1a} But if a decree is specific and is at variance with a statement in the judgment, regard must be had to the decree and not to the statement in the judgment.²

121. Reference to pleadings.—See Note 119, ante.

122. Extrinsic evidence.—If there is any ambiguity in the record of the prior proceeding as to what matters were decided therein, it will not be open to the parties to adduce extrinsic evidence to show that a particular matter was decided.¹ In such cases the former decision will not operate as res judicata.² But if the uncertainty be with regard to the meaning of certain indefinite terms used in the prior decree, the acts of the parties can be taken into consideration in fixing the meaning of such terms.³

123. Relief claimed but not granted—Explanation V—General.

The legal effect of this Explanation is to treat the omission to grant a relief asked for as equivalent to an express refusal to grant it.¹ Thus, where in a suit on a security bond, praying for a money decree and in default of payment of money by the defendant for the sale of the secured properties, the Court granted only a money decree, the prayer for the sale of the properties must be deemed to have been refused and such refusal will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit for sale of the said properties.¹² But it is necessary that a decree should have been passed in the suit, a relief claimed in which is omitted to be granted. Where, therefore, the suit did not result in a decree at all, as where it is withdrawn without liberty to bring a fresh suit,² or where no relief is asked for in the plaint, or the Court refuses to grant a relief on the ground that no such relief is claimed in the plaint,³ or where the Court could not grant the relief, as where a personal remedy is asked for in the plaint in a mortgage suit, which could not be granted at the time of passing the decree for sale,⁴ the Explanation does not apply. Nor does it apply to consent decrees.⁵ See Note 114, ante.

Where a particular relief asked for in a prior suit was not objected to by the other parties, but somehow or other the decree omitted to grant the relief, it cannot be said that a subsequent suit for the same relief is barred by reason of this Explanation.⁶ It is also necessary for the application of the Explanation that the relief claimed must be a substantive one, and also such as the Court was bound to grant. An auxiliary or discretionary relief is not within the Explanation. See Notes 124 and 125 below.

It has been held that the Explanation only applies to a relief claimed in the plaint. Hence, where in disposing of an application for a personal decree against the mortgagee under O. 34 R. 6 the Court does not expressly grant the prayer for a personal decree, a second application for a personal decree is not barred by res judicata.⁷

124. Relief claimed must have been substantive and not auxiliary.—Explanation V of this Section refers to a case where several heads of relief independent of each other are claimed, put in issue and duly controverted and one of them is neither granted nor refused. If a relief is not claimed specially but simply as the ground for the real and substantial relief or merely as an argumentative step towards the decree sought, the absence of any mention in the decree will not bar

a subsequent suit for that relief.¹ Thus, where a suit was instituted for recovery of possession of certain lands with a prayer for a declaration that the defendant had no title to the properties in question but the suit was dismissed on the ground of limitation, it was held that the declaration claimed was not one under Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, but an argumentative step which led up to the main relief claimed in the suit, namely possession; and that therefore the omission to grant the declaration cannot be treated under the Explanation as a refusal to grant the relief.²

125. Relief must have been one which the Court was bound to grant and not one which it has discretion to grant or refuse.—The words 'relief claimed' only apply to something which forms part of the claim strictly so called, i. e., something which the plaintiff may claim as of right, something included in his cause of action and which, if he establishes his cause of action, the Court has no discretion to refuse. They do not apply to reliefs which the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, grant or refuse.¹ A files a suit for possession and for past and future mesne profits (i. e., mesne profits before and after the institution of the suit). Here if A establishes his cause of action, he is entitled as of right to get past mesne profits and the Court has no discretion to refuse it. Where therefore the decree omits to grant it, it will be deemed to have been refused under this Explanation.² But A is not entitled, as of right, to get future mesne profits, the granting or refusal thereof depending upon the discretion of the Court. It has accordingly been held that the omission to grant future mesne profits is not a bar to a subsequent suit for such profits.³

Section 11 has no application to cases under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act where a prayer for the passing of a decree for instalments is refused in the suit; notwithstanding it, the executing Court can grant a prayer for recovery of the amount in instalments.⁴

126. Effect of supersession of decree in appeal or otherwise.—Money recovered under a decree or judgment cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force; the reason is that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding.¹ But if it is reversed on an appeal therefrom,² or in an appeal from another proceeding in the same suit,³ or otherwise superseded by a separate suit,⁴ then the prior decision will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit.

127. Judgments not res judicata may be admissible in evidence. — See Notes 2, 41 and 68, ante.

128. Withdrawal of suit without permission. — The basic principle of res judicata being the existence of a final adjudication on the merits, there can be no bar on the ground of res judicata where a suit is withdrawn without obtaining liberty to file a fresh suit.¹ But the effect of such a withdrawal will be to bar a fresh suit on the same cause of action under O. 23 R. 1.² See also O. 23 R. 1 and Note 101, ante.

129. Wrong decision on a question of res judicata — Revision. — See Section 115, Note 13.

12. Where a plaintiff is precluded by rules from instituting a further suit in respect of any particular cause of action, he shall not be entitled to institute a suit in respect of such cause of action in any Court to which this Code applies.

13. [S. 14.] A foreign judgment³ shall be conclusive⁸ as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim⁶ litigating under the same title⁷ except—

- (a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction;⁹
- (b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case;¹³
- (c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or a refusal to recognise the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable;¹⁴
- (d) where the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice;¹⁵
- (e) where it has been obtained by fraud;¹⁶
- (f) where it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in British India.¹⁷

[1877, S. 14; See S. 2, Cls. 5, 6; Explan. to S. 10; S. 29; Ss. 43—45.]

When foreign judgment not conclusive.

obligation arises to pay that sum on which an action of debt to enforce the judgment can be maintained.² This is the principle on which Section 13 is based and it declares that a foreign judgment is conclusive as to any matter directly adjudicated upon except in the six cases specified.³ In Mallappa Yellappa Benmuv v. Raghavendra Shanmua Deshpande,^{3a} it was observed as follows: "Now, ordinarily it is not open to the Courts in British India to sit in appeal over a foreign judgment because it proceeds on grounds which would not be adequate in British India, unless it offends against the rules under Section 13." Section 13 applies not only to cases where a foreign judgment is set up as a defence but also to cases in which the plaintiff seeks to obtain a decree in a British Indian Court on a foreign judgment.⁴

3. "Foreign judgment," meaning of.— "Foreign judgment" has been defined in Section 2 (6) as the judgment of a foreign Court. Under Section 2 (5) 'foreign Court' means a Court situated beyond the limits of British India which has no authority in British India and is not established or continued by the Governor-General in Council. Thus, the Courts in England,¹ the Supreme Court of Mauritius,² the French Courts in India,³ the Courts in Ceylon,⁴ and the Courts of the Native States⁵ are all foreign Courts. The Privy Council is not a foreign Court as it has authority within British India.⁶ See Section 2 (5) for full notes.

The word "judgment" in the expression "foreign judgment" as used in Section 2 (6) ante, has the meaning given to it in English law and not the meaning given by Section 2 (9) ante. That is, the term "foreign judgment" means the decree or order of a foreign Court.^{6a}

An order which is not a 'judgment' cannot be a foreign judgment.^{6b} Thus a summary order under Section 12 of the Arbitration Act enforcing an award in England is not a judgment and cannot be regarded as a foreign judgment for the purposes of this Section.⁷ Similarly an Act of State passed by a State in its sovereign capacity is not a foreign judgment.⁸

6. "Same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim."—See Notes 41 to 67 of Section 11. In a suit for the administration in a foreign Court of a deceased testator's estate, the title of the executors as such was challenged. It was held by the High Court of Bombay that though executors would ordinarily represent the legatees regarding all matters which have necessarily to be decided in a suit to which the executors are parties, they could not, where their title was challenged, be said to have represented the legatees, nor that the latter claimed through the executors, and that under such circumstances, the legatee was not bound by a foreign judgment against the executors.^{1a}

See also the undermentioned case.¹

7. "Litigating under the same title."—See Section 11 Note 70.

8. Foreign judgments, when not conclusive.—A foreign judgment, to be a valid cause of action for a suit upon it in British India, must be final and conclusive in the Court in which it is passed. In order to establish that a final and conclusive judgment has been pronounced, it must be shown that, in the Court by which it was pronounced, it conclusively, finally and for ever, established the existence of the right of which it is sought to be made conclusive evidence in this country, so as to make it res judicata between the parties.^{1a} A foreign judgment will not operate as res judicata between the same parties or their representatives on any matter not directly adjudicated upon by that judgment and also in the six cases specified in clauses (a) to (f).¹ See Notes 9 to 17 below. Further, it is only in proceedings on a foreign judgment that the question of the effect of the foreign judgment can properly arise.²

9. Where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction—Clause (a).—It is a fundamental principle of law that where Court has no jurisdiction over a matter, its judgments and orders are null and void.¹ A judgment, therefore, of a foreign Court will not be conclusive unless it was competent to pronounce it. But whether a foreign Court is or is not, of a competent jurisdiction within the meaning of Section 13 (a), has to be determined in accordance with the principles of international law and not in accordance with the law of the country in which the foreign Court is situated.² In Pemberton v. Hughes,³ Lindley, M. R., observed :

"The jurisdiction which alone is important in these matters is the competence of the Court in an international sense, i.e., its territorial competence over the subject-matter and over the

12. Submission to, and waiver of objection as to jurisdiction. — It has been seen in Note 9 above that one of the cases in which foreign Courts are recognized to be internationally of competent jurisdiction is voluntary submission to the jurisdiction of the Court.¹ The reason for this is that having taken a chance of judgment in his favour by submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court, it is not right that he should turn round when the judgment goes against him, and say that the Court had no jurisdiction.² The mere fact that the defendant allowed the suit in the foreign Court to be heard ex parte will not amount to his submitting to the jurisdiction of that Court.³ A submission to the jurisdiction of the Court may be in the following ways :

(1) Where there is an express agreement to submit to the Court's jurisdiction.⁴ The agreement must, however, be fairly specific. The mere fact of entering into a contract of partnership in a foreign country does not involve an agreement that all matters and disputes arising thereunder shall be submitted to the jurisdiction of the Courts of that country.⁵

(2) Where the party, as a defendant, voluntarily appears in the cause in the foreign Court. — Where the defendant voluntarily appears in the cause without any protest as to jurisdiction or without any such protest until a late stage of the case, his conduct will clearly amount to a submission to the jurisdiction of the Court.⁶ Thus, where the defendant appears in the suit, files a written statement and applies jointly with the plaintiff for adjournment of the case to enable a settlement to take place, it will clearly amount to a submission.⁷ Where he voluntarily appears and protests against jurisdiction but also pleads on the merits, it will, nevertheless, amount to a submission to jurisdiction.⁸ Even where he appears and merely protests against the jurisdiction, it is conceived, that the appearance will amount to a submission.⁹ In *Boisvire and Co. v. Brockner and Co.*¹⁰ Cave, J., said :

"For the defendant it is submitted that as the foundation for the legal obligation is consent, an appearance under protest affords no indication of consent to the jurisdiction. . . . Now no one supposes that when a man appears voluntarily as a defendant in an action before a foreign Court he does so because he likes it ; he appears because, on the whole, he deems it his interest to submit to have the dispute decided by the foreign tribunal It this is the true source of the obligation, why should it not extend to the case of a man who appears without duress, and therefore voluntarily in one sense, but who accompanies his appearance with a protest and appears not because he is compelled to do so, but because he judges it to be for his interest to do so?"

The mere fact that the defendant employs a pleader in a suit in a foreign Court will not amount to a submission to its jurisdiction if at the hearing the pleader reports that he has no instructions from his client.⁹

Suppose now that a foreign Court passes a judgment in absentum against a defendant not resident within its jurisdiction and subsequent thereto the defendant applies to that Court to set aside the ex parte decree. Does this amount to a submission to jurisdiction so as to make the decree originally passed against him, a valid one? There is a conflict of opinion on the point. The High Court of Madras has held that it does not.¹⁰ The High Court of Lahore¹¹ and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur¹² have held that it does. The Bombay High Court, in the undermentioned case,¹³ has held that if a defendant against whom a judgment in absentum has been passed by a foreign Court, allows it to be executed in a British Court without objection, he must be taken to submit to the decree of the foreign Court and cannot seek to set aside the sale in execution proceedings. It is submitted, with respect, that the Madras view is correct. A decree, which when passed is an absolute nullity, cannot, on any principle of law become valid by reason of a subsequent submission to the jurisdiction of the Court. Such submission, if anything, will only operate to give jurisdiction to the Court in respect of future orders passed by it. In other words, in order to give jurisdiction and therefore validity to the decree of the foreign Court, there must be submission to the foreign Court before judgment is pronounced.^{13a}

Where a business is carried on within the jurisdiction of a foreign Court by means of an agent resident there and a decree is passed on summons to him or on a pleader authorized to receive summons, the decree is prima facie binding on the principal who will be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court.¹⁴

A submission is not voluntary if the appearance is made under duress, as for instance where it is made to obtain release of property seized by a foreign tribunal in attachment or other proceedings.¹⁵ But an appearance merely to avoid an inconvenience that might happen in the future does not make it an involuntary appearance. (3). By conduct, apart from appearance.—Where in a suit in a foreign Court against a defendant residing in British India, the plaintiff effected an attachment before judgment of moneys belonging to the defendant in the hands of a third person, and the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff praying that he might be allowed to collect a portion of the money and stating that the plaintiff might collect the rest of it and the defendant therefore allowed the suit to proceed ex parte, it was held in the undermentioned case^{16a} that there was a submission to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court and that the defendant could not, at the time of execution, object to the decree as being without jurisdiction.

(4) By a party himself invoking the aid of the Court.—A person, by instituting a suit for damages caused by a collision at sea, subjects himself to the jurisdiction of the Court and renders himself liable for damages rendered by the same collision.¹⁶ The mere fact, however, that a party has once appeared before a foreign Court in the character of a plaintiff, cannot be taken to be a submission to the jurisdiction of that Court in regard to all subsequent actions against him in that Court.¹⁷

13. "Where it has not been given on the merits"—Clause (b).—A foreign judgment must, in order to operate as res judicata, have been on the merits of the case,¹ and Courts in India have the power to examine the judgment to see whether it has been given on the merits.¹⁸ Under some systems of law prevailing in foreign countries when the defendant commits default in appearance, a judgment is given to the plaintiff without any further hearing in the matter. Such a judgment is not a decision on the merits of the case but is a penalty for default of appearance, and will not therefore operate as res judicata.² Thus, the true test for deciding whether a judgment has been given on the merits or not is to see whether it has been given as penalty for any conduct of the defendant or whether it is based on a consideration of the truth or otherwise of the plaintiffs' case.^{2a} Where, in an action for recovery of money in the King's Bench Division of the High Court in England, the defendant having failed to comply with an order to answer interrogatories, his defence was struck off and judgment was entered for the plaintiff, it was held by the Privy Council that the judgment was not one given on the merits of the case and that no action could be maintained on it in Indian Courts.³ Section 13 (b) refers to cases where the controversy raised in the action has not been, in fact, the subject of direct adjudication by the Court.⁴ Thus, a judgment given in a case in which the defendant puts in no appearance, no evidence is called or considered, and in which judgment is given by default by way of summary procedure, is not a judgment "on the merits."^{4a}

Where, notwithstanding the non-appearance of the defendant, evidence is taken on behalf of the plaintiff and judgment is given on such evidence, it will be one on the merits.⁵

Similarly, where a suit is adjourned for settlement and the parties agree that if the suit is not settled by the adjourned date, a judgment should be passed in favour of the plaintiff and a judgment is so passed on the adjourned date, there having been no settlement the judgment will be one on the merits of the case.⁶ It has been held in the undermentioned case^{6a} that an ex parte decree obtained under the summary procedure of the Court of Ceylon is not one on the merits, is not even a judgment and therefore does not satisfy the requirements of this clause. A wrong view of the legal liability of a party or of the onus of proof will not show that the judgment is not one on the merits.⁷ But the dismissal of a suit as being barred by limitation will not be deemed to be on the merits except where that law not only bars the remedy but extinguishes the right itself.⁸

14. Where it is against international law or based on non-recognition of British Indian law — Clause (c). — A judgment based upon an incorrect view of international law or a refusal to recognize the law of British India where such law is applicable is not conclusive.¹ But the incorrectness or the refusal must appear on the face of the proceedings.

15. Where the proceedings are opposed to natural justice—Clause (d). — Clause (d) refers to the procedure taken for arriving at a judgment rather than to the merits of the case.¹ It is a principle of natural justice that a person must be given an opportunity of being heard before an adjudication is made against him. Thus, a judgment obtained without notice of the suit to the defendant is contrary to natural justice.² Similarly, a judgment against a party not properly represented in the proceedings, as for instance where no guardian ad litem is appointed for a minor defendant,³ or where the interest of the person so appointed is in conflict with that of the minor,^{3a} or where the legal representative of a deceased party is not brought on record,⁴ is contrary to natural justice.

Courts in India will insist on a strict proof of the service of process alleged to have emanated from a foreign Court, before giving effect to a foreign judgment.⁵ But where the foreign Court has held a particular notice to be sufficient, it must, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, be presumed to be correct.⁶

A foreign judgment based on a second or a third review is opposed to natural justice.⁷ An incorrect view of the law by the foreign Court will not, however, render the judgment one opposed to natural justice.⁸

16. Where it has been obtained by fraud.—It is an established rule that a party to an action can impeach the judgment in it for fraud,¹ for it vitiates the most solemn transactions.² But the fraud must not be merely constructive; it must be actual fraud consisting of representations designed and intended to mislead; a mere concealment of facts is not sufficient to avoid a foreign judgment.³ Nor will a mere error of law in obtaining a judgment constitute fraud.⁴

17. Where the decree is founded on a breach of British Indian law.—Where a foreign judgment is founded on a breach of any law in force in British India, it will not be enforced even though the defect is not apparent on the face of the proceedings.¹ A foreign judgment on a claim which is barred according to law of British India cannot be said to be based upon a breach of the Indian law² and will be conclusive in a suit upon the judgment in British India.³

18. Effect of foreign judgment.—A foreign judgment has no force or authority as such in British India, but may give a cause of action for a suit to obtain the same relief in British India. It is only in such proceedings that the question of effect of the foreign judgment properly arises.⁴ It has been seen that a foreign judgment is conclusive if passed by a competent Court⁵ except in the cases mentioned in clauses (a) to (e) of Section 13. This will be so even though the judgment is subject to appeal and an appeal is actually pending in the foreign country.

where it was given. Even a stay of execution does not affect the finality of the foreign judgment which, nevertheless, can be sued on.³

Where the foreign Court did not decide the issue raised, the British Indian Court is not barred from deciding that issue.⁴ Nor is every issue decided by the foreign Court binding though the relief granted or refused is binding.⁵

There is a distinction between a case in which a defendant relies on a foreign judgment as a bar to a suit and a case in which the plaintiff seeks to enforce a foreign judgment. In the former case, the fair presumption is that the defendant submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court in the foreign country.⁶

In a suit upon a foreign judgment the plaintiff cannot recover anything more than what appears on the face of the judgment.⁷ He cannot, for instance, claim interest when the foreign judgment is silent about it.⁸

19. Enforcement of foreign judgments in British India. — A foreign judgment which is conclusive under Section 13 can be enforced in British India in the following ways —

1. by instituting a suit on such foreign judgment, or,
2. in cases of judgments of the Courts of Native States notified under Section 44, infra, by execution of the decrees of the foreign Court as if they had been passed by the Courts of British India.¹

There was a conflict of opinion at one time whether a judgment of a Court of a Native State in India could be enforced by a suit on the judgment. The High Court of Madras held that it could.² The Bombay High Court held that it could not, on the ground that judicial inquiries in Native States were not conducted with intelligence or integrity.³ In order to remove this conflict, Act VII of 1888 added a clause to Section 14 of the Code of 1882 to the effect that a suit could be brought on such judgment but that the British Indian Court was not precluded from an inquiry into the merits of the case in which the judgment was passed.⁴ This clause has now been omitted and the reason was stated by the Special Committee as follows :

“It appears to the committee that it is not possible to maintain this distinction in the case of all Asiatic Courts. The Courts in Japan, for instance, are entitled to be treated on the same footing as European Courts.”⁵

There is therefore now no distinction between the judgments of the Courts of Native States and other foreign judgments. A suit can be brought on such judgments, and in such a suit as a general rule the Court cannot institute an enquiry into the merits of the original claim or the propriety of the decision.⁷

1. Scope and object of the Section.—This and the following Sections up to Section 20 regulate the form for the institution of suits in British India.¹ The rule requiring every suit to be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade is only a rule of procedure and not of jurisdiction. Thus the District Judge and the Subordinate Judge have jurisdiction over all original suits cognisable by the Civil Court subject, in its exercise, to a certain procedure, namely, that the suits be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try them.² "The object of the Legislature," said Petheram, C. J., "is that the Court of the higher grade shall not be overcrowded with suits."³
- It has been held that this Section does not apply to the High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction.⁴
2. "Suit."—See Section 11 Note 21 on "Suit."
3. "Shall be instituted."—As has already been seen in Note 1 above, this Section merely lays down a rule of procedure. It does not deprive any Court of the jurisdiction which it may otherwise possess under the Acts constituting them.¹ Hence, the institution in a Court of a higher grade, of a suit, which ought to have been instituted in a Court of lower grade, is only an irregularity in procedure covered by Section 99 of the Civil Procedure Code, and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court.² The contrary view taken in the undermentioned cases^{3a} cannot be accepted as correct. In Nidhi Lal v. Mazhar Hussain,³ Petherram, C. J., said :

"The word 'shall' is, in my opinion, imperative on the suitor. The word is used for the purpose of protecting the Courts. The suitor shall be obliged to bring his suit in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. The object of the Legislature is that the Court of the higher grade shall not be overpowered with suits. . . . The proviso is for the benefit of the Court of higher grade and it is not bound to take advantage of it. If it does not wish to try the suit it may refuse to entertain it. If it wishes to retain the suit in its Court it may do so: it is not bound to refuse to entertain it."

It is thus clear that where a suit which ought to have been instituted in a Court of lower grade is instituted in a Court of a higher grade, the latter cannot be said to have no jurisdiction to try the suit though as a matter of procedure the plaintiff ought to be returned for presentation to the proper Court.⁴

Where, however, a suit is instituted in a Court of a lower grade than the one which is competent to try it, the proceedings are null and void as being without jurisdiction,⁵ and it must be presumed that material prejudice has been caused to the party concerned.^{6a} The willingness of the plaintiff not to claim, out of the sum that might be realised by the sale of the suit property, anything in excess of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court cannot confer on the Court jurisdiction to try the suit.⁶

Where A, as a sole plaintiff, can only sue in the Court of the Subordinate Judge as being the Court of the lowest grade competent to try the suit, but B, his co-plaintiff, can, by virtue of Act XX of 1863, sue only in the District Court, this Section does not prevent A and B from together instituting the suit as co-plaintiffs in the District Court.⁷

Once the institution of the suit takes place according to the provisions of this Section its operation is exhausted and the suit should not be transferred merely because it is subsequently found that the plaintiff is entitled only to a part of the claim which would have been cognisable by a lower Court.⁸

4. "Court of the lowest grade."—The following are the several grades of Courts in order, which have been established in British India:

1. High Courts.—There are Chartered High Courts in Allahabad, Bombay, Calcutta, Lahore, Madras, Patna and Nagpur, Judicial Commissioner's Courts in Peshawar and Sind and a Chief Court in Oudh. All these are "High Courts" for the purpose of the Code. See the General Clauses Act (X of 1897, Section 3 (24).)

2. District Courts.—Next below the High Court is the District Court which is the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction in the district. It is also a Court of appeal from the decrees and orders of Subordinate Courts in certain cases.¹

3. Courts of the Subordinate Judges (In the Bombay Presidency, Subordinate Judges of the First Class).—The jurisdiction of these Subordinate Judges extends to all original suits of any value.²

4. Courts of the District Munsifs (corresponds to Courts of Subordinate Judges of the Second Class in the Bombay Presidency).—These have only a limited pecuniary jurisdiction, that of the Second Class Subordinate Judge in Bombay extending up to Rs. 5,000; that of the District Munsif in Madras extending up to Rs. 3,000 and that of the Munsif in Bengal, North-Western Provinces and Assam extending up to Rs. 1,000.³

In each of the Presidency Towns of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras there is also a Small Cause Court with pecuniary jurisdiction up to Rs. 2,000. Clause 12 of the Letters Patent of these High Courts provides that the High Court has no jurisdiction over Small Cause suits the value of which is less than Rs. 100.^{3a} In suits of a Small Cause nature where the value of the subject-matter exceeds Rs. 100 but does not exceed Rs. 2,000, both the High Court and the Small Cause Court have jurisdiction to try the suits, but as a matter of procedure they should be instituted only in the Small Cause Court as being the Court of the lowest grade.^{3b}

The words "Court of the lowest grade" refer only to Courts to which the Civil Procedure Code applies. The Code does not apply to Village Munsifs' Courts in Madras Presidency and a Small Cause suit therefore which is cognisable both by the Small Cause Court as well as by the Court of the Village Munsif need not be necessarily filed in the latter Court as being the Court of the "lowest grade."⁴

5. "Competent to try it"—General.—As has been observed already in Section 9 ante, the jurisdiction of a Court to try a suit is of three kinds, viz., jurisdiction with reference to the nature of the suit, pecuniary jurisdiction and territorial jurisdiction.⁷ Thus the exemption of certain suits from the cognisance of Small Cause Courts relates to the jurisdiction of Courts with regard to the nature of the suit.^{1a} The prohibition of Presidency Small Cause Courts from entertaining suits of which the value exceeds Rs. 2,000 is an example of pecuniary jurisdiction. And the rule that a Court shall not try a suit for immovable property situated beyond certain limits prescribed as the limits of its jurisdiction is an example of territorial jurisdiction.

Where the Court has jurisdiction to try a suit, it has jurisdiction to decide every question arising in the suit and its decree, though it may be wrong, is binding on the parties until it is reversed in some manner provided by law.² But where a suit is instituted in a Court having no jurisdiction to try it, the defect is a fatal one^{2a} and cannot be cured by its subsequent transfer to a Court having jurisdiction.³ Once jurisdiction is acquired by a Court over a suit, it continues in all matters in the suit that are brought within its cognisance by the Civil Procedure Code.⁴

An inferior Court has jurisdiction to set aside the decree of a superior Court obtained by fraud provided it is otherwise competent to try the suit.⁵

6. Valuation in plaint determines jurisdiction.— See Notes 4 and 5 to Section 6 ante.

7. Cases in which satisfactory valuation is not possible.— There are many suits which are not capable of satisfactory valuation for purposes of jurisdiction, such as suits for the restitution of conjugal rights and suits for the removal of a trustee. Under Section 9 of the Suits Valuation Act the High Court has power to make rules providing that any such suits may be valued in a specified manner. In the absence of any such rules framed by the High Courts, a conflict of view has arisen as to the right method of valuation of such suits. The Allahabad,¹ Bombay² and Calcutta³ High Courts have held that, in such cases, the plaintiff's valuation should be accepted as determining jurisdiction. According to the Madras High Court the principle to be adopted is that where the subject-matter is wholly unrelated to anything which can be readily stated in definite money terms, the plaintiff's own valuation must be accepted, but that where the subject-matter is so related to things which have a real money value and which will be affected by the relief claimed, the market value of the property affected will determine jurisdiction.

3. A sues for the removal of a Malabar tarwad or of a trustee. According to the Madras High Court the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction must be guided by the value of the tarwad or trust property.⁸ In Madras, rules have now been framed under S. 9 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, for the valuation of suits for removal of karnavams. See the Notification referred to below.^{9a}
4. A sues to set aside a document or to compel the registration of a document. The reliefs claimed are not incapable of valuation and therefore the value of the interest affected by the document is the value for purposes of jurisdiction.⁹

8. Effect of improper valuation.—Although it is the plaintiff's valuation that determines the form of a suit, where the value can be correctly ascertained the plaintiff is not at liberty to place an arbitrary value on his suit or to misrepresent its real value so as to have it tried by a Court different from that intended by the Legislature.¹ If it appears to the Court that the allegation in the plaint is falsely made for the purpose of avoiding the jurisdiction of the proper Court, the Court may require the plaintiff to prove that the valuation is proper.² Where however a decree is passed in the suit, the Appellate Court has no power to entertain any objection to the jurisdiction of the trial Court on the ground of overvaluation or undervaluation, unless the objection was taken in the trial Court at or before the framing of the issues or unless the Appellate Court is satisfied that, on account of the overvaluation or undervaluation, the decision of the suit on the merits has been prejudiced.³ The mere change in the form consequent on the overvaluation or undervaluation of a suit will not be considered as affecting the disposal of the suit on the merits.⁴ But it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that where, owing to the undervaluation of a suit, the appeal from the decree is heard and decided by a District Court instead of by the High Court, the decree passed by the District Court is a nullity.⁵

9. Valuation for jurisdiction is different from valuation for court-fees.

— The special rules applicable to valuation for court-fees are not to be taken as necessarily a guide in determining the value of the subject-matter of a suit for purposes of jurisdiction.¹ Thus, where a notional value different from the real value is placed upon the property for the purpose of the court-fees, such notional value cannot displace the real value for the purpose of jurisdiction.² The Suits Valuation Act and the Court-Fees Act are purely fiscal enactments and they have no bearing on the question as to which is the proper Court for the institution of the suit, having regard to the property involved in the suit.³ See the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

10. Mode of valuation.

— The mode of valuation of suits for purposes of jurisdiction is laid down in the Suits Valuation Act, 1887. Generally the amount of the claim or the actual value of the property claimed determines jurisdiction, except in certain cases in which the value for purposes of jurisdiction has been declared by Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, to be the same as the value for purposes of court-fees under the Court-Fees Act, 1870. In such cases the value for court-fees must be fixed first and the same must be afterwards adopted for jurisdiction.⁴

11. Redemption and mortgage suits.—A suit for the recovery of money due on a mortgage is a suit for money and the value of such a suit for the purpose of court-fees is the amount claimed as due, under Section 7 (1) of the Court-Fees Act, 1870. The same will determine the value for purposes of jurisdiction under Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.¹

In suits for redemption and for foreclosure, the mode of valuation for jurisdiction is not prescribed by statute, as Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, expressly excepts such suits from its operation. There has consequently been a difference of opinion on the point. The Madras and Allahabad High Courts have held that it is the principal amount of the mortgage that will determine the jurisdiction,² while the Bombay,³ Calcutta,⁴ and Lahore⁵ High Courts and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur⁶ hold that the amount due on the mortgage will determine jurisdiction.

12. Pre-emption suits.—The valuation for jurisdiction of this class of suits also has not been provided by the Suits Valuation Act, 1887. But under Section 3 of that Act, however, the Local Government may make rules for valuing such suits. Rules have been framed in the Punjab.¹ Where the property sold is a revenue-paying land, the value of the suit is 30 times the *jama*² and where it is a house, then the market-value thereof, as given by the plaintiff.³ In Bengal, under the Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871) the value of the subject-matter of pre-emption determines the jurisdiction.⁴ In Madras under Section 14 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, the value is that fixed under Section 7 (v) of the Court-Fees Act for a suit for possession of the land sought to be pre-empted.⁵ It has been held in Oudh that the value of the property as stated in the plaint determines the jurisdiction.⁶

13. Partition suits.—Where a suit is brought for partition and separate possession of the plaintiff's share, the plaintiff being out of possession, it should be valued for purposes of jurisdiction on the share claimed by the plaintiff.¹ Where the suit is merely to enforce a right to share in a joint family property, the plaintiff can value it as he pleases, for the purposes of jurisdiction and court-fees under Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act read with Section 7 (iv) (b) of the Court-Fees Act. If the suit is by a plaintiff tenant-in-common in joint possession of the properties for partition of his share, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction will be the value of the entire property and not merely the share of the plaintiff.

14. Suit for accounts and administration.—Suits for accounts fall within Section 7 (iv) (f) of the Court-Fees Act, 1870, and the plaintiff can put his own valuation for the purpose of court-fees. The same will also be the valuation for purposes of jurisdiction under Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

15. Suit for mesne profits.—See under Note 6, supra.

16. Declaratory and injunction suits.—A suit for a declaration and injunction is a suit for a declaration with consequential relief within the scope of the Court-Fees Act, Section 7 clause (iv) (c) and hence, by virtue of Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act the value of the suit depends on the amount at which the plaintiff values his relief in the plaint. But in a suit for a bare declaration, the value of the property likely to be affected is the value of the suit. Although in cases coming under the Court-Fees Act, Section 7 (iv) (c) and (d), the value fixed by the plaintiff determines jurisdiction, the Calcutta High Court has held that when a question as to the proper valuation is raised the Court can and should decide it. The High Court of Madras has, on the other hand, held that the Court is bound by the plaintiff's valuation in the plaint.

24a. Suit for dissolution of Mahomedan marriage. — In Burhan Mirzha v. Mt. Khodeja Bibi,¹ the question was raised as to whether a suit for the dissolution of a Mahomedan marriage could be instituted only in the Court of the District Judge (the principal Court of civil jurisdiction) corresponding to the chief kazi under the Mahomedan law, or whether the rule contained in this Section applies also to such a suit so that it can be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade within whose jurisdiction the valuation of the suit falls. In holding that the rule contained in this Section applies also to such suits, the Calcutta High Court observed :

"It appears to us that the idea or notion that the principal Court of original jurisdiction under the British Government in India is vested generally speaking with the powers exercised by the kazi has been derived from cases relating to wakfs under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code, or to cases of granting of leases of wakf property. . . . The wakf cases must therefore be kept apart when we are considering the question of the forum regarding matrimonial matters where the parties are Mahomedans. . . . With regard to matrimonial disputes amongst the Mahomedans, however, the Civil Courts have taken the place of the kazis. . . . The question of jurisdiction is a question of procedure and not of substantive law. The substantive law has been saved to Moslems, but the procedure is to be of our British Indian Courts."

25. Miscellaneous suits. — The value of a suit for establishing a right of occupancy wajyat in a garden and for possession thereof is that of the interest claimed and not that of the entire interest in the land.¹ A suit by one shareholder to set aside a sale of the property held by several shareholders must be valued according to the value of the entire property, although the plaintiff asks for possession of his share alone.² The value of a suit to establish the validity of a charge upon a property is the amount of the charge or the value of the property, whichever is less.³

1. Legislative changes.—The words "with or without rents or profits" have been added in clause (a). According to the report of the Select Committee the insertion of these words is intended "to remove any difficulty, there may be, where the defendant does not reside within the local limits of the Court within whose jurisdiction the property is situated." The word "sale" has been newly added in clause (c).

2. Scope and object of the Section.—This Section deals with local or territorial jurisdiction. Suits for the recovery of immovable property, or for the determination of any other right or interest in immovable property or for the recovery of immovable property actually under attachment must, under this Section, be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situated.¹ The object of the Section is to limit the territorial jurisdiction of Courts in regard to the property that they are entitled to deal with.² As a rule therefore, Courts have no power to decide on rights and interests in property lying outside their local jurisdiction.³ The Explanation to the Section makes it also clear that Courts of this country have no power to entertain suits in respect of property situated outside British India.⁴

But the Section does not preclude the Courts from trying any question in respect of property lying outside their territorial jurisdiction where such question arises incidentally.⁵ Nor is the Section confined to suits involving only immovable property. It applies to suits for the recovery of immovable property as well as moveable property provided the immovable property is situate, wholly or in part within the Court's local jurisdiction.⁶

3. Subject to the pecuniary and other limitations prescribed by law.—For pecuniary limitations, see Section 15, ante. For instances of other limitations, see the following—

1. A suit under Section 92 of the Code must be instituted in the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction or in any other Court empowered in that behalf by the Local Government.

2. A suit regarding an infringement of copyright must, under Section 13 of the Copyright Act, III of 1914, be instituted only in the High Court or the District Court.

3. A suit against the Government or a Government officer in his official capacity must, in Bombay, under the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869, Section 32, be filed only in the High Court or the District Court.

4. Immovable property.—The phrase 'immovable property' has not been defined in the Code but 'moveable property' has been defined in Section 2 (13) as including growing crops. The definition of 'immovable property' in Section 3 (25) of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897 read with Section 2 (13) of the Code, will therefore govern the meaning of those words for the purposes of the Code.⁷ Under Section 3 (25) of the General Clauses Act, 'immovable property' includes :

1. land,
2. benefits to arise out of land, and
3. things attached to the earth, or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth.

Land.—The word 'land' includes water covering the land and includes a jalkar or a right of fishery.³ Jalkar includes the right to drift stranded timber as well.³ The right to fish in territorial sea waters is, however, common to all and is not property of any kind.⁴

Benefits to arise out of land.—These include incorporeal hereditaments as issue out of, or are connected with immovable property so called and savouring of realty⁵ such as rights of common, rights of way and profits in alieno solo such as rents, pensions and annuities secured upon land.⁶ A right of ferry,⁷ a hat,⁸ an easement,⁹ has been removed now by the provision of clause 13 of Section 2 of this Code that moveable property includes growing crops.²⁶ Titled huts are immovable property.²⁷ So are doors and windows which are fixed to, and are part of, a building.²⁸ For other illustrations, see the undermentioned cases.²⁹

5. Suits for recovery of immovable property—Clause (a).—This clause refers to suits to recover possession of immovable property where the title to that property is alleged by one side to be in him and by the other side to be in him. But as has been seen already in Note 2, the property must be one in British India.³⁰ Where the properties are within British India, but within the jurisdiction of different Courts, a suit for the recovery thereof may, under Section 17, be instituted in any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of such properties is situate.³¹

A suit for the recovery of property after setting aside a decree must be brought in the Court within whose local limits the property is situate though the decree may be that of another Court.³² But if the suit is merely to set aside the decree without anything more, it may be instituted in the Court which passed the decree though the properties affected by the decree are situate elsewhere.³³

6. Suits for partition of immovable property—Clause (b).—A suit for the partition of immovable property must be brought in the Court within whose jurisdiction the property is situate. As to where the properties are situated in different jurisdictions, see Section 17, infra. Where the property is situate outside British India, the Court cannot grant any relief in respect of such property.³⁴ It has, however, been held by the Lahore High Court that in a suit for accounts and for partition of joint family property some of which is situated in a foreign State, the Court could grant relief even in respect of the property situated in the foreign State.³⁵ The decision, if it is submitted, cannot be accepted as correct.

7. Suits for foreclosure, sale or redemption—Clause (c).—Suits for foreclosure¹ or for sale² or for redemption³ of a mortgage, being suits for reliefs respecting immovable property, must be brought within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate. If the land is therefore beyond the Court's local jurisdiction, the suit is incompetent.⁴ But a Court is not precluded in a suit for redemption from incidentally deciding questions relating to the mortgaged property held by the defendants outside the jurisdiction for the purpose of deciding plaintiff's right to recover the mortgaged property within the jurisdiction.⁵ A suit by a purchaser for contribution in respect of a payment made on account of an arrear of revenue against a person on whose part there is no personal obligation to pay but whose estate alone is liable, must be brought within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court where the property is situate.⁶ Where a party brings a suit on a hypothecation bond in a Court which has no jurisdiction over the hypothecated property, the decree passed can be looked upon only as a money decree.⁷

Where a suit, say for foreclosure or for redemption, is brought in the Court of a particular district within whose limits the properties are situate, but before final decree is passed the territorial jurisdiction of the Court is transferred to another Court, the original Court's jurisdiction is not lost and a final decree for foreclosure passed by the original Court is not bad; the reason is that once a Court gets validly seized of the case, the subsequent proceedings will not divest it of jurisdiction.⁸

8. Suit for the determination of any other right to, or interest in, immovable property—Clause (d).—A suit for the determination of any other right to, or interest in, immovable property must, under clause (d), be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate.¹ If the property be situate within jurisdiction, the Court has power to try a suit in respect thereof even though the parties may happen to be residents in a foreign State.^{1a} But it is unnecessary that the suit itself is for the purpose of determining such rights: it is not enough, for the clause to apply, to say that the relief granted in the suit would indirectly affect rights in immovable property.^{1b} Thus, a suit for a declaration that a will is a forgery,² or that a certain adoption is invalid,³ or a suit for an administration of an estate which does not involve a direct dealing with property outside jurisdiction,⁴ or a suit for dissolution of partnership,⁵ or to have certain lands registered as owner in the revenue records,⁶ or for money paid as compensation for land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act,⁷ or a suit on an agreement to lease,⁸ is not within this clause notwithstanding the fact that the relief claimed may indirectly affect rights to or interest in immovable property.

12. Suit under Paragraph 20 of Schedule II, to file an award declaring the proprietary title to immovable property.²²

Where a dispute referred to arbitration out of Court involves the determination of a right to or interest in immovable property, the Court will have no jurisdiction to file the award if the property is situated outside the jurisdiction of such Court.²³

9. Suits for compensation for wrongs done to immovable property — Clause (e). — This clause applies to all wrongs of a civil nature affecting immovable property, such as trespass,¹ nuisance, etc.² Such suits must be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situated.³

10. Suits for the recovery of moveable property actually under distraint or attachment — Clause (f). — It is a general maxim of law that moveables follow the person — mobilia sequuntur personam. They have no visible locality of their own and follow the law of the person.¹ Where, however, moveable property is attached, the locality becomes fixed and a suit to recover such property must be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction it is.² Thus, where moveable property situated in a foreign State and belonging to a person within the jurisdiction of a British Indian Court is under attachment of a Civil Court of such foreign State, the British Indian Court has no jurisdiction to deal with such moveable property.³

11. "Where the relief sought can be entirely obtained through his personal obedience" — Provision. — This proviso is based on the well known maxim equity acts in personam whereby the Court looks to the fulfilment of its decree to the person of the defendant.¹ The principle on which this maxim itself is based is that Courts can give relief in suits respecting immovable property situated abroad by enforcing their judgments by process in personam, i. e., by arrest of the person of the defendant or by attachment of his personal property.² But in order to do this it is essential that the defendant must either reside or carry on business or personally work for gain within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. In Living v. Orr Ewing,³ Lord Selborne observed as follows :

"The Courts of Equity in England are, and always have been, Courts of conscience operating in personam and not in rem; and in the exercise of this personal jurisdiction they have always been accustomed to compel the performance of contracts and trusts as to subjects which were not either locally or ratione domicilii within their jurisdiction. They have done so, as to land, in Scotland, in Ireland, in the Colonies, in foreign countries."

The jurisdiction of Courts in this country is governed and must be ascertained by the same principles except so far as they may be at variance with the legislative enactments.⁴ Such jurisdiction must, with regard to the High Court,⁵ be considered with reference to the Letters-Patent and the general jurisdiction which it has inherited from the Supreme Court administering the Chancery Rules, and, with regard to the provincial Courts with reference to this proviso. It must be noted, however, that the only cases in which Courts of Equity in England exercise jurisdiction in personam are cases of contracts such as suits for the specific performance of contracts for sale of land⁶ or for foreclosure, sale or redemption of a mortgage,⁷ (b) cases of fraud as where lands abroad have been acquired by the fraud of a party residing within the jurisdiction,⁸ and (c) cases of trust as where a suit is filed against a person residing within jurisdiction, to enforce an express trust affecting land outside jurisdiction.⁹ But suits directly involving title to property, such as suits for the recovery,¹⁰ partition,¹¹ or damages for trespass¹² of immovable property situate abroad, will not be entertained.

The proviso applies only —

1. Where the relief is respecting immovable property situated within and not beyond British India.¹³ It has been held by the High Court of Madras that if the relief sought is in respect of moveable property situate in a foreign State and can be obtained entirely through the personal obedience of the defendant, within the jurisdiction, a decree in personam can be passed.¹⁴ It has also been held by the High Court of Bombay and by the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur that even if the proviso may not be applicable to cases of land situate outside British India, the English law with regard to jurisdiction in personam will apply to Courts in India and that accordingly a suit to recover mesne profits of land situated outside British India can be instituted in British India if the relief can be obtained entirely through the personal obedience of the defendant.¹⁵
2. Where such property is held by or on behalf of the defendant.¹⁶
3. Where the relief can be obtained entirely through the personal obedience of the defendant.¹⁵

The expression 'personal obedience' must be interpreted with special reference to the fact that the defendants reside, or work within the jurisdiction of the Court whose order is to be obeyed; the obedience must be such as the defendants could render

1. Legislative changes. — Section 19 of the old Code corresponding to this Section, applied only where the properties were situate within the limits of a single district but within the jurisdiction of different Courts. The words "within the limits of a single district but" and the third paragraph have now been omitted.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section is practically another proviso to Section 16. That Section provides, as has been seen already, that all suits for relief respecting, or for compensation for wrong done to, immovable property, shall be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction the property is situate. This Section enacts that where a suit is brought in respect of property situated in the jurisdiction of different Courts, a suit in respect thereof can be brought in any one of the Courts and such Court can deal with the whole of the property, though some portion of it is situated outside its jurisdiction. And the rule applies whether several properties are situated in different districts or the same property extends over several districts.

The Section is intended for the benefit of suitors and to prevent multiplicity of suits. It embraces evidently all the suits relating to immovable property to which Section 16 may apply. But it applies only where the properties are situated in British India and in jurisdictions to which the Code applies. Under the Code of 1859, leave had to be obtained from a superior Court to institute a suit in one Court in respect of properties situated in several districts. No such sanction is now necessary.

The provisions of this Code have been made applicable by Section 135 of the Oudh Rent Act to rent suits provided they are not inconsistent with the provisions of that Act. There being no inconsistency in this Section, its provisions apply to rent suits in Oudh filed under the Oudh Rent Act.

3. "Courts."—The word 'Courts' in Section 17 must be held as meaning Courts to which the Code applies. Thus, where some of the lands comprised in a mortgage are situated in the jurisdiction of Court A and some in a scheduled district to which the Code does not apply, the Court A cannot, in a suit for sale on the mortgage, order the sale of the property in the scheduled district.

4. Selection of forum.—The Section gives an option to the plaintiff of bringing his suit in any Court within whose jurisdiction a portion of the subject-matter is situate. This is based on the general principle of law that where a suit can be instituted in more Courts than one, the plaintiff has a right to select his own forum.¹ A portion of the property, however, must actually be existing in the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is brought.² Where a mortgage deed mentioned non-existent property within one jurisdiction and existing property in another, and a suit was brought on the mortgage in the Court situated in the former jurisdiction, it was held that the Court was not competent to grant a decree for sale.³

Where a suit in respect of a house and certain land was filed in a Court within whose jurisdiction the house alone was situate and an appeal from the decree in the suit was filed in the Court to which appeals lie from the decrees of that Court, it was held that the plaintiff abandoned his claim in respect of the house in appeal and that the appeal related only to the land which did not lie within the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court, would not affect the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the appeal.⁴

5. Different causes of action.—Where a plaintiff has two or more causes of action in the suit, he can take advantage of the provisions of this Section if the joinder of such causes of action is permitted by the provisions of O. 1 R. 3 and O. 2 R. 3, infra.¹ If he cannot do so and the joinder of such causes of action is bad for multifariousness, then the suit cannot be tried in either of the Courts within whose jurisdiction the properties are situate.²

Section enacts that where a suit is brought in respect of property situated in the jurisdiction of different Courts, a suit in respect thereof can be brought in any one of the Courts and such Court can deal with the whole of the property, though some portion of it is situated outside its jurisdiction. And the rule applies whether several properties are situated in different districts or the same property extends over several districts.

The Section is intended for the benefit of suitors and to prevent multiplicity of suits. It embraces evidently all the suits relating to immovable property to which Section 16 may apply. But it applies only where the properties are situated in British India and in jurisdictions to which the Code applies. Under the Code of 1859, leave had to be obtained from a superior Court to institute a suit in one Court in respect of properties situated in several districts. No such sanction is now necessary.

The provisions of this Code have been made applicable by Section 135 of the Oudh Rent Act to rent suits provided they are not inconsistent with the provisions of that Act. There being no inconsistency in this Section, its provisions apply to rent suits in Oudh filed under the Oudh Rent Act.

6. Separate suits.—Where the plaintiff has a cause of action in respect of properties situated within the jurisdiction of different Courts, there are two courses open to him—

- (1) he may file a suit on the whole claim in any one of the Courts, or
- (2) he may file separate suits on the same cause of action in respect of each of the properties situated within the jurisdiction of the said Courts,¹ and none of such suits will operate as a bar to the others.² In other words, it leaves untouched the jurisdiction of each Court to entertain a suit in respect of the portion of the property situate within its jurisdiction.³

7. Effect of withdrawing part of claim.—The subsequent withdrawal of a part of the claim does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to dispose of the other part of the claim. Thus, where a suit is brought in Bareilly in respect of the properties situate, one in Bareilly District and the other in the district of Bara Banki and the claim in respect of the lands in Bareilly is withdrawn or compromised or abandoned by the plaintiff, the Bareilly Court does not thereby lose its jurisdiction to proceed to adjudicate on the claim respecting the property in Bara Banki unless the withdrawal or compromise or abandonment is fraudulent or is a mere device to evade the provisions of the Code as to local jurisdiction.¹ Similarly, the fact that at the time of the decision the plaintiff is found not to have title to a portion of the property within jurisdiction, as alleged, does not take away the jurisdiction unless the inclusion of such portion is not bona fide.² The principle is that when once jurisdiction is vested in Courts, it cannot be divested by any act of the parties.³

8. Execution against property outside jurisdiction.—The provisions of Sections 38 and 39 indicate that the general principle of law is that no Court can execute a decree in which the subject-matter of the suit or of the application for execution, is property situated entirely outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.¹⁻² Suits under this Section in respect of properties within the jurisdiction of more Courts than one are an exception to this rule. Where a Court has acquired, under this Section, jurisdiction over property situated partly within its limits and partly outside it, it will continue in execution proceedings also.³ For instance, a Court that has jurisdiction to pass a decree for sale of property comprised in a mortgage can sell the whole of the property in execution of the decree even though a portion of the property be situated outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.⁴ The reason is that the proceedings in execution of a decree are only a continuation of the proceedings in property was made by a Court not having jurisdiction where the property is situate, the appellate or revisional Court shall not allow the objection unless in its opinion there was, at the time of the institution of the suit, no reasonable ground for uncertainty as to the Court having jurisdiction with respect thereto and there has been a consequent failure of justice.

1. Scope and principle. — The object of the Section, as mentioned by Mr. Scoble, in his speech in the Supreme Legislative Council on the 10th March 1888, is "to avoid a difficulty as to jurisdiction which frequently arises where the boundaries of estates are destroyed by invalid action." The principle of this Section applies also to execution proceedings though it does not, in terms, bind persons like execution creditors.¹

The words "and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice" have been newly added, in order to prevent the taking of technical objections as to jurisdiction.

2. Allegation of uncertainty. — When an allegation as to the uncertainty of the property in dispute lying within the Court's jurisdiction is made, the Court must be satisfied that there is such uncertainty; and if so satisfied, it may record a statement and proceed with the case. It must try the question itself and cannot take the decision of a Revenue Court in respect of boundaries as settling the matter.¹ But a former decision of the Privy Council adjudging certain lands to be in a particular jurisdiction is binding upon the Courts and removes the uncertainty in the matter.² When there has been no notification fixing the boundaries of a particular district, that fact might create a reasonable uncertainty as to whether a certain property is within that district or not.³

3. Effect of not recording statement as to uncertainty. — The non-recording of the statement as to uncertainty will not vitiate the decree where the Judge has, in fact, brought his mind to bear upon the question.¹ Even otherwise it will not vitiate the decree unless —

- (1) it appears that no reasonable uncertainty existed at the time of the suit, and
(2) there has been a failure of justice in consequence thereof.²

4. Objection to jurisdiction. — An objection to jurisdiction must be taken in the Court of first instance¹ and unless so taken, the decree of the trial Court cannot be set aside on the ground of uncertainty of its territorial jurisdiction.²

1. Scope of the Section. — Having dealt with suits relating to immovable property in Sections 16, 17 and 18 supra, this Section proceeds to deal with another class of cases, namely suits for compensation for wrong done to the person or personal property. It declares that suits may be brought either where the wrong is committed, or where the defendant resides or carries on business or personally works for gain.¹ It applies to the High Courts and Chief Courts also.

In order that the Section may apply —

(1) there must be a wrong done to the person or personal property, and
(2) the suit must be one for compensation therefor.

2. Wrong to person or personal property. — A wrong, in this Section, means the infringement of a legal right¹ and is consequently an actionable wrong.² Legal civil rights relate to the body, mind, or estate of a person and any invasion of such rights will constitute an actionable wrong.³ Where there is no legal injury, no action will lie.⁴

The Section, however, does not apply to all kinds of actionable wrongs but only to actionable wrongs to the person or to moveable property. Where wrongful criminal proceedings are instituted against a person and he is arrested thereunder, the arrest is a wrong done to his person and the Court of the place where he is arrested will have jurisdiction to try a suit in respect of such wrong.⁵ Where plaintiffs' cargo-boats are wrongfully seized by the defendant, the seizure is a wrong done to moveable property, and a suit in respect thereof can be brought at the place where the seizure was made.⁶ Where property is lost in one district and is found in another, a suit for its recovery may be instituted in the district in which it is found.⁷ In suits relating to moveable property the Court within whose jurisdiction the moveable property is kept has jurisdiction to try the case.⁸

3. Suit must be one for compensation. — Suits for injunctions, e.g. against disturbances of rights of patent and trade mark, are excluded from the scope of the Section.¹ Where the defendant has, by means of a tort, become possessed of a sum of money at the expense of the plaintiff, the plaintiff may elect to sue either for damages for tort or for the recovery of money wrongfully obtained by the defendant; the latter is based on an implied contract of agency, the defendant being fictitiously assumed to have rightfully received the money as the plaintiff's agent and to have failed to pay it over to his principal, the plaintiff. In the former case, the suit would be one falling within this Section and in the latter, within Section 20 infra.²

4. Torts committed outside British India. — The Section applies only to wrongs in British India. Cases of wrongs committed outside British India by

A may sue B and C at Benares, where the cause of action arose. He may also sue them at Calcutta, where B resides, or at Delhi, where C resides; but in each of these cases, if the non-resident defendant objects, the suit cannot proceed without the leave of the Court.

1. Legislative changes.

- (1) The words "every suit" have been substituted for the words "all other suits" in the corresponding Section 17 of the Code of 1882.¹
- (2) Explanation III to the old Section has been omitted and the words "wholly or in part" in clause (c) have been newly added.²
2. Scope and principle of the Section. — This Section enacts the rule as to the forum in cases of personal actions.³ Its provisions are to be read subject to the provisions of Sections 15 to 19 as is made clear by the opening words "subject to the limitations aforesaid."⁴

Under the scheme of the Code actions are either those which relate to immovable property, or those which relate to the person or moveable property, or mixed actions partly relating to immovable property and partly personal. The first and the third classes of suits have been dealt with under Sections 16 to 18, supra. Sections 19 and 20 deal with the second class.

A Court gets jurisdiction under this Section if —

- (1) the defendant resides or carries on business or personally works for gain within the local limits of its jurisdiction, or
- (2) the cause of action arises wholly or in part within such local limits.⁵
- If several causes of action are joined against a defendant, it is necessary that the Court should have jurisdiction over all causes of action.⁶ The onus is upon the plaintiff to establish one or other of the two facts mentioned above.⁷

After the question of local jurisdiction is decided, the question of pecuniary jurisdiction may arise before any plea affecting the suit is entertained.⁸

The rules stated in the various portions of the Section are alternative,⁹ and give a choice of forum to the plaintiff. This is based on the general principle of law that where a suit can be instituted in more Courts than one, the plaintiff has a right to select his own forum.¹⁰ And very strong reasons must be shown for depriving a plaintiff of such right.¹¹ But a plaintiff cannot take advantage of his own default to choose his own forum.¹² He cannot, after he has made his choice and the particular circumstances.⁸ It has also to be determined according to the intention of the Legislature as ascertained from the context and the particular provision in which the word occurs.⁹

Under the Code of 1859, the word used in this Section corresponding to this Section was 'dwell'. Clause 12 of the Letters Patent also provides that suits, other than those for land, may be brought in Chartered High Courts if the defendant dwells, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction thereof. Strictly speaking, the word 'dwell' seems to have a more extended signification than the word 'reside'¹⁰ and seems to imply a more permanent stay than that denoted by the word 'reside'.¹¹ Neither of the words, however, necessarily implies a permanent state of things.¹² A traveller putting up at an hotel, may be said, in one sense to reside there, but a man can be said to 'dwell' in the sense in which the term is used as giving jurisdiction, only in the place where he ordinarily and permanently resides;¹³ that is to say, in the place where his family or servants generally reside.¹⁴ The word 'residence' has also been held to denote the place where a person eats, drinks and sleeps, or where his family or servants eat, drink and sleep.¹⁵

The word 'dwell', as used in the Letters Patent, and the word 'reside' as used in Sections 16, 19 and 20, are however often treated as being synonymous¹⁶ and have been held to denote the fixed and permanent home of a man's wife and family, to which he has always an intention of returning.¹⁷ The decisions interpreting the former word may therefore be usefully looked to in construing the meaning of the latter word.

4. Temporary and occasional residence—Explanation I.—In order to give jurisdiction on the ground of residence, something more than a temporary stay is required.¹ It must be of a more or less permanent character, and of such a nature that the Court in which the defendant is sued is his natural forum.² An occasional residence is therefore not sufficient.³⁻⁴ Where a person has a permanent residence at one place, he cannot be said to dwell, also at a place where he casually or temporarily resides, without the intention of remaining there.⁵ Where a guru residing permanently at A came to B at the invitation of devotees, and, while there, exchanged visits with his followers and stayed in a house which had been purchased by him for occasional

Where a Court once obtains jurisdiction over a suit, it is not deprived of it either by the fact that the place where the cause of action arises ceases to be situated within its jurisdiction,¹² or by the defendant changing his residence to a place beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction.¹³

3. "Actually and voluntarily resides."—A Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit, if the defendant resides¹ or all the defendants reside² within its jurisdiction even if the cause of action arises outside it.³ But the residence must be an actual and not a constructive residence.⁴ Where a person actually resides outside the Court's jurisdiction but has his ancestral home within it, the latter fact would not give the Court jurisdiction.⁵

The word "reside" is not used in the same sense in all the Indian Acts or in other parts of the Code.⁶ It is in fact elastic and has been differently construed in different cases.⁷ In every case residence is a question of fact and it must depend upon residence, he was held not to dwell in B.⁶ Similarly where an officer attached to a regiment at Vellore went on medical leave to Madras where he resided in a rented house and finally returned to Vellore, the latter was held to be the place where he dwelt.⁷ But where a person permanently residing in Mysore left his house in charge of a servant and went with his wife and family to Madras with the intention of remaining there for several months, it was held that he must be deemed to dwell at the latter place.⁸

In the case of persons in service, at any place, whether of the Government or of a private person,¹⁰ they will be deemed to dwell at the place of service and not at the place where they should have a family house in which their parents live and which they occasionally visit. But a person in Government service who is liable to be sent to various places and may possibly be left at one place for several years cannot be said to have residence at the place where he is stationed for a temporary purpose only.¹¹

There is one exception to the rule that a person having a permanent residence at one place cannot be said to dwell also at another place where he temporarily resides, and that is provided for by Explanation I to the Section. Under the Explanation a person will be deemed to reside at the place of temporary stay also in respect of a cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary residence.¹²

5. Several places of residence.—A man may have more than one place of residence at the same time¹ living sometimes at one and sometimes at another, and, during his temporary absence, each house though empty, if there be an animus revertendi, will still be his dwelling place.² In such a case he may be sued in the place where he is actually staying for the time being. Thus a person spending his time alternately in the mufassil and in Calcutta and who resided in Calcutta for some days previous to the filing of the plaint was held to reside in Calcutta for the purposes of jurisdiction.³

6. Home non-existent or abandoned.—Every person is deemed in law to have a dwelling or place of residence, and where he has none, he will be deemed to dwell at the place at which he may be actually staying at the time.¹

of the Madras High Court, in 1 Madras High Court Reports 286 which has not been followed by that High Court in a later case.²⁸

It is not necessary that there should be a head office or a regular place of business in order to "carry on business." Thus, a person residing at A who goes twice or thrice a week to a friend's house at C and does business there will be held to carry on business there.²⁴

9. Business through agent.—As has been seen already, a business may be carried on through an agent¹ and it is not necessary that the principal should have ever gone to the place of business at all. But it is essential that the agent must be an agent in the strict sense of the term² and must attend exclusively to the business of the principal. A person conducting business at a place through commission agents or brokers³ or general agents⁴ cannot be held to carry on business there. A manager of a joint Hindu family is not an agent in the strict sense and the members of the family cannot be said to carry on business through him at any place.⁵

10. Secretary of State.—The words "carry on business" are inapplicable to the Secretary of State for India in Council.¹ Nor do the words "actually and voluntarily resides" apply to the Secretary of State. They refer only to natural persons and not to legal entities.²

11. "Personally works for gain."—It is sufficient to give a Court jurisdiction if the defendant personally works for gain within the local limits of its jurisdiction. To constitute work there must be some physical or mental effort.¹ A guru accepting presents and offerings from his chelas and invoking blessings upon them in return cannot be said to be personally working for gain.² An Advocate, who though residing outside the station where the High Court is located, appears in the High Court whenever he is engaged, works for gain within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court.³ Similarly a person residing at A and coming constantly to Calcutta for making contracts, works for gain within Calcutta.⁴ As already observed, the carrying on of business may be either in person or through agents; but the work for gain must be in person. On this ground a person carrying on business through an agent cannot be said to personally work for gain where the agent carries on the business.⁵

The Government of India cannot be said to "work for gain" anywhere as the income obtained by it is held for the benefit of the Indian Exchequer.⁶

12. Leave of Court — Clause (b). — Where no part of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction and some of the defendants reside outside it, leave to sue them all should be obtained, unless they acquiesce in the institution of the suit.¹ No leave is necessary where the cause of action arises within the Court's jurisdiction though some of the defendants reside outside it.^{1a} The clause is not to be read as limited to persons merely residing outside the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the Court but within British India. It makes no difference whether the defendants, in respect of whom leave is asked, are residents of British India though outside the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction or are residents outside British India.^{1b}

Under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent, it is necessary that the leave should be obtained before the institution of the suit.² Under clause (b) of this Section, however, the leave may be granted even after the institution of the suit.³ The leave may be given even after the decision of the preliminary issue as to jurisdiction, but before the plaint is ordered to be returned for presentation to the proper Court.^{3a} But it is necessary that the grant of leave should be distinctly sought and obtained⁴ and cannot be inferred from the plaintiff being allowed to continue the suit.⁵ In exercising its power to grant or refuse leave to sue, the question of convenience of parties should be taken into consideration.⁶ No notice is necessary to the defendants residing outside jurisdiction, of an application for grant of leave to sue under this Section.⁷ But the leave cannot be given arbitrarily, and when the defendants who reside outside jurisdiction do not appear, the Court is bound to consider their position before granting leave. This obligation is in no way lessened when they do appear and object, especially when the objecting defendant is the real person against whom the plaintiff wants to proceed.^{7a} Where leave is granted under this clause without issuing notice to the opposite party, the Court can in the exercise of its inherent powers hear any objection against the grant of such leave and pass such orders as are necessary in the interests of justice.⁸

13. Acquiescence in institution.— Under Section 20 of the Code of 1882, which provided that any defendant not applying for stay of proceedings before the issues are settled, "shall be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit," it was held that if a non-resident defendant did not apply for a stay of proceedings, he should be taken to have "acquiesced" in the institution¹ though he objected to the jurisdiction in his written statement.² But the said Section has not now been re-enacted in the present Code as sufficient provision for transfer of suits has been made in Sections 22 to 24 of the Code. A defendant who objects to the jurisdiction will not be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution simply because he did not apply for transfer of the case.³ A defendant who appears and does not object to the jurisdiction, may, it is conceived, be held to have acquiesced in the institution.

Where a suit is brought against defendants some of whom reside within, and some without the jurisdiction of the Court, and neither the leave of the Court has been obtained nor acquiescence shown on the part of the defendants not residing within jurisdiction, the suit cannot proceed against those only of the defendants within jurisdiction.⁴

14. Cause of action.— As has been seen already in Note 2 above, a Court will have jurisdiction over a matter if the cause of action arises within the local limits of its jurisdiction.¹ And such jurisdiction is not affected by the death of the person originally liable.²

The words "cause of action" are sometimes used in a restricted sense and sometimes in a wider sense.³ In the restricted sense it means the circumstances forming the infringement of the right or the immediate occasion for the action.⁴ In its wider sense it means the necessary conditions for the maintenance of the suit, including not only the infraction of the right, but the infraction coupled with the right itself.⁵ It has been compendiously defined to mean every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court. It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, but every fact which is necessary to be proved.⁶ In other words, it means the whole bundle of material facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to entitle him to succeed in the suit.⁷ In delivering the judgment of the Board, in Chand Kuar v. Partab Singh, I. L. R. 16 Calcutta 98, Lord Watson observed as follows: "Now the cause of action has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or, in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour."⁸ Whether any particular facts constitute a cause of action has to be determined with reference to the facts of each case⁹ and with reference to the substance rather than the form of the action.¹⁰ The cause of action must, however, be antecedent to the institution of the suit and cannot be furnished by the pleadings themselves.¹¹ Where two or more causes of action against a defendant are sought to be joined in one suit, the Court to which the plaintiff is presented must have jurisdiction over both the causes of action.¹²

15. "Wholly or in part arises."—This clause makes it clear that in all cases covered by this Section a suit may be instituted where a part of the cause of action arises. Where a right and an infringement thereof are both necessary to be proved before relief can be granted, the cause of action arises partly where the right was created and partly where it was infringed. Thus, where freight was collected from the plaintiff at Calicut, but the goods were short delivered, the cause of action for refund of the freight and for price of goods short delivered arises in part at Calicut.¹ Similarly the refusal to refer to arbitration on the part of one of the parties is a fundamental part of the cause of action in an application under Schedule II, Paragraph 17 to have the agreement filed in Court.¹⁴

If the creation of the right and the infringement thereof both happen at a particular place, the whole cause of action will be said to arise there. But if they take place in different places, parts of the cause of action arise in the different places.² Where the infringement itself is in respect of several items, parts of the cause of action arise in the several places of infringement in respect of those items.^{2a}

The corresponding Section of the Code of 1882 was amended by the addition of an Explanation, being Explanation III, which provided that in suits arising out of contract, the cause of action arose within the meaning of the Section at any of the following places, namely—

- (a) The place where the contract was made.
- (b) The place where the contract was to be performed or performance thereof completed.
- (c) The place where, in performance of the contract, any money to which the suit relates was expressly or impliedly payable.

This Explanation had been added to the old Section to make it clear that suits arising out of contract could be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action arose either wholly or in part. But this gave rise to doubts whether other classes of suits could be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction part only of the cause of action arose. It was, however, held in the undermentioned case,³ following older decisions,⁴ that the introduction of the said Explanation did not effect any change in the law and that a Court would have jurisdiction if the material part of the cause of action arose within its jurisdiction. The effect of the present addition of clause (c) of the Section in substitution of the old Explanation III, is to leave no room for doubt that all classes of suits can be instituted where the cause of action arises wholly, or in part. The old Explanation III has now been omitted, but the cases decided thereunder are still good law in cases arising out of contract.⁵

It must, however, be noted that a party to a contract cannot rely, at his option, on any of the alternatives mentioned in the old Explanation III in order to sue in any particular forum. It depends in each case upon the allegations in the plaint in support of the relief claimed. Thus, where under a contract goods had to be delivered at A and the price was payable at B, the cause of action for the non-delivery of the goods will arise at A alone,⁶ and that for the non-payment of the price will arise at B alone.⁷

16. Suits on contracts—General.—The meaning of the expression "cause of action" when applied to suits based on contracts should be ascertained by a consideration of the meaning of the expression in the past in the course of the development of legislation in India and the case law based thereon.¹ In a suit based on a contract the cause of action will consist of the making of the contract and of its breach at the place where it is to be performed.² An action therefore for breach of a contract can, at the option of the plaintiff, be brought either at the place where the contract was made or the place where the breach was committed.³ Originally the place of making the contract alone was regarded as the proper forum of action and it was only afterwards that the place of performance and the place of breach came also to be regarded as forums of action.⁴ See also Note 15, ante.

acceptance will be the place where the contract is made.⁷ The whole correspondence, if the contract was made by correspondence, must be looked into in order to find out where the proposal was accepted.⁸ Where the contract is entered into by postal communication, the contract will be deemed to be made where the letter of acceptance is posted, and not where it is received.⁹ The communication of the acceptance of the proposer only affects the time of the coming into force of the contract and not the place of making the contract.¹⁰ If the acceptance of a proposal consists of the performance of a condition of the proposal, the contract will be deemed to be made where the condition is performed.¹¹ If an agreement is to be executed by the plaintiff, part of the cause of action arises where the agreement is executed.¹²

Where the contract purports on the face of it to have been made at any particular place, as for instance a promissory note dated at X, it will be presumed to have been made there, though it might actually have been made elsewhere.¹³ Where in a suit upon the breach of a contract to deliver goods, it did not appear where the contract, if any, was made, the mere fact that an advance on account of the contract was made at a particular place would not give the Court of that place jurisdiction in the suit.¹⁴

The principles enunciated above apply both to express as well as implied contracts and to obligations resembling those under contracts. Thus, where excess of freight is paid to a Railway Company at a particular place, there is an implied contract on the part of the Company to return the excess and a cause of action for a suit for return of the excess will arise, in part, where the obligation to return came into existence, namely where the excess was paid.¹⁵ Similarly where plaintiff sent a larger quantity of goods to defendant than that ordered for, and the latter returned the same and the plaintiff filed a suit for damages, it was held that the cause of action arose wherever the defendant returned the goods.¹⁶ Similarly where goods were lost in one district and found in another, the finder is under an obligation to return them at the place where he found them and the Court of that place will have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the recovery thereof.¹⁷

18. Place of breach or non-performance in general.—As has been mentioned already, the place of breach will also furnish the forum for a suit on contract, even though the place of making it be not within the forum.¹ The place of breach is the place where the contract is to be performed,² that is, the place where the contract is to be completely performed, or where the performance is to be in several places, where it is to be completed.³

Illustrations

(A) A purchases goods of B at M but it is agreed that the delivery of the goods and the payment therefor should be made at N. In this case it is clear that the contract is to be completely performed at N and the Court of that place will have jurisdiction to try a suit in respect of the breach of the contract.⁴

(B) It is agreed between A and B that goods sent by B to A should be measured at M and delivered at P. B fails to deliver the goods and A sues him for damages for non-delivery. The cause of action arises at P where the performance was to be completed.⁵

In cases of contracts for the sale of goods, the place where the goods had to be delivered is the place of performance and the Court of that place will have jurisdiction to entertain a suit in respect of non-delivery according to contract.⁶ A delivery to a common carrier is, under Section 91 of the Contract Act, a delivery to the buyer.^{6a} Thus, where defendants contracted at Bombay to sell goods to plaintiff at Amritsar, the cause of action for the breach of the contract would arise in Bombay, as delivery of the goods to the Railway Company at Bombay would have operated as a delivery to the plaintiff.⁷

Where the contract itself does not stipulate the place of performance, it is the duty of the promisor under Section 49 of the Contract Act to apply to the promisee to appoint a reasonable place for the performance of the promise.⁸ Where this has not been done, the place of performance should be determined with reference to the intention of the parties as gathered from their acts, the terms of the contract and the surrounding circumstances.⁹ Where no actual intention can be inferred, recourse may be had to presumptions.¹⁰⁻¹¹ But where goods are contracted to be delivered, for instance, in Bengal, the mere fact that the goods were despatched from a place in the United Provinces will not give rise to a cause of action at that place, for a suit for damages for non-delivery.¹²

In many cases the place of performance will be determined by the course of business to which the contract relates¹³ or by the nature of the act to be done under the contract. Thus, in a contract of service the salary is payable at the place of work.¹⁴ In a contract of bailment, the remuneration of the bailee is payable where the goods bailed are stored.¹⁵ Where the performance consists of work done on immovable property, the place where it is situated will obviously be the forum. Similarly, where an agreement relates to the execution of a document which requires registration at a particular place, that place will be the place where a suit will lie for compelling the registration.¹⁶

19. Place where money is payable.—The payment of money under a contract is a part of the performance of the contract and will furnish a cause of action.¹ As per the principles set forth in Note 18 above, the place where money is expressly or impliedly payable will be a forum of action.² Thus the place where the money is payable under a promissory note or a bond will be a proper forum though the document itself was executed and the executant resides outside the forum.⁸ Similarly, in the case of goods sold and delivered, a suit for the price thereof will lie where the same is to be paid,⁴ even though both the sale and the delivery should have been made in another place.⁵ An action to recover money due on a life insurance policy can be instituted in the place where the death of assured takes place, as the death furnishes the cause of action for the payment.⁶ Similarly, in a contract of insurance against burglary, the burglary is a part of the cause of action entitling the plaintiff to sue, and a claim for the insurance amount can be made at the place where the burglary was committed.^{6a}

From what has been stated in Note 18 above, it follows that where the place of payment is not indicated in the contract, it is to be ascertained with reference to the intention of the parties and the circumstances of the case.⁷ Thus, where a hatchitta was executed and the parties were also resident at a particular place, the money is presumably repayable there.⁸

The rule that debtor must find the creditor. — Under the Common Law in England, the general rule, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, is that a debtor is bound to find the creditor for making the payment, i. e. the place of payment is the place where the creditor resides.⁹ The same rule has been held to apply in India also.¹⁰ In Raman Chettiar v. Gopalachari, I. L. R. 31 Madras 223, which was a case under the old Code, the Madras High Court held that the said Common Law rule did not control the express provisions in Explanation III to the Section, and that the place of payment, in order to give jurisdiction, must be where the money is payable expressly or impliedly under the contract itself and not under any general rule of law. In view of the omission of the Explanation in the present Section and in view of the decisions of the Privy Council and of other High Courts to the contrary,¹¹ the view expressed by the Madras High Court cannot be treated as correct law. But in order that the Common Law rule should apply, whether in England or in India, it is necessary that the creditor should be within the realm.¹² A debtor in a Native State, for instance, is not bound to seek and pay his creditor who is a resident of British India. As to the applicability of the Common Law rule to cases of negotiable instruments, see Note 23, infra.

obviously that the money should be paid to the depositor wherever he happened to be when he demanded repayment. In fact the ordinary rule that a debtor must seek his creditor applies to such cases.¹

23. Suits on negotiable instruments. — A suit may be filed where a promissory note is made or bill of exchange is drawn.¹ It may also be filed where the instrument is payable,² though it is executed in a different district.³ A promissory note, which on its face purports to have been made at a particular place, will be presumed to have been made there.⁴ Where a promissory note payable on demand was executed by the defendant and handed over by him to the plaintiff at B, but the note described the plaintiff as a resident of M, it was held that the Court at M had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit on the note, but only the Court at B.^{4a}

Where a negotiable instrument is drawn at one place and accepted at another, part of the cause of action will arise at the place of acceptance.⁵ The liability of the acceptor does not attach, however, by merely writing his name upon the bill. It attaches only when the instrument so signed is delivered, or the fact of acceptance is communicated to the person entitled to the bill.⁶

The indorsement of a negotiable instrument or the assignment of a promissory note will also give rise to a cause of action at the place of indorsement or assignment⁷ though the mere negotiation of an instrument does not constitute a payment of the instrument.⁸

The dishonour of a negotiable instrument will also furnish a cause of action and a suit may be brought at the place where it was dishonoured.⁹ Even a notice of dishonour will be a part of the cause of action and the Court of the place wherefrom it is given will have jurisdiction.¹⁰

There is a difference of opinion on the question whether the Common Law rule that the debtor must find the creditor is applicable to the case of negotiable instruments. According to the undermentioned case¹¹ of the Nagpur High Court, it does not apply, the reason being that Section 81 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, requires the holder of the instrument to call upon the person liable to pay. In another case, also of the same Court,¹² the rule was held not to apply but the view was based on the provision in Section 70 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, that the holder must present it for payment at the place of business or residence of the maker, drawee or acceptor thereof, as the case may be. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Lahore that in the case of a promissory note no presentment is necessary when the suit is against the maker of the note and that, consequently, in such a case, the Common Law rule will apply.¹³

23a. Suits on assigned debts. — A bona fide voluntary assignment of a debt affords a valid cause of action to the assignee to sue his assignor and the original debtor in the Court within whose jurisdiction the assignment is made.¹ See also Note 23, Pt. 7, above.

24. Suit on torts. — Section 19, supra, as has already been seen, provides that a suit for compensation for wrong done to the person or to moveable property may be instituted either where the defendant resides or carries on business or personally works for gain or where the wrong was done. Where there are several tort-feasors and some of them only reside within jurisdiction, a suit will be maintainable against them at the place where they reside.¹

The commission of a tortious act will be a part of the cause of action and the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is committed, is competent to try the suit.²

The damage resulting from the tort will also, it is submitted, furnish a cause of action.³ This is in accord with sound principle. In a suit in respect of a tort the plaintiff has to prove both a tortious act and a consequent injury or damage. The damage or injury is therefore a material fact which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to entitle him to succeed in the suit. Thus, where the defendant instituted criminal proceedings at D against the plaintiff, who was residing at C and the plaintiff suffered damages at C, the cause of action for a suit for damages for malicious prosecution arises in part at C.⁴

25. Suit for custody of minor. — Where the defendant removes a minor from the custody of his guardian from A to L, the Courts at both the places have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the custody of the minor.¹

26. Suits for restitution of conjugal rights. — The cause of action, in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, is the breach of the marital obligations on the part of either party.¹ In a suit by a husband against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, the wife's absenting herself from her husband's residence without his consent will furnish a cause of action, and the suit can therefore be brought in the Court within whose jurisdiction the husband resides.² Of course the suit can also be brought at the place where the wife resides at the time of the suit.³ The reason is that a suit can be brought either where the cause of action arises or where the defendant actually and voluntarily resides. But where the defendant does not reside within the jurisdiction of the Court and the parties never lived together within such jurisdiction, it cannot be said that the cause of action arises within that jurisdiction.⁴

A suit by the plaintiff against his wife's father for an injunction restraining him from preventing his daughter returning to the plaintiff is not a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights and cannot be filed at the place of the husband's residence, when the father lives beyond the jurisdiction of the Court.⁵

27. Suits for divorce. — The acts constituting the cause of action in suits for divorce are detailed in Sections 10 and 19 of the Divorce Act (IV of 1869) and the Court within whose jurisdiction any of the said acts are committed will have jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The fact that the marriage took place elsewhere will not affect the venue.¹ A suit for the recovery of a dower debt on the divorce of the wife may be brought where the divorce takes place.²

28. Administration suits. — In a suit to administer an estate, the grant of probate and the undertaking to administer will furnish parts of the cause of action.¹ It may be noted that a Court can grant letters of administration only if the deceased, at the time of his death, had any property or had a fixed place of abode, within its jurisdiction.²

29. Suit to set aside decrees on the ground of fraud. — A suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud can be brought where the defendant actually and voluntarily resides or where the cause of action, wholly or in part arises.¹ The cause of action in such cases is the commission of the fraud and the obtaining of the fraudulent decree.² The mere discovery of the fraud is not a part of the cause of action.³

Where a part of the fraud is committed within the jurisdiction of a Court, that Court will have jurisdiction to entertain the suit.⁴ Thus, where A obtains a fraudulent decree against B at X and executes or applies for execution of the decree at Y, part of the cause of action arises at Y.⁵ But a mere transfer for execution to another Court without anything more being done will not enable the latter Court to entertain the suit to set aside the decree,⁶ though a suit for an injunction restraining the defendant from executing the decree is maintainable in that Court.⁷

30. Suit to set aside documents on the ground of fraud. — A suit to set aside a document on the ground that it was obtained by fraud will lie where the fraud was committed. Thus the cause of action for a suit to set aside a will on the ground that it is a forgery arises at the place where the alleged will is published.¹ It will also arise where the fraudulent document takes effect against the plaintiff's interest. Thus in a suit to set aside, on the ground of fraud, a release deed executed in Calcutta, in respect of the plaintiff's interest in certain property in Bombay, it was held that since the release took effect and operated on the property in Bombay, part of the cause of action arose there.² This view has been followed by the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned case.³

31. Suits against corporations — Explanation II. — The residence and domicile of a trading company is its principal place of business, i. e., the place where the administrative business of the company is conducted, which may not be the place where its manufacturing or other business operations are carried on.¹ A foreign company which gets itself registered in British India and carries on business there must be deemed to have its principal office in British India.²

Where, however, a cause of action arises at any place where the company has a subordinate office, that place will, according to Explanation II, be deemed to be the place where the company carries on business, irrespective of the location of its head office.³

The Government of India is not a corporation within the meaning of the Explanation and the Secretary of State for India in Council cannot be deemed to be carrying on business anywhere in British India.⁴

32. Suits against foreigners. — The general rule of private international law with regard to jurisdiction over foreigners is extra territorium jus dicenti non paretur legis extra territorium non obligant—an authority who legislates or administers justice beyond his own realm may be safely disobeyed beyond his jurisdiction.¹ And the presumption is that the Legislature does not intend to exceed its jurisdiction. But it is only where the words of the enactment leave room for doubt whether a Court has such jurisdiction, that the rule of international law would be considered.²

Another general rule to be remembered is that all legislation is territorial and is consequently applicable only to such foreigners as come into the country or have made themselves subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts of that country.³

The Code does not exempt foreigners from the jurisdiction of British Indian Courts⁴ and the grounds on which a Court may exercise jurisdiction over a foreigner are, as the Section says, residence, carrying on business, personal work for gain or the arising of the cause of action within jurisdiction.⁵

As regards residence, it has been held that even a temporary residence is sufficient to give jurisdiction.⁶

As regards the carrying on of business by a foreigner within jurisdiction, it was held by the Bombay High Court in the undermentioned case⁷ that the foreigner must personally carry on the business within jurisdiction. That case, has, however, been disapproved by the same High Court in a later case⁸ and also by the Madras High Court.⁹ These cases have held that a foreigner carrying on business through an agent within jurisdiction will become amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court.¹⁰

Where the cause of action against a non-resident foreigner arises within jurisdiction, that, in itself, is a sufficient ground of jurisdiction.¹¹ The same principle is found in Clause 12 of the Letters Patent which extends to absent foreigners also.

A Court exercising jurisdiction over foreigners should do so with caution¹² and should protect his interests as if he were a British subject.¹³

33. Revision.—No hard and fast rule as to revision can be laid down in cases of decisions as to jurisdiction under this Section and each case must, therefore, be decided on its own merits; ordinarily interference in revision is inadvisable in such cases and should only be exercised in exceptional cases to remedy an injustice; where the defendant is, by law, entitled to have the case tried at Patna, it will be a grave injustice to him to insist on its trial at Jagraon in the Punjab, and in such a case the High Court will interfere in revision.¹

34. Chartered High Courts.—This Section does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their original civil jurisdiction.¹ These are governed by the Letters Patent granted to them.

In order to give the High Court jurisdiction under the Letters Patent, either the whole cause of action must have arisen within the local limits of its jurisdiction or the leave of the High Court must have been obtained.²

21. No objection³ as to the place of suing⁴ shall be allowed by any appellate or revisional Court unless such objection was taken in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.⁵

1. Scope and object of the Section.—It has been seen in Notes 3 to 5 of Section 9 that when a Court has no jurisdiction over a litigation, its judgments and orders, however precisely certain and technically correct, are merely nullities and can be declared to be void by every Court in which they may be presented.¹ It has also been seen that in such cases no amount of consent or waiver on the part of the parties can create jurisdiction where there is none.² There are, however, two legislative exceptions to this rule, the first with reference to the pecuniary jurisdiction and the second with reference to the territorial jurisdiction of Courts.^{2a}

(1) Under Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, an objection that by reason of over-valuation or under-valuation of a suit or appeal, a Court has exercised jurisdiction which it has not, cannot be entertained by an Appellate Court unless such objection was taken in the Court of the first instance at or before the hearing at which issues were first framed or in the lower Appellate Court in the memorandum of appeal and such over-valuation or under-valuation has prejudicially affected the disposal of the suit on the merits.^{2aa}

(2) Under this Section which is framed on the analogy of Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887,³ an objection as to the place of suing cannot be entertained by an Appellate Court except under the circumstances mentioned in the Section.^{3a}

The object of the Legislature in enacting this Section is that when the Court of first instance after giving an affirmative finding on jurisdiction takes proceedings on the merits of the case, the latter should not be rendered abortive and all the time and labour spent thereon should not be wasted simply by reason of the fact that the higher Court comes to a contrary finding on the point of territorial jurisdiction.⁴ The Section applies to all objections as to the place of suing, that is, to territorial jurisdiction based on the alleged infringement of the provisions of Sections 16 to 20 *supra*⁵ and its effect is to cure, for all purposes, objections to territorial jurisdiction except under the conditions specified in the Section.⁶ The failure to notice the provisions of this Section is analogous to an irregularity in procedure or a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record.^{6a}

This Section does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their original jurisdiction, as they are governed by Clause 12 of the Letters Patent.⁷

The principle underlying the Section is of general application and has been applied to appeals^{7a} and also to cases which do not fall strictly within its terms.⁸ See Notes 6 to 8, infra. When a suit is instituted in a British Indian Court, that Court must determine whether it has jurisdiction to hear the suit or not, by the aid of the provisions of this Code.⁹

The Section only applies to want of territorial jurisdiction. It does not apply to the inherent incompetency of a Court to deal with a cause¹⁰ or to the want of pecuniary jurisdiction.¹¹

See also the undermentioned case.¹²

2. Jurisdiction, meaning of. — See Section 9, Notes 3, 4 and 5.

3. Objection to jurisdiction — General. — It has been seen in Note 5 to Section 9 that a party may waive irregularities in the exercise of jurisdiction which it has, or an enquiry into the existence of facts necessary to give jurisdiction, but that otherwise no amount of consent or waiver can give jurisdiction where there is none. An objection to the inherent jurisdiction of a Court to try a cause cannot therefore be waived and can be raised at any stage of the proceedings.¹ Thus, it can be allowed to be taken for the first time in appeal,² in second appeal,³ in Letters Patent appeal,^{3a} in revision,⁴ in an appeal after remand,⁵ and even in the course of argument before the Privy Council.⁶ If the objection is not raised till at a late stage and the jurisdiction is doubtful, the proper course is to proceed with and determine the suit.⁷ Where an objection as to jurisdiction is raised very late, the party may in the discretion of the Court be made liable for costs.⁸ If a question is raised as to the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court should decide it first and then proceed to decide other points, if it holds that it has jurisdiction.^{8a}

A defendant who objects to the jurisdiction of a Court cannot be said to have acquiesced in the trial of the suit simply because he did not apply for a transfer.⁹

Although a defect of jurisdiction cannot be waived, the High Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to interfere in revision where substantial justice has been done.¹⁰

The proper way to plead to the jurisdiction of the Court is to take the plea in the written statement as a substantive part of the defence.¹¹

If a Court is competent to try a suit and the parties without objection join issue and go to trial upon the merits, the defendant cannot subsequently dispute the jurisdiction of the Court upon the ground that there were irregularities in the initial procedure which if objected to at the time, would have led to the dismissal of the suit. The irregularity in assuming jurisdiction is waived if no objection is taken in time.¹²

4. Objection as to place of suing. — As has been observed in Note 1, above, this Section is an exception, so far as territorial jurisdiction is concerned, to the general rule that an objection to the jurisdiction of a Court can be entertained at any stage. Under this Section no objection as to the place of suing will be entertained by any appellate or revisional Court unless the following two conditions exist —

- (1) the objection is taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement,¹ and
- (2) there has been a consequent failure of justice.

In cases in which issues are settled, if the territorial jurisdiction of a Court is transferred to another Court after the settlement of issues, but the former Court nevertheless proceeds to act in the suit, is it necessary to raise an objection to the jurisdiction at the earliest possible opportunity and does Section 21 apply? It was assumed in the undermentioned cases² that Section 21 would apply and that if no objection was raised at the earliest possible opportunity after the transfer, the objection would be deemed to have been waived. It is submitted that Section 21 does not apply to such a case. As will be seen in Note 2 to Section 150 infra, where a Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit or proceeding at the time of its institution, such jurisdiction is not lost by the subsequent transfer of the area or territory with reference to which the suit or proceeding was instituted. If this be so, no question of any objection as to the place of suing can arise and consequently no question of the applicability of Section 21.

5. "Unless there has been a consequent failure of justice." — Even if an objection has been raised at the proper time, it is still necessary, before an appellate or revisional Court could entertain such objection, to show that the trial in the wrong Court has led to a failure of justice.¹ The question whether trial in the wrong Court subsequently objected to on the ground of want of territorial jurisdiction.^{3a} But the Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view,^{3b} based on the ground that Section 21, being an exception to the general rule that the inherent want of jurisdiction of the Court cannot be waived by consent of the parties, should not be so interpreted as to have a wider application than what is justified by its terms. In a recent case of the Madras High Court,⁴ one of the learned Judges, Mr. Justice Ramesam, was of opinion that Section 21 cannot be applied to execution proceedings. The observation was, however, obiter, and was dissented from by the other learned Judge. The actual decision in that case was that where a Court had no power to sell certain properties though within its territorial jurisdiction, the objection to jurisdiction cannot be deemed to have been waived by its not having been raised at the earliest possible opportunity.

It was held in the undermentioned case⁵ that where a Court sells properties without objection by the judgment-debtor, after the territorial jurisdiction has been withdrawn from it, the estoppel against the judgment-debtor cannot be extended to apply to a subsequent purchaser of the same property at a sale held in execution of a decree against the same judgment-debtor in another suit.

The High Court of Madras has also held⁶ that the failure of a party to object to the territorial jurisdiction of a Court to pass a final decree does not amount to a waiver of objection to the Court's jurisdiction to sell the property in execution of that decree.

7. Insolvency proceedings. — Under the proviso to Section 11 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920, no objection as to the place of presentment of an insolvency petition shall be allowed by any Court in the exercise of appellate or revisional jurisdiction unless such objection was taken in the Court by which the petition was heard, at the earliest opportunity, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

8. Collateral proceedings. — As has been seen already in Note 6 above, the effect of Section 21 is that an objection to the territorial jurisdiction of a Court not taken in the manner provided by that Section must be considered cured for all purposes. It has accordingly been held by the High Courts of Lahore,¹ Madras² and Patna³ that an objection as to the territorial jurisdiction of a Court, not raised at the proper time under Section 21, cannot be raised in any collateral proceeding or in a separate suit. Allahabad⁵ and Calcutta⁶ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur⁷ have, on the other hand, held that this Section does not preclude the objection being raised in a separate suit. But the Bombay High Court has arrived at the same conclusion as the former set of High Courts, by applying the principle of constructive res judicata to such cases and holding that an objection to the territorial jurisdiction of the Court in a previous suit, which might and ought to have been raised therein, must be deemed to have been heard and decided in favour of the existence of jurisdiction and is barred from being raised again in a subsequent suit.⁸ The High Court of Allahabad⁹ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur¹⁰ have held that the principle of constructive res judicata will not apply, the reason given being that the decree in the former suit was one passed without jurisdiction. The High Court of Calcutta in coming to the conclusion that the question of territorial jurisdiction can be re-agitated in a separate suit, has not referred to the question of res judicata.¹¹

9. Foreign Courts.— This Section has no application unless the place of suing is one to which the Code applies.¹ It has, therefore, no application to a case in which there has been usurpation by the lower Court of the jurisdiction of a foreign Court.² Thus, a suit instituted in a British Indian Court against a non-resident foreigner on a cause of action which arose wholly outside British territory is not covered by Section 21.³ But where the defendant has submitted to the jurisdiction of the Courts, he cannot subsequently challenge its decision for want of jurisdiction.⁴

10. Court trying a remanded case, jurisdiction of.— The jurisdiction of the Court trying a remanded case depends entirely on the order of remand. Where, therefore, a case is remanded to Court A for trial, Court B can have no jurisdiction to deal with it or pass any orders in it. Neither Section 21 in terms nor the principle underlying it is applicable to the case.¹

Where a case is remanded to Court A for trial on the merits, it has been held that it has no power to entertain a question as to jurisdiction raised before it for the first time.²

11. Procedure where suit is filed in a wrong Court.— See also O. 7 R. 10.

Where a Court finds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the proper procedure is to return the plaint under O. 7 R. 10 for presentation to the proper Court.¹

1. Scope and applicability of the Section. — It is a general principle of law that a plaintiff, as arbiter litis, has a right to choose his own forum.¹ This Section curtails that right to a certain extent by providing that the suit can be transferred under certain circumstances from the forum chosen by the plaintiff to another. Very strong reasons, therefore, must be shown to deprive the plaintiff of this right to choose his forum;² and Courts, as a rule, ought not to lightly interfere with it.³ The mere fact that it would be more convenient to the applicant to have the action tried elsewhere is no sufficient reason to force the plaintiff out of the Court in which he is legally entitled to sue. But the totality of circumstances should indicate the preponderance of the balance of convenience in favour of the suit being proceeded with in a Court different from that in which it has been instituted.⁴

This Section assumes that the party applying for transfer does not question the jurisdiction of the Court. Consequently this Section has no application where the party applying for transfer pleads that the Court has no jurisdiction.⁵ Where, however, the plea as to want of jurisdiction has been heard and decided in plaintiff's favour and the defendant thereupon applies for transfer on the basis of the evidence of jurisdiction, the Section will apply.⁶

This Section has reference only to cases which, at the option of the plaintiff, can be brought in more Courts than one.⁷ It is less general than the provisions of Section 24.

This Section and Section 23 do not apply to a case in which the question is whether a suit should be tried by a Court subordinate to a High Court or by a High Court. In such a case the High Court may, under its inherent powers, exercise powers similar to those contemplated by these Sections.⁸

Where some of the defendants to a suit are resident within the jurisdiction of one Court and others within the jurisdiction of another Court and the suit is instituted in the former Court by leave of Court granted under Section 20 (b) ante, the proper remedy, where such leave has been granted without notice to the opposite party, is to apply under this Section to have the suit transferred.⁹ Sections 22 to 25 of the Code are not affected by anything contained in Section 11 of Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879).

2. "Apply to have the case transferred." — An application for transfer under this Section should be made by petition and affidavits setting forth the grounds of transfer.¹ But the Court may in proper cases dispense with the affidavit.² Where there are several suits to be transferred, a separate application is necessary for each suit.³ Even before a guardian ad litem has been appointed to a minor defendant, any next friend of the minor may apply on his behalf under this Section for transfer of the case to another Court.⁴

3. Notice to the other parties necessary before making application. — The provision as to notice under this Section is mandatory. The words "after notice to the parties" indicate that the notice must be given prior to the making of the application and that the notice issued by the Court after the application is filed is not what is intended, so that where no notice is given before the application is made, the application must be dismissed.¹ It would seem that an application made in the presence of the parties may be assumed to be made after the notice required by the Section.²

4. Grounds for transfer. — See Section 24.

5. Objections must be heard before making order. — The object of notice to the parties is to see if they have any objections to the application for transfer. Where a party does not file his objections on the first day, the Court may grant him further time to do so.¹

6. Application, when to be made. — The provision as to the time of making the application is also mandatory and an application under the Section must be made at the earliest possible opportunity and in cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement.¹ Issues cannot, however, be settled until after all the parties are properly represented before the Court; as for instance, where a guardian ad litem is to be appointed for a minor defendant.² A party taking transfer proceedings in the trial Court and then approaching the High Court cannot be said to be guilty of laches.³

7. Transfer to Court subordinate to a different High Court. — See S. 23.

8. Stay of suit. — Under Section 20 of the old Code, where a suit which might be instituted in more than one Court was instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant or all the defendants did not reside or carry on business or personally work for gain, the defendant or defendants might obtain an order staying the proceedings on the ground that justice was more likely

2. Scope and applicability of the Section. — It has been seen in Section 22 that that Section has reference to cases which, at the option of the plaintiff, can be brought in more Courts than one.¹ This Section is much wider, and gives a general power of transfer of all suits, appeals or other proceedings, which can be exercised by the Court of its own motion and at any stage of the suit. The power exercised under this Section is more extensive than that under Section 39 inasmuch as the transfer under the latter Section can be made only to the Courts specified therein.² This Section, again, contemplates the transfer of a particular case and differs in this respect from Section 150 which relates to the transfer of the whole business of the Court to another Court.³

In order that this Section may apply, it is essential that —

- (a) the Court in which the suit has been instituted has jurisdiction to entertain it;⁴
- (b) the Court to which it is transferred is one competent to try it;⁵ and

If the application for transfer to the District Judge proves ineffective, the High Court may be moved by a fresh application for transfer.⁷

Section 25 of the old Code provided only for withdrawal of suits from subordinate Courts and for transfer of the suits so withdrawn. The Calcutta High Court had held, in a case arising under that Section,⁸ that the Section was not exhaustive and that the District Court had an inherent power to transfer a case itself to a subordinate Court. The same view was assumed by the Madras High Court also.⁹ The Section has now been made very much wider than before, and it has been held by the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court¹⁰ that the Section is now exhaustive of the judicial power of transferring suits.

A Court has no power under this Section to stay a suit. For its powers to do so under other provisions of the Code, see Sections 10, 22 and 151.

This Section applies to the Small Cause Courts.¹¹ But the High Court can exercise the powers under the Section only in its original civil jurisdiction.¹²

The High Court has jurisdiction, independently of this Section, to transfer a suit from one Court to another Court under Section 107 (b) of the Government of India Act of 1915.¹³

3. "On the application of any of the parties."—Where there are several suits pending which are sought to be transferred, an application should be made in each suit.¹ The Court may in proper cases dispense with an affidavit in support of the application.² Where there has been a delay in making the application, such delay should be explained.³

The word "parties" refers to those litigating the suit, appeal, or other proceeding of which the transfer is sought.⁴ A person acting on behalf of a minor defendant in a suit, before a guardian ad litem is appointed, will be a "party" within the meaning of this Section;⁵ so also a creditor in an insolvency proceeding under Chapter XX of the old Code.⁶

Even where the High Court has refused to transfer a case suo motu, it can do so on an application for transfer.⁷

4. "Of its own motion."—The High Court or the District Court has power to transfer, under this Section, suo motu without any application by a party.¹ Where a Court takes action on the application of a non-party treating him as a party erroneously, the transfer order will be deemed to have been made suo motu.²

Court⁴ unless the High Court's order is drawn up in express terms so as to disclose a clear intention of limiting those powers.⁵ Similarly, execution proceedings may now be transferred under Section 24 to a subordinate Court⁶ as the words "at any stage of the suit" will include execution proceedings also.⁷

7. "Suit, appeal or other proceeding." — It has been seen in Note 6 above that the word "suit" in this Section includes execution proceedings also.^{1a} The old Section did not contain the words "other proceedings" but it was held that the procedure of the Section applied to miscellaneous proceedings by virtue of Section 647 corresponding to the present Section 141.¹ The present Section 24 itself will include such proceedings.² The proceeding must, however, be a civil proceeding. An enquiry under Section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act is not a civil proceeding and the Section therefore does not apply.³ The Section will not also apply to special proceedings which were not in contemplation when the Code of 1908 was passed. Thus, Section 24 cannot be applied to proceedings under Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code as amended by Act XVIII of 1923 though such proceedings are to be regarded as civil proceedings.⁴ See also the undermentioned case.⁵

8. "Pending before it." — Under Section 25 of the old Code a District Judge had no power to transfer a case pending before himself.¹ Clause (a) has now been added with a view to remove this disability.² The provisions of the Section can have no application to a proceeding which has terminated.³

9. "Court subordinate to it"—Clause (3). — The District Court or the High Court can order a transfer under this Section only to a Court subordinate to it.¹ For subordination of Courts in general, see Section 3, ante. Clause (3) of this Section declares that for the purpose of this Section, Courts of Assistant and Additional Judges shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court. A District Judge can therefore transfer a case pending before him to the Court of the Additional District Judge.² A junior Subordinate Judge is not subordinate to a senior Subordinate Judge within the meaning of this Section.³ The Divisional Judge of Nagpur is not subordinate to the High Court of Bombay though his decree for dissolution of marriage is subject to the confirmation of the Bombay High Court. The latter Court cannot therefore transfer the proceeding filed before it to the Nagpur Court for disposal.⁴

"Court" in this Section means the Court to which the Code applies.⁵ Thus, a suit pending in a scheduled district cannot be transferred to another Court under this Section, as the Code is inapplicable to the scheduled districts.⁶

This Section does not empower the District Court or the High Court to transfer a suit to any Court beyond the local limits of its own jurisdiction.⁷ Nor does it empower them to transfer cases or matters over which they themselves have no jurisdiction.⁸ The Courts having jurisdiction under the Provincial Insolvency Act are declared by Section 3 of that Act to be the District Courts. The High Court has thus no power to act under that Act. Hence it cannot transfer an insolvency proceeding pending before a District Court to the file of the High Court Judge exercising insolvency jurisdiction.⁹

10. Notice of application is necessary.—Where a Court acts under this Section suo motu, no notice need be given¹ though after the transfer is made the parties should be informed that the case has been transferred.² But where a party applies for transfer, the procedure as to notice becomes imperative, and a transfer or withdrawal without notice will be set aside on the ground of illegality or material irregularity.³ The notice however may be waived by the party concerned as the

For other cases of want of jurisdiction, as regards the nature of the proceeding,
2 see the undermentioned cases.⁷

There is one exception to the rule that a suit cannot be transferred to a Court not having jurisdiction to try it, and it is indicated by sub-section (4) of this Section. Under that sub-section where a small cause suit is transferred to another Court, that Court must be deemed for the purposes of that suit to be a Court of Small Causes. This clearly shows that a small cause suit can be transferred to a Court which is not invested with small cause powers.^{7a} A fortiori, a suit instituted in a Court of Small Causes can be transferred to another Court having small cause powers although the value of the suit exceeds the limits of the small cause jurisdiction of such Court.^{7b} If a small cause suit can be transferred only to another Small Cause Court or to a Court invested with small cause powers, sub-section 4 is rendered useless and unnecessary and further there is no need to deem the transferred Court a Court of Small Causes if it must be already one. This sub-section must, therefore, be understood to constitute an enactment saving in special circumstances the provisions of Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh has in the undermentioned case⁸ taken a contrary view. In view of what has been said above, it is submitted that that decision is not sound in principle.

12. Not transfer where Court of institution has no jurisdiction. — The word "pending" in the Section must be taken to mean "duly pending." In other words, the Section will apply only when the Court in which the suit was instituted is competent to try it.¹⁻² And competency for this purpose will include not only pecuniary at B, and the witnesses all reside at B, the case may be transferred to the Court at B on the ground of convenience.⁵ On the other hand, it has been held in the under-mentioned cases⁶ that the convenience of the parties (such as the properties being situated or the witnesses residing at another place) is not a valid test under the Section and is not a good reason for depriving the plaintiff of his right to select his forum. It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the only good cause which depends upon the parties is where the parties are willing and combined for some reason, to ask that the case may be transferred to another Court.⁷ And the Patna High Court has held that the power of transfer can be exercised only when the proceedings in one Court constitute an abuse of the process of the Court.⁸ There seems to be nothing in the Section itself to compel such a strict construction thereof. The words "the Court may at any stage" in fact tend to show that the broader interpretation is to be preferred. The mere fact, however, that it is convenient for the defendant to have the case tried elsewhere is not a valid ground of transfer unless the institution of the suit in the Court from which the transfer is asked for amounts to an abuse of the process of the Court.⁹

The following have been held to be good grounds for transfer of a case under this Section :—

(a) Reasonable apprehension of the litigant that he might not get justice in the Court in which the suit is pending.¹⁰

14. Absence of order for transfer—Effect. — Want of jurisdiction in the trying Court will not be presumed by reason of the absence of an order of transfer on the record.¹ Where certain issues were remitted to the trial Court and prior thereto the territorial jurisdiction of the Court to which they were remitted had been transferred, the order remitting the issues will be taken to operate as a transfer of the case to it.² An omission to assign reasons for the transfer will not vitiate the proceedings in the Court to which the case has been transferred.³

15. Effect of transfer from or to a Court of Small Causes. — It has been held by all the High Courts except the Bombay High Court that the words "Court of Small Causes" in sub-section (4) of this Section include a Court vested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes.¹ The Bombay High Court has held that the words mean a Court properly and strictly so called, and does not include a Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes.²

Where a small cause suit is transferred to another Court under this Section, that Court is to be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes for the purposes of such suit and its procedure is to be governed by the provisions of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.³ And therefore the trial thereof can only be under the Small Cause Courts Act and no appeal will lie from the decision therein;⁴ and this will be so notwithstanding an express direction by the District Judge that the suit is to be tried as a regular suit, as such an order is without jurisdiction.⁵

The word "suit" in this Section includes execution proceedings, as has been seen in Note 6 above and therefore a Court to which such proceedings are transferred from a Court of Small Causes is a Court of Small Causes for the purpose of such proceedings.⁶

This sub-section will only apply, however, where the suit or proceeding is transferred under Section 24. If the transfer is made under any other provision of law, the Court to which it is transferred cannot be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes^{6a} and no finality can attach to its decision.⁷ Thus, where a small cause decree is transferred for execution to another Court under other provisions of the Code (e.g., Sections 38, 39, 42, O. 21 R. 4, etc.), its orders in execution will, if they fall under Section 47 of the Code, be open to appeal,⁸ though no second appeal will lie by virtue of Section 102.

This sub-section does not deal with the case where a suit is transferred from the original side to the small cause side of a Court. It has been held that in such cases the suit will retain its character as an original suit and will have to be tried as such.⁹

The sub-section only applies where a suit is transferred from a Court of Small Causes. But where the Court from which a suit is transferred is not a Small Cause Court, the mere fact that the suit is of a nature cognisable by a Small Cause Court will not make the sub-section applicable, and where the Court to which the suit is transferred is not a Small Cause Court, its decision will be appealable.¹⁰ Similarly, the sub-section cannot apply where the Small Cause Court in which a suit was instituted has ceased to exist or the officer invested with Small Cause Court powers (before whom the suit was instituted) has been transferred from the district and there is no other officer possessing such powers.¹¹ In such cases, if the suit is tried by an ordinary Court, the decision of such Court will be appealable.¹²

16. Procedure of Court of transfer.—A District Court which withdraws a case for trial before itself may, after such withdrawal, proceed in accordance with any of the recognized modes of procedure laid down in the Code; it can even make over the case to an arbitrator for decision.¹ It can amend the issues first framed and can frame additional issues and go into the whole case except upon any question upon which there has been a judicial finding already.² Where a conditional order of attachment is passed by a Court and then the suit is transferred to another Court, the Reasonable grounds for objection. See Note 1, F-N (2).

1. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section is new and proceeds on the analogy of Section 527 of the Criminal Procedure Code which enables the Governor-General in Council to transfer a case from one High Court to another. The Section does not apply to an objection to a particular Judge personally, e. g. that previously while at the bar, he has advised one of the parties. In such a case, all the difficulties would be met by the case being tried by another Judge of the same High Court. Consequently the objection in question must be one which applies to the High Court as a whole.¹

2. Appeal from decree in transferred Court. — The appeal from the decree in the transferred case does not lie to the original High Court, but only to the appellate side of the High Court to which the case was transferred.¹

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or in such other manner as may be prescribed" are new. No rules have, however, been framed prescribing any other manner of instituting suits.

2. Institution of suit. — As seen already in Note 5 to Section 2 (2) ante, a suit must commence with the presentation of a plaint.^{1a} Thus, an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is not a suit until the leave is granted and the suit is registered under O. 33 R. 8.¹

A suit is instituted when the plaint is presented and not when it is registered,² though for the purpose of issuing summons to the defendant the suit cannot be said to be duly instituted until it is registered.³ A re-presentation of the plaint after amendment is not a fresh institution of the suit,⁴ though a presentation to a proper Court after being returned for want of jurisdiction, will be a fresh institution. Where two suits are filed on the same day, the presumption is that they were presented in the order in which they were registered.⁵ But the filing of a plaint is not a judicial proceeding and there is no presumption as in the case of judicial proceedings, of its having taken place at the earliest period of the day on which it was filed.⁶

A fine can therefore be imposed on a person only if he has been required to attend the Court in connection with a case,¹ and not on a person who, after his failure to attend on the date for which he was summoned, is not required to give evidence, etc., and has not been called upon to appear on a subsequent date,² nor on a person who has been ordered and not summoned to produce a document.³

1. Scope and applicability of the Section. — This Section should be read with the provisions of Order 20 in the First Schedule. The Section does not apply to the Judicial Commissioner of Peshawar in the exercise of his original civil jurisdiction — Section 46 (2) of the N.-W. F. P. Law and Justice Regulation VII of 1901.

The High Court of Patna has held that this Section merely states that a decree shall follow the judgment and that it does not preclude the High Court from making a rule to the effect that in suits for money no decree need be drawn up if neither party has to recover anything unless the Judge otherwise directs.¹

Under the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926, List II, Schedule 2 and Section 135 of the Oudh Rent Act XXII of 1886, no decree need be prepared in the case of applications under the said Acts, unless prescribed by rule to the contrary.

2. "After the case has been heard." — The judgment in a case should be pronounced only after the case has been fully heard.¹ The failure of a Judge to give the parties an opportunity of putting their case before him vitiates the judgment.²

3. Judgment to be based on case set up by parties. — The judgment should be based on the contention raised by the parties or on the points involved therein. The Court has no power to go beyond the contentions of the parties and make out a case not raised by them.¹

4. Evidence taken before another Judge. — See Notes under O. 20 R. 1.

5. "A decree shall follow." — This Section casts on the Court the duty of preparing and passing a decree. A party or his pleader is under no obligation to move the Court to draw up a decree.¹ Where, after pronouncing judgment in a suit, the Court fails to draw up a decree, the remedy of the party who wants the decree, whether for appeal or execution, is to apply for it to the Court and if the application is refused, to move the High Court in revision. But until the decree is drawn up, there can be neither appeal nor execution.² It has been held in the undermentioned cases³ that the failure of the Court to draw up a decree should not be allowed to deprive a party of his right of appeal, it being the duty of the Court to prepare and pass a decree.

Where a judgment is passed in favour of a party and it is stated therein that he shall not get a decree unless he produces a succession certificate, a decree cannot be passed till a succession certificate is produced.⁴ (See Section 214 of the Indian Succession Act, XXXIX of 1925.)

INTEREST

- 4 34. [S. 209.] (1) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money,² the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable³ to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree,⁴ in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit,⁶ with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment,⁵ or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

(2) Where such a decree is silent¹⁷ with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie.

1. Scope of the Section.—This Section provides for the award of interest in cases of money decrees. It applies only —

- (a) where the decree is for the payment of money, and
- (b) as regards interest after the date of the suit.

The award of interest in respect of decrees for the enforcement of a mortgage or charge is provided for in O. 34 R. 11. As regards interest prior to the date of suit, it is a matter of substantive law and is outside the scope of this Section.¹

The Section classifies the interest awardable after the date of the suit into two classes —

- (a) Interest on the principal sum adjudged from the date of suit to date of decree.
- (b) Interest on the aggregate sum of the principal sum and interest, from date of decree to date of realisation or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

There is no analogy between the award of interest under this Section and the award of mesne profits under O. 20 R. 12. The former may be awarded as an inducement to prompt satisfaction of the decree and as a penalty for non-compliance with it. Such interest is no part of the claim or relief as in the case of mesne profits.²

Future interest which is awardable under this Section is really in the nature of damages granted by the Court on account of the plaintiff being kept out of the money due to him under the decree.³

2. "Decree for the payment of money." — For a full discussion as to what is a "decree for the payment of money," see Section 73, post.¹

The Madras High Court has held that the word "money" is not confined to an ascertained sum but will include also unliquidated damages and that interest on such damages can be awarded under this Section.² The same view has been taken by the Bombay High Court in the undermentioned case³ and by the Oudh and Sind Judicial Commissioners' Courts.⁴ In a later case, however, the Bombay High Court has decided that no interest can be allowed on damages before judgment.^{4a} In Crewdson v. Ganesh Das, A. I. R. 1920 Calcutta 737, Mr. Justice Mookerjee was of opinion that interest pendente lite cannot be awarded when the claim is for an unliquidated amount of damages. A contrary view, however, has been taken in a later case of the Calcutta High Court in which it has been held that the Court has power to award interest on damages, but that in such cases the Court should state its reasons for so doing.⁵

3. Award of interest under the Section is a matter of discretion. — The award of interest under this Section after the date of suit is entirely in the discretion of the Court.¹ This discretion is not excluded either by the fact that there is an agreement to pay a certain rate of interest till realisation,² or by there being no contract to pay any interest,³ or by the fact that the plaintiff does not claim interest,⁴ or by the rule of damdupat.⁵ It is not necessary for the award of interest in the decree that the judgment should have made any reference to it.⁶ To hold otherwise would render the words "in the decree" a mere surplusage, for it does not require a rule of procedure to enable a Court to embody in its decree a relief granted by the judgment.⁷

The discretion under this Section must, however, be exercised on sound judicial principles⁸ and, when so exercised, it will not be interfered with in appeal.⁹

[See ('35) AIR 1935 Lah 307 (311). (Held, that the Appellate Court could grant interest pendente lite though lower Court had refused it.)]

Ordinarily, future interest should not be refused except for sufficient reasons,¹⁰ such as the wrongful conduct of the party,¹¹ or the award of a high rate of interest upto date of suit.¹²

Where the lower Court has not considered the question of interest at all, the Appellate Court may grant it.¹³

Section 141 of the Oudh Rent Act, which provides that an under-proprietor or tenant shall be liable to pay interest on the arrears of rent at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, does not control the discretion vested in the Court under this Section to allow future interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable.¹⁴ See also the undermentioned cases.¹⁵

4. Interest from date of suit to date of decree. — The plaintiff is not entitled as of right to the contract rate after suit.¹ The Court, as has been seen already, has full discretion over the matter.² As a rule, however, the Court should award the contract rate till date of decree except where it would be inequitable to do so.³ In the case cited below,^{3a} the Court granted compound interest from the date of the suit to the date of the final decree in view of the fact that the plaintiff was long kept out of his money. Where interest at contract rate is refused, the Court should give its reasons for such refusal.⁴ In an action, however, for dissolution of a partnership and for accounts, interest should be allowed only from the date of final decree as it is impossible to say, before the final decree, if anything is due to the plaintiff co-partner.⁵

See also the undermentioned case.⁶

5. Interest from date of decree to date of payment. — This is also within the discretion of the Court.¹ As a rule, however, the interest after the date of the decree will be granted at a lower rate than that allowed for the period before the date of the decree. The reason is that the plaintiff getting the security of a decree has his interest reduced in the generality of cases.² But there is nothing to prevent a Court from granting, in a proper case, the contract rate of interest upto realisation.³ Where interest at 24 per cent. was granted upto the date of decree, the Lahore High Court refused further interest after the date of the decree.⁴

The interest granted under this head is referred to in the Section as "further interest" and is awardable on the aggregate of the principal and interest as on the date of the decree;^{4a} but it is not compound interest but only interest on a fixed sum declared to be due by the decree.⁵

6. Interest prior to suit — General. — It has been already seen that interest prior to suit is a matter of substantive law and is outside the scope of the Section.¹ It will be useful, however, to briefly note the principles governing the award of such interest.

The right to interest, prior to suit, arises in one of the three following ways —

- (1) Agreement express or implied between the parties (see Note 7 below).
- (2) Mercantile usage (see Note 8 below).
- (3) *Statutory provisions*² (see Note 9 below).

7. Agreement express or implied to pay interest. — The Usury Laws Repeal Act XXVIII of 1855, Section 2, has abolished all usury laws, and consequently where there is a stipulation to pay interest at a particular rate, that rate must be allowed, however high it may be.¹ The Court has no discretion on the matter as it has in the case of interest pendente lite.² There are however certain exceptions to the above rule —

- (1) Where the circumstances under which the agreement is entered into are such as to render it void or voidable under the Contract Act, e.g., fraud or undue influence or want of free consent, the rate agreed upon will not be enforced.³
- (2) Where the rate agreed upon amounts to a penalty, it will not be enforced, but the Court has power to grant reasonable compensation instead under Section 74 of the Contract Act. The Court's equitable jurisdiction to grant relief against penalty is not excluded by the Usury claimant for contribution be awarded such interest if he has slept over his rights for a long time.⁷ Similarly, where the dower to which a Mahomedan widow is entitled is fixed at a sum very much higher than the entire estate belonging to the husband, interest on the dower was refused.⁸

As to the rate of interest allowable as damages, see the undermentioned cases.⁹

11. Mortgage suits. — See Order 34 Rule 11.

12. Interest, whether payable after tender.—The general principle of the law of tender is embodied in Section 38 of the Contract Act under which, where a promisor has made an offer of performance to the promisee and the offer has not been accepted, the promisor is not responsible for non-performance. A tender of the amount due will stop the running of interest from the date of tender,¹ but it does not extinguish the debt.² But the tender must be a proper and a legal one. Thus, a tender contrary to the provisions of Section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act,³ or a deposit in Court without notice to the opposite party,⁴ or without getting a guardian ad litem appointed where the payee is a minor,⁵ is not a proper tender.

A tender before suit, in order to be effectual, must be accompanied by a deposit after the institution of suit.⁶ Otherwise, the creditor will be entitled to interest, at a suitable rate, from the date of institution of the suit to the date of realisation.⁷

A tender must be unconditional⁸ and of the full amount.⁹ A deposit, however, made in full satisfaction of the debt, but accepted by the Court in part satisfaction only, will stop the running of interest on that part.¹⁰ The rule that a tender of a part of the amount due must be treated as never made, applies only when it is admitted that a larger amount is due and not when it is bona fide asserted otherwise.¹¹ Where the judgment-debtor deposits the decree amount in Court, it has been held that he is not liable to pay interest on the decree amount from the date of the deposit to the date when the decree-holder has notice of the same.¹² Nor is he liable to pay interest sues B for the recovery of Rs. 495 made up of Rs. 250 principal and interest Rs. 245, the Court may award interest pendent lite and up to the date of realisation, though the total amount of interest awarded by the decree exceeds the principal of Rs. 250. The rule applies only so long as the matter is in the realm of contract. It ceases to apply when the matter has passed into the realm of judgment. So in mortgage suits the rule applies to the interest payable till the date fixed in the decree for the payment of the mortgage money, but not to the interest that may be payable subsequently.²¹

17. Decree silent as to interest—Sub-section (2). — Where the decree does not provide for interest it will, under sub-section (2) of this Section, be deemed to have been refused,¹ unless it can be shown that the silence was due to oversight or mistake.² This will be so even if the decree is based upon a confession of judgment which provided for interest.³ Interest not awarded by the decree cannot therefore be awarded either in execution⁴ or by way of amendment of the decree.⁵ Where, however, the judgment-debtor, in consideration of the forbearance shown by the creditor, agrees in Court to pay him interest, the creditor, in virtue of such promise, is entitled to ask the Court to execute his decree for the decree amount with interest from the date of such promise.⁶ Similarly if interest is allowed in execution by way of compromise, the Appellate Court will not interfere.⁷

Where the Court awards interest but no rate is mentioned, the decree-holder will be entitled to interest at the court rate which is usually 6 per cent.,⁸ though it may differ according to particular circumstances of the case.⁹ Where a Court has awarded interest by its decree at a particular rate, it cannot be reduced or denied in execution proceedings.¹⁰

Sub-clause (2) of the Section was introduced by Act VII of 1888. In some of the cases arising under the old Code before the date of the said Act, it had been held that interest though not awarded by the decree could be granted later on in execution¹¹ or in a separate suit.¹² In view of this sub-section the said cases are no longer law. Where, however, the decree is not for a definite sum of money but is one for accounts and partition, Section 34 (2) does not apply and a suit for interest is not barred.¹³

18. Court-fee. — Section 11 of the Court Fees Act does not apply to the interest awarded by the decree under Section 34¹ and no additional court-fee is therefore payable on such interest.² In an appeal against a decree awarding a sum of money and future interest, no court-fee is payable on the interest pendente lite unless a specific ground of appeal is taken in respect of such award.³

COSTS

35. [Ss. 218 to 222.] (1) Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed,² and to the provisions of any law for the time being in force,³ the costs of and incident to all suits⁴ shall be in the discretion⁵ of the Court, and the Court shall have full power to determine by whom⁹ or out of what property¹⁶ and to what extent²⁶ such costs are to be paid, and to give all necessary directions for the purposes aforesaid. The fact that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit shall be no bar to the exercise of such powers.

(2) Where the Court directs that any costs shall not follow the event,⁷ the Court shall state its reasons in writing.

discretion exercised on sound legal principles^{1a} and not by caprice or chance or humour.² No hard and fast rule can, however, be laid down, the exercise of the discretion depending upon the circumstances of each particular case.³ The circumstances will include the length of trial, the complicated questions involved, and the conduct of the parties both before and after suit.⁴ But it will not include grounds which are not relevant to the action.⁵

The discretion under the Section is very wide⁶ and extends to disallowance of the costs of the successful party,⁷ and even to make him pay the costs of the losing party,⁸ and to apportion the costs between the parties.⁹

The following are the leading principles to be remembered in the exercise of the discretion under this Section —

1. The successful party is entitled to his costs. In other words costs follow the event. See Note 7.

2. Where each party is partly successful, the Court should apportion the costs between them.¹⁰

3. A person wrongfully or unnecessarily made a party is entitled to his costs.¹¹ But a person who intervenes for no sufficient reason and defends the case separately should be made to bear his costs even if the plaintiff is unsuccessful in his action.¹²

4. When both parties are guilty of acts of bad faith, the proper order will be to deprive both of them of their costs.¹³ Where, in the lower Court, each party was ordered to bear his own costs and only one of them appealed from the direction as to costs, the Appellate Court cannot order the appealing party to pay the costs of the non-appealing party incurred in the lower Court.¹⁴

he wanted² or the whole of the amount claimed.³ Similarly, when the plaintiff succeeds only on part of his claim but fails on the most important heads of controversy, the defendant will be entitled to the whole costs of the suit.⁴ The fact that a party succeeded on a technical plea in bar,⁵ such as limitation⁶ or the Gaming Act,⁷ or on the admissions⁸ or mistakes⁹ of the opposite party, or the fact that the witnesses of the successful party gave exaggerated¹⁰ or false evidence,¹¹ or that the Court was not satisfied with them,¹² is not a ground to disallow costs. Similarly, the fact that the successful plaintiff refused to go to arbitration,¹³ or refused a tender which the Court considers insufficient,¹⁴ or the fact that defendant remained ex parte,¹⁵⁻¹⁶ or that the unsuccessful party had no previous information of the objection,¹⁷ or that the unsuccessful party was led to institute proceedings through the error of Court,^{17a} is not a ground for disallowing costs to the successful party.

As has been seen already, the Court may disallow a successful party his costs if he is guilty of misconduct or there is other good cause for depriving him of it and the Court must give reasons in writing, for so depriving him of it.¹⁸ The facts must he wanted² or the whole of the amount claimed.³ Similarly, when the plaintiff succeeds only on part of his claim but fails on the most important heads of controversy, the defendant will be entitled to the whole costs of the suit.⁴ The fact that a party succeeded on a technical plea in bar,⁵ such as limitation⁶ or the Gaming Act,⁷ or on the admissions⁸ or mistakes⁹ of the opposite party, or the fact that the witnesses of the successful party gave exaggerated¹⁰ or false evidence,¹¹ or that the Court was not satisfied with them,¹² is not a ground to disallow costs. Similarly, the fact that the successful plaintiff refused to go to arbitration,¹³ or refused a tender which the Court considers insufficient,¹⁴ or the fact that defendant remained ex parte,¹⁵⁻¹⁶ or that the unsuccessful party had no previous information of the objection,¹⁷ or that the unsuccessful party was led to institute proceedings through the error of Court,^{17a} is not a ground for disallowing costs to the successful party.

As has been seen already, the Court may disallow a successful party his costs if he is guilty of misconduct or there is other good cause for depriving him of it and the Court must give reasons in writing, for so depriving him of it.¹⁸ The facts must record is a mere puppet in the hands of the stranger;⁷ but great caution must be exercised before any such order is passed.⁸ Where A and B claiming under separate and distinct causes of action join and sue X and the suit is decided in favour of A and against B, A is entitled to recover the whole costs of his suit from X and the latter can recover from B the costs occasioned by his joinder as co-plaintiff.⁹ Again, where A and B jointly defend an action by X against them and the suit is decided in favour of A and against B, A is entitled to recover half the costs incurred in the joint defence from X.¹⁰ Where X sues Y and Z in the alternative and a decree is passed against Z with costs, but the suit as against Y is dismissed, the Court has power to order Z to pay in addition to the costs payable by him to X, the costs of Y. The reason is that if it is reasonable to join both Y and Z because it is uncertain as to which of the two is the really guilty one, then the reasonable costs of the defendant who has succeeded in defending himself, should be borne by the man who is to blame.¹¹

A solicitor who purports to act for a non-existing party is personally liable for the costs of the opposite party.¹²

10. Account suits. — In suits for accounts also, the general rule that costs follow the event applies.¹ It will follow the result of the account unless the defendant has falsely denied his liability to account.² Thus, where in a suit by a principal against an agent the latter denied the relationship itself, the Privy Council ordered him to pay the whole costs without regard to the result.³

The general rule as to costs in a suit for accounts is that they are to be given at the time of the final decree. Hence, where the preliminary decree completely omits to mention the subject of costs, it must be assumed that the Court intended to reserve the question of costs until the time of the final decree and the order of the Court which passed the final decree granting costs should be taken as meaning that the costs granted are the costs of the whole suit.⁴

unnecessary or improper,² or the next friend or guardian is guilty of a breach of duty or other improper conduct,³ costs may be made payable by the next friend or guardian personally. The words "by whom" in Section 35 are wide enough to cover guardians and next friends.⁴ In the case cited below,^{4a} it was held by the Bombay High Court that where a suit by a next friend on behalf of a minor is dismissed, the defendant is entitled to get his costs from the next friend irrespective of any question as to the suit being for the benefit of the minor, although the next friend can afterwards reimburse himself for such costs from the estate of the minor. As a general rule, a minor cannot be made to pay costs personally.^{4aa}

Where some of the defendants to a suit are minor co-parceners of a Hindu joint family, the Court may order that such defendants should be liable for costs only to the extent of their interest in the joint family property and should not be personally liable.⁵

20. Official Liquidator and Official Assignee. — The costs of an unsuccessful litigation incurred by a liquidator, whether in a voluntary or compulsory winding up, are payable to the party entitled, out of the assets of the company, in priority to the costs of the liquidation.¹ The costs incurred in a bona fide application by the liquidator will be a first charge on the estate.² See also the case cited below.^{2a}

A trustee in bankruptcy or the Official Assignee is personally liable for costs in the same way as any other party.³ He should, as a general rule, get a guarantee of indemnity from the parties who set him in motion.⁴ Otherwise, if the estate is insufficient to pay the costs in full, he would have to personally pay the deficiency.⁵ The circumstance that he has obtained the leave of the Court would only entitle him to claim reimbursement out of the estate or from the creditors in whose interest he was acting, but will not take away the personal liability for the costs ordered.⁶ In an appeal against an order of adjudication, the Official Assignee, if successful, is like any other party entitled to his costs.⁷

21. Partition suits. — A partition suit is brought generally for the benefit of all the parties to it and therefore as a rule it will not be right to require one of the parties alone to bear the costs of the litigation.¹ According to the Bombay and Calcutta

High Courts, the parties to a partition suit will ordinarily have to bear their own costs up to the preliminary decree.² But the Bombay High Court has held that the institution fee should be borne proportionately by all the parties.³ The Madras High Court has held that such costs should come out of the estate where neither party has been guilty of any unfair contention.⁴ See also the case cited below^{4a} in which the objection to partition was based on a clause in the will (under which all the parties claimed) placing a restriction on partition and in which it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the defendant who raised the objection should not be made liable for the costs but that such costs should come out of the estate. Where, however, one party has been successful in a matter the costs of which are severable from the general costs of the suit, he will be entitled to such costs under the ordinary principle that a successful party is entitled to his costs.⁵

Of course, the Court has always a discretion to saddle a party with the costs of the suit where he unreasonably contests the plaintiff's right to claim a partition⁶ or raises any other vexatious contentions.⁷ Likewise the plaintiff will be saddled with costs if he brings the suit unjustifiably.⁸ Where co-sharers are made consenting defendants only to enable the plaintiff to obtain a complete decree for partition, it is the plaintiff that ought to pay the co-sharers' costs of appearance.⁹

Where one of the parties to a partition suit bears all the costs which are to be borne by all the parties, the former is entitled to get the Court's order directing the others to pay their respective shares, but until such order is made execution cannot issue against them for such costs.¹⁰

22. Partnership suits.—The costs in partnership suits will ordinarily be made payable from the assets of the partnership except where there are no assets in which case the partners will have to bear it in proportion to their shares.¹ But when any partner denies the partnership or places obstacles to the taking of accounts, he will be made to pay the costs.² An order for costs out of the estate of a deceased partner will be invalid where he has not been properly represented in the suit.³

23. Probate cases.—The costs of taking out probate must primarily come out of the residuary estate and allotment should be made for the same before distribution.¹

As in other cases, this rule may be departed from where the party is guilty of misconduct or there is other good cause for doing so.²

24. Representative suits. — The order for costs in a representative action should clearly specify whether it is the representative party alone or the representative and the parties represented by him that should bear the costs.¹ The power conferred by O. 22 R. 3 (2) on the Court of original jurisdiction to award costs against the estate of a deceased plaintiff may also be taken to be conferred on the Appellate Court.² In a representative suit involving a caste question the costs of both the plaintiff and the defendant may, in a proper case, be ordered to be paid out of the caste property.³

25. Trust cases. — See Note 16 above.

26. To what extent costs are to be paid. — The Court has full power to determine to what extent the costs in a suit or proceeding are to be paid,¹ but it cannot award any costs not actually incurred in the suit or proceeding.² Nor is a successful party entitled to anything more than the necessary and reasonable costs incurred in the litigation and costs cannot be considered to be reasonable if, by diligence, the expenditure thereof could have been avoided.³ Where it is difficult to apportion costs between the parties in view of the peculiar nature of the disputes between the parties, each party may be allowed to bear his own costs.⁴ Where a suit contains several distinct items against separate defendants, the amount of costs allowed to each depends upon the claims against them.⁵ Where a suit against the Government is dismissed, costs should be taxed in the usual way without reference to any private arrangement between Government and its legal advisers with regard to their remuneration.⁶

Where a person is allowed to continue an appeal on an application under O. 22 R. 10, and the appeal is dismissed with costs, he is liable for the full costs of the respondents and not merely for the costs incurred after the date of his application under O. 22 R. 10.^{6a}

35 amount,² a subsequent suit to recover the costs incurred but not awarded will be barred
 29 on the principle of res judicata. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether, when the Court in the prior proceeding had no jurisdiction to order costs, a subsequent suit will lie for its recovery. In Mahram Das v. Ajudhia,³ Mahmood, J., expressed the opinion that an independent suit will lie. In Ram Das v. Mahammad Faqir,⁴ a later case, Mears, C. J., held that no such suit will lie, as it is not one for malicious prosecution, and as, treating it as a suit for damages, the damages are in law too remote to furnish any cause of action.

Where costs are awarded by an executable decree or order, no suit will lie to recover the costs so awarded as the same will be barred by the provisions of Section 47.⁵ But where costs are awarded by a decree or order which is not executable, an independent suit upon the judgment to recover the amount will lie.⁶

The rules set forth above apply, however, only to the recovery of costs as between party and party. They do not interfere with the right of enforcing by suit a contract between a pleader and his client as to the fees payable,⁷ or the right of a commissioner appointed by Court at the request of the plaintiff, to sue the plaintiff for his fees,⁸ or the recovery by suit of sums advanced by the plaintiff to the guardian ad litem of a minor to conduct his defence.⁹

A suit for costs against a third person on the ground that he was the mover of, and had an interest in the suit, does not, however, lie in the absence of malice and want of probable cause.¹⁰

29. Appeal and second appeal against order as to costs. — The question of appealability of a direction as to costs may be discussed under three heads —

- (1) where the direction is contained in a non-appealable order,
- (2) where the direction is contained in an appealable order, and
- (3) where the direction is contained in a decree.

(1) Where the direction is contained in a non-appealable order. — The order itself not being appealable, the direction as to costs contained therein will not also be appealable.¹ Thus no appeal will lie from a direction as to costs made in an order granting an adjournment of a case.²

(2) Where the direction is contained in an appealable order.—The direction as to costs in this case will be appealable on the grounds mentioned below under the third heading.³ But no second appeal will lie inasmuch as the appealable order in which the direction is contained is itself not open to second appeal.⁴

will not examine the reasons or review the discretion exercised.¹¹

30. Review of direction as to, or the taxation of costs. — A Court can, in proper cases, review a direction as to costs, but unless a strong case is made out it will be reluctant to do so.¹ As to the taxation of the costs, it is in the discretion of the Taxing Master and the Courts will not interfere with it on review unless the taxation has proceeded on an erroneous principle.²

31. Revision. — A mistake committed by a Court on the point of costs is hardly a ground for revision.¹ Nor will a bare failure to exercise a judicial discretion as to costs justify an interference in revision.² The High Court will not interfere in revision unless it is satisfied that the discretion has been exercised arbitrarily.³

32. Letters Patent Appeal. — An order of a single Judge, merely as to costs, is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent so as to give a right of appeal to the Division Bench of the High Court,¹ but when such order is incidental to a "judgment," an appeal will lie.²

of appeal from the judgment of the Registrar upon items to which objections were taken before him. Where objections as to the taxation of costs were not raised before the Registrar of the High Court, they will not be considered by the Board.¹ It is very rarely that the Privy Council interferes with the discretion of the Appellate Courts in India in a matter merely of costs.²

34. Right of contribution for costs payable under joint decree.—Where A and B join and sue C and the suit is dismissed with costs and such costs are paid by A alone, he will be prima facie entitled to claim contribution from B for his share of the costs on the ground that since they have joined together of their own will to institute the suit, there is an implied contract that both should contribute towards the expenses.¹ This rule will however apply only to a bona fide litigation.² Where A and B join together and bring a suit against C which is false to their own knowledge, and the suit is dismissed with costs, A and B are in the position of joint tortfeasors and there is no right of contribution between them.³

Where, on the other hand, C sues A and B and the suit is decreed with costs, and A, after paying the whole costs sues B for contribution, the principles applicable are somewhat different. A and B do not join of their own accord but are pushed into the same boat as co-defendants by C. No implied contract to contribute can be presumed, and therefore there is no right of contribution between A and B unless there is an express contract or some equity between them, which gives a right of contribution.⁴ Where the parties stand on an equal footing,⁵ as for instance, the defendants in a partition suit,⁶ the fact that one judgment-debtor has been compelled to pay the entire amount due, in itself may constitute such an equity. But where the defences of A and B are separate and antagonistic,⁷ or where, though the defences are joint, they have colluded or conspired together and raised false defences, there is no right of contribution between them.⁸

A plaintiff sued two persons, A and B. A admitted the claim of the plaintiff. B contested the suit and after contest the suit was decreed with costs against both. B paid the total amount of the costs and sued A for contribution of his proportionate of appeal from the judgment of the Registrar upon items to which objections were taken before him. Where objections as to the taxation of costs were not raised before the Registrar of the High Court, they will not be considered by the Board.¹ It is very rarely that the Privy Council interferes with the discretion of the Appellate Courts in India in a matter merely of costs.²

34. Right of contribution for costs payable under joint decree.—Where A and B join and sue C and the suit is dismissed with costs and such costs are paid by A alone, he will be prima facie entitled to claim contribution from B for his share of the costs on the ground that since they have joined together of their own will to institute the suit, there is an implied contract that both should contribute towards the expenses.¹ This rule will however apply only to a bona fide litigation.² Where A and B join together and bring a suit against C which is false to their own knowledge, and the suit is dismissed with costs, A and B are in the position of joint-tortfeasors and there is no right of contribution between them.³

Where, on the other hand, C sues A and B and the suit is decreed with costs, and A, after paying the whole costs sues B for contribution, the principles applicable are somewhat different. A and B do not join of their own accord but are pushed into the same boat as co-defendants by C. No implied contract to contribute can be presumed, and therefore there is no right of contribution between A and B unless there is an express contract or some equity between them, which gives a right of contribution.⁴ Where the parties stand on an equal footing,⁵ as for instance, the defendants in a partition suit,⁶ the fact that one judgment-debtor has been compelled to pay the entire amount due, in itself may constitute such an equity. But where the defences of A and B are separate and antagonistic,⁷ or where, though the defences are joint, they have colluded or conspired together and raised false defences, there is no right of contribution between them.⁸

A plaintiff sued two persons, A and B. A admitted the claim of the plaintiff. B contested the suit and after contest the suit was decreed with costs against both. B paid the total amount of the costs and sued A for contribution of his proportionate as to the costs of the appeal, it was held that the order of the Appellate Court was not to absolve the defendant from his liability for costs under the decree of the first Court.⁹ See also the undermentioned decisions bearing on the construction of decrees as to costs.^{9a} If a judgment includes costs, it implies costs allowed by the rules. If costs which are not permissible under the rules are included in the decree, the decree is not in accordance with the judgment and it is the duty of the Court to correct the decree so as to make it in conformity with the judgment.¹⁰

35 A. (1) If in any suit or other proceeding, not being an appeal, any party objects to the claim or defence on the ground that the claim or defence or any part of it is, as against the objector, false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party by whom it has been put forward, and if thereafter, as against the objector, such claim or defence is disallowed, abandoned or withdrawn in whole or in part, the Court, if the objection has been taken at the earliest opportunity and if it is satisfied of the justice thereof, may, after recording its reasons for holding such claim or defence to be false or vexatious, make an order for the payment to the objector by the party by whom such claim or defence has been put forward, of costs by way of compensation.

Compensatory costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defences.

(2) No Court shall make any such order for the payment of an amount exceeding one thousand rupees or exceeding the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction, whichever amount is less:

Provided that where the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of any Court exercising the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, and not being a Court constituted under that Act, are less than two hundred and fifty rupees, the High Court may empower such Court to award as costs under this section any amount not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees and not exceeding those limits by more than one hundred rupees:

Provided, further, that the High Court may limit the amount which any Court or class of Courts is empowered to award as costs under this section.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section was added by Section 2 of Act 9 of 1922, and by the provisions of that Act, this Section will only come into operation where the Local Government of the particular province has duly notified to that effect. It has been brought into force in Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces, Bihar, Orissa, Central Provinces, Assam, Punjab and Sind.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section is an exception to the general principle on which Section 35 is based, namely, that the award of costs to a litigant is to secure to him the expenses incurred by him in the litigation and not to enable him to get smart money by way of penalty or punishment on the opposite party; see Notes 1 and 26 to Section 35. In order that this Section may apply, the following conditions must exist¹ —

- (1) The claim or defence must be false or vexatious.^{1a}
- (2) It must be false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party raising it.
- (3) Such claim or defence must have been disallowed or withdrawn or abandoned in whole or in part.²
- (4) Objection must have been taken at the earliest possible opportunity.³

The awarding of compensatory costs under this Section is not obligatory in every case where a false claim or defence is put forward and objection is taken at an early opportunity. The Court may refuse to grant compensatory costs if in the circumstances of a case it considers it not proper to grant such costs.⁴

The words "not being an appeal" show that the provisions of the Section are applicable only to suits and proceedings but not to appeals. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the Section seems to apply only to the original hearing of suits and other proceedings and that it does not also apply to revision proceedings before the High Court, so that the High Court has no power to award compensatory costs in respect of such proceedings.⁵

2a. Applicability of Section to proceedings under Provincial Insolvency Act. — This Section applies to proceedings under the Provincial Insolvency Act.¹ It is immaterial that the Section was not in existence at the time of the passing of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920).²

3. Appeal. — An order for compensation under this Section is appealable under Section 104 clause (ff). But where the original Court has refused or omitted to award compensatory costs, the Appellate Court cannot, in view of the provisions of O. 41 R. 33, award such costs. An order for compensatory costs under this Section passed by a Small Cause Court is appealable to the District Judge under Section 24 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act,¹ though such an order will not be appealable under the Code.²

4. Revision. — An order for compensatory costs in a case to which this Section does not apply is one without jurisdiction and can be set aside by the High Court in revision.¹

PART II.

EXECUTION

GENERAL

36. The provisions of this Code relating to the execution of decrees shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to the execution of orders.

Application to orders.

Mode of execution. See Note 3.

1. Legislative changes. — Under the last paragraph of Section 220 of the old Code an order for costs not forming part of a decree, could be executed as if it were a decree for money. The provisions of Chapter XIX dealing with execution of decrees were applied to the execution of other orders also, by reason of the fact that a 'decree-holder' was defined in Section 2 of the Code as including a person in whose favour an order was passed, and a 'judgment-debtor' as including a person against whom an order capable of execution was passed. This Section now makes it quite clear that the provisions relating to decrees shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to the execution of orders. It is based upon the last para. of Section 220 and Section 649 of the old Code¹ but is of very much wider application.²

2. Principle and scope of the Section. — The principle underlying the provisions of this Section is that every Court has an inherent power to have its orders carried out, as otherwise the orders would be a mere farce.¹

Section 36 — Note 1

1. Section 649 of the old Code was as follows :
"The rules contained in Chapter XIX shall apply to the execution of any judicial process for the arrest of a person or the sale of property or payment of money, which may be desired or ordered by a Civil Court in any civil proceeding."

2. ('25) AIR 1925 Cal 57 (58, 59): 52 Cal 269.
(Order directing payment of remuneration to Commissioner is executable as a decree.)

('10) 6 Ind Cas 386 (387) (Cal).

The fact that the provisions applicable for the execution of decrees apply to the execution of orders, does not make such orders "decrees" for all purposes. Thus, where a non-appealable order such as an order for costs is sought to be executed and on objection being raised thereto the matter is decided under Section 47 (which will apply by reason of Section 36), such decision will not be appealable as a "decree." The reason is, that the order for costs being itself not appealable, an order passed in execution of that order cannot also be appealable.²

The High Court of Madras has, in the undermentioned case,³ held that such an order would not be one under Section 47 at all. It is submitted that this view is not correct in view of the clear wording of the Section 36 to the effect that the provisions of the Code relating to the execution of decrees shall apply to the execution of orders.⁴ The High Court of Calcutta has, on the other hand, held⁵ that Section 47 would apply to such a case, but has proceeded on the assumption that because the objection to the execution of the order was dealt with under Section 47, an appeal necessarily lies from the order. This view also, it is submitted, is not correct for the reason set forth above.

The provisions of the Code relating to the execution of decrees apply to the execution of orders only in so far as such provisions are applicable to such orders. Thus, it is provided by O. 16 R. 4 that in default of payment of the expenses of a witness, the Court may order the same to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the debtor. Such an order cannot, by reference to this Section, be executed as if it were a decree, by attachment and sale of the immovable property of the debtor.⁶

3. "Execution," meaning of. — Execution is the enforcement of decrees and orders by process of Court, so as to enable the judgment-creditor to recover the fruits of the judgments.¹ The modes in which the Courts can execute their decrees and orders are set forth in this Part and elaborated in Order 21, infra. The functions of an executing Court are judicial and not merely ministerial.²

4. "Orders." — This Section is applicable to all orders which can be included in the definition of the term "order" in Section 2 clause 14 ante,¹ and is not limited to orders made under the Code.^{1a} Thus, an order under the Guardians and Wards Act, for the restoration of the ward's property in the possession of such guardian, is executable as a decree against the guardian.² But, an order under Section 34 clause (e) of the Guardians and Wards Act directing the guardian of a minor to pay a certain sum out of the minor's estate for the marriage expenses of a dependant of the minor is not executable as a decree.³ The reason is that such an order is only in the nature of a direction to the guardian over whom the Court has control, to pay a certain sum of money out of the funds of the minor in discharge of the liability of the minor's estate. There is no adjudication by the Court in such a case on the relative claims of parties, and hence, such an order cannot be said to be a 'decision' within the meaning of Section 2 clause 14.

1. Legislative changes.

1. The words "In relation to the execution of decrees" are new.
2. In clause (a) the words "has been passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction" have been substituted for the words "is passed in appeal."
3. In clause (a) the words "the Court of first instance" have been substituted for the words "the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred."

2. Scope and object of the Section. — Under Section 38 of the Code a decree may be executed either —

1. by the Court which passed the decree, or

2. by the Court to which it is sent for execution. This Section defines the expression "Court which passed the decree" as including the Courts mentioned in clauses (a) and (b). The object of the Section is to avoid the cumbrous procedure which would result, if the Court which actually passed the decree be held to be the only Court which could execute it.¹ The word "include" shows that the definition is only in extension of the literal meaning of the expression and that it does not exclude the Court which actually passed the decree.² The following Courts thus fall under the definition :

- (1) The Court of first instance which actually passed the decrees.
- (2) The Court of first instance in the case of appellate decrees.
- (3) Where the Court of first instance has ceased to exist, the Court which would have jurisdiction to try the suit at the time of execution.
- (4) Where the Court of first instance has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute the decree, the Court which, at the time of execution, would have had jurisdiction to try the suit.

3. Where the decree has been passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction. — Under Section 649 para. 2 of the old Code, where a decree was passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, the Court that could execute the decree was the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred. Thus, where a decree was passed in second appeal, the first Appellate Court was the Court to execute the decree. Under the present Section it is the Court of first instance that is to execute the decree. Even an appellate decree of the Privy Council should be executed only by the Court of first instance and not by the High Court to which the decree is transmitted by the Privy Council.¹

4. Where the Court of first instance has ceased to exist. — A Court ceases to exist —

(1) if it is abolished.¹ But it can be revived² and on such revival becomes again the same Court which passed the decree, and cannot be taken to have ceased to exist.³

(2) if a special jurisdiction vested in it has been withdrawn after decree.^{3a}

Thus, a Court vested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes ceases to exist as a Court of Small Causes when those powers are withdrawn.⁴

A Court does not cease to exist for the purposes of this Section —

(1) by ceasing to have local jurisdiction after decree,⁵

(2) by the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction being altered,⁶

(3) by getting a different designation though with the same local and pecuniary jurisdiction,⁷

(4) by a different officer presiding over it,⁸

(5) by a removal of its headquarters to another place within the same jurisdiction.⁹

5. Where the Court of first instance has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute the decree.—It is a general principle of law that when once a Court gets jurisdiction to entertain a suit it does not ordinarily lose such jurisdiction by reason of subsequent events.¹ Thus, it does not cease to have jurisdiction by reason of the following facts :

(1) The transfer to a different Court by the local Government of the property in respect of which the decree was passed² or the area in which the judgment-debtor lives,³ or

(2) the transfer by the District Judge of the business of the Court to another Court.⁴

But where the Political Agent at Kolhapur who had jurisdiction only over Sirdars passed a decree against a Sirdar and the latter thereafter died leaving heirs who were not Sirdars, it was held that the Political Agent's Court "ceased to have jurisdiction to execute" the decree.⁵ In the undermentioned case^{5a} it was held by the Madras High Court, on a consideration of the Government notifications relating to the question, that on the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Berhampore becoming a Court within the jurisdiction of the newly constituted Province of Orissa, it ceased to have jurisdiction to execute a decree passed by it while it had been in the Presidency of Madras but that the Court did not cease to exist. In *Latchman Pundeh v. Maddan Mohan Shye*⁶ it was held that the expression "ceased to have jurisdiction to execute" was intended to "meet such a case as the following : for example, where an Additional or Subordinate Judge attached to more than one district, having passed a decree in one district, leaves this district and sits in another district under the provisions of Section 15 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, such Additional or Subordinate Judge is a Court. Where such a Court is sitting in a district other than that in which the decree was passed, it has not ceased to exist, but it has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute that particular decree."

It is now settled by a consensus of judicial opinion that where a decree is passed in respect of a certain property and subsequent thereto the area within which such property is situate is transferred to the jurisdiction of another Court, the Court which actually passed the decree nevertheless does not cease to have jurisdiction to execute it and can therefore entertain an application for execution thereof.⁷ But there is a difference of opinion as to whether it could sell the property which is situate outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.⁸

There is also a conflict of opinion as to whether, in the circumstances set forth above, the Court to which the local area is transferred can also entertain an application to execute the decree. The High Court of Calcutta⁹ has held that it can.

In Sceni Nadan v. Muthusami, A.I.R. 1920 Madras 427 (F. B.), Wallis, C. J., expressed an opinion (though it was obiter) that Section 150 of the Code conferred upon the Court of transfer jurisdiction to entertain an application for execution. This view has been adopted in the undermentioned decisions of the Madras High Court,^{9a} by the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court^{9b} and by the Bombay High Court also.¹⁰ On the other hand, it was held in later decisions of the Madras High Court¹¹ that the Court of the transferred area has no jurisdiction to entertain the application for execution. The difference of opinion is due to the different interpretations of Section 150, infra. See Notes to Section 150. It is respectfully submitted that this last view is correct. Under Section 37 (b) a "Court which passed a decree" will include a Court other than that which actually passed it, only where the latter ceases to exist or ceases to have jurisdiction to execute the decree. If the jurisdiction of the Court which actually passed the decree does not cease by reason of the property dealt with by it being transferred to the jurisdiction of another Court, the Court of the transferred area is not a "Court which passed the decree." Under Section 38 of the Code, a decree may be executed either by the "Court which passed the decree" or by the Court to which it is sent for execution. It follows, therefore, that the Court of the transferred area cannot entertain an application for execution of the decree. The mere fact that a temporary Court is established for a certain period and is thereafter continued cannot deprive that Court of its character of the Court which passed the decree. Hence, such Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application for the execution of the decree.^{11a}

Where the Court is one and the same but is presided over by several Judges, the decree passed by one can be executed by the other. Section 37 (b) does not apply to such a case.¹²

1. Scope and object of the Section. — Under this Section a decree may be executed¹—

(a) by the "Court which passed the decree"^{1a} which is defined in Section 37, ante, or

(b) by the Court to which it is sent for execution — See Section 39.

A Court which is neither the Court which passed the decree nor the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution cannot, as a general rule, execute the decree.^{1aa} There are, however, some exceptions. A decree may be executed also by the Court to which the execution proceedings may be transferred under the provisions of Section 24.² Again, it has been held by the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case³ that where there are two independent Courts within the same territorial limits having concurrent jurisdiction, it is open to either of the Courts to execute the decree of the other. Under Section 63, where a property is attached in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, the Court of the highest grade is the Court by which the property should be sold. (See Section 63, Note 5.) Under O. 21 R. 16 an application for execution by the transferee of a decree can be made only to the Court which passed the decree. (See O. 21 R. 16, Note 12.)

Where a Court has, at the time of the presentation of an execution petition, no jurisdiction over it or could only exercise its jurisdiction irregularly, the Court is not bound to dismiss the execution petition if it afterwards obtains jurisdiction.⁴

5. What decrees may be executed. — Where a decree is reversed or modified or affirmed on appeal, the only decree capable of execution is the appellate decree.¹ In exceptional cases, however, where the appellate judgment does not even affirm the decree of the lower Court, but simply dismisses the appeal, the general rule that the appellate decree alone is the one to be executed does not apply and the Courts should allow execution of the decree of the original Court.²

Where the appellate decree affirms the lower Court's decree with all its specifications, it would be competent to the executing Court to look at the latter decree for information as to its contents.³ But it is always desirable that the appellate decree should embody so much of the lower Court's decree as it is intended to affirm, as this avoids the necessity for reference to the superseded decree.⁴⁻⁶

A purely declaratory decree is not capable of execution and a decree originally capable of execution may also subsequently become incapable of execution.⁷ The question whether a decree is executable has to be settled primarily upon the form or the language of the decree itself. The test to ascertain whether a decree is executable is whether there is a direct and definite order to a definite person to do or to refrain from doing a definite thing.^{7a}

Every decree to be executed must, as a rule, be a subsisting decree.⁸

6. Territorial jurisdiction. — As a general rule territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to a Court executing a decree,^{1a} and neither the Court which passed the decree¹ nor the Court to which it is sent for execution² can execute it in respect of property lying outside its territorial jurisdiction. To this rule, however, there are certain exceptions :

1. Where the suit is instituted, under Section 17 of the Code, in Court A in respect of properties situated within the jurisdiction of Courts A and B, the decree passed in the suit can be executed by Court A even in respect of properties situated within the jurisdiction of Court B. The reason is that where a Court has acquired jurisdiction in a suit, such jurisdiction will continue in execution proceedings also.³ Court A can also send the decree for execution to the Court B and the latter Court can then execute the decree against such property.⁴

2. Where subsequent to the passing of a decree by Court A in respect of certain properties, the territory within which such properties are situate is transferred to the jurisdiction of Court B, Court A, nevertheless, does not cease to have jurisdiction to execute the decree and can entertain an application for execution.⁵ There is a conflict of opinion whether it could sell the property or order its delivery to the decree-holder.⁶

3. Where a single revenue-paying estate is situate within the jurisdiction of Court A and of Court B, Court A can execute a decree for money passed by it by attachment and sale of the whole property.⁷

4. The salary of a public officer or of a servant of a Railway Company or of a local body may be attached by a Court although the disbursing officer is outside the limits of its local jurisdiction.⁸

7. Pecuniary jurisdiction. — It has been observed in Section 6 ante that where a Court has jurisdiction at the time of the institution of a suit, it does not lose it by any change in the value of the subject-matter after the institution, and that it can pass a decree in such a suit for an amount even exceeding its pecuniary jurisdiction. It follows that the Court can execute the decree even when the decretal amount plus the interest or mesne profits exceeds the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction.¹

But, can a Court to which a decree is sent for execution execute the decree if its value exceeds the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction? No, according to Bombay,² Calcutta,³ Lahore,⁴ Patna,⁵ and Rangoon.⁶ Yes, according to Madras.⁷ The ground on which the Madras decisions proceed is that in the classes of cases mentioned in Section 223 of the old Code (now Section 39), a special and extraordinary jurisdiction is created in the Court to which the decree is sent for execution and this is inferred mainly from the fact that sub-section (2) mentions that when a Court of its own motion sends a decree for execution to another Court, the latter must be a Court of competent jurisdiction whereas sub-section (1) does not say so.

8. Executing Court, if can go behind decree. — An executing Court cannot go behind the decree.¹ In other words, the jurisdiction of the Court executing a decree must be determined with reference to and is circumscribed by the directions contained of the person whose name is on the record to execute the decree.¹¹ Nor can it go into the question whether the decree was a valid one¹² or was obtained by fraud.¹³

But, can an executing Court question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree? The question depends again upon another question, whether the executing Court is the very Court which passed the decree, or one to which the decree has been transferred for execution. Under Section 225 of the old Code corresponding to O. 21 R. 7, it was held in some cases that the Court to which a decree was sent for execution was not precluded from entertaining any objection as to the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree.¹⁴ The words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it" which occurred in Section 225 have now been omitted in O. 21 R. 7. It has now been held that the result of this omission is that the transferee Court cannot question the jurisdiction of the transferor Court which passed the decree.^{14a}

But where the execution Court is the very Court which passed the decree, the answer must depend upon general principles of law as modified by legislative enactments, if any. It is a general principle of law that where a Court has no jurisdiction over a litigation, its judgments and orders, however precisely certain and technically correct, are merely nullities and can be declared to be void by every Court in which they may be presented.¹⁵ As seen in Note 1 to Section 21, there are two legislative exceptions to this rule, the first, with reference to the pecuniary jurisdiction,¹⁶ and the

0 registered, the executing Court can declare that the decree is not capable of execution. In doing so, it cannot be said to go behind the decree.¹

9b. Power of executing Court to fix order in which mortgaged properties are to be sold. — Where a mortgage decree itself fixes the order in which the mortgaged properties are to be sold, the executing Court cannot go behind the decree and sell the properties in a different order.¹ But where the mortgage decree does not fix any order in which the mortgaged properties are to be sold, the executing Court has the power to prescribe such order.²

9c. Where the Court at A sends it for execution to the Court at B within whose jurisdiction the property to be proceeded against is situate, and an application for sale of such property is made to Court A, it has been held by the Privy Council in the undermentioned case⁴ that it was not made to a "proper Court" within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act. The reason is that Court A cannot, as has been seen in Section 37, sell immovable property situate outside its territorial jurisdiction and an application to that Court for sale of such properties cannot be deemed to be an application made to a "proper Court." The decision does not touch the question of the maintainability of simultaneous execution applications. On the strength of the said decision, it was, however, held in the undermentioned cases⁵ that simultaneous executions are not permissible in two Courts. It is submitted that the latter view is not correct. Their Lordships' observations in the Privy Council case, during the course of the argument, that the tendency of the Code is against concurrent executions, appear to have influenced the decisions of the High Courts. 1. Legislative changes. — The words "or delivery" in clause (c) of sub-section (1) and "of competent jurisdiction" in sub-section (2) are new.

2. Scope and applicability of the Section. — Section 38 provides that a decree may be executed either by the Court which passed it or by the Court to which it is sent for execution. This Section lays down the conditions under which a decree can be so sent. The use of the word "may" shows that the Section is directory and not mandatory¹ and gives the Court a discretion either to execute the decree itself or to send it to another Court for execution.² (See also Note 7, infra.)

The test of the applicability of the Section is to see whether the Code regulates the procedure of both the transferor and the transferee Courts.³ Where there is no power to make a transfer at all, the proceedings of the transferee Court will be void ab initio.⁴

A transfer under this Section must be of the whole decree and not only a part thereof.⁵ Nor can the transfer be for a limited purpose only.⁶ Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) only define the circumstances under which a decree may be transferred for execution to another Court and do not in any way restrict or limit the powers of the Court to which a decree is transferred. Hence, the mere fact that a decree has been transferred to another Court on the ground of the judgment-debtor having immovable property within the jurisdiction of such Court does not preclude such Court from arresting the judgment-debtor.^{6a}

Where a decree of a trial Court has become merged in that of the Appellate Court, the latter decree is the only decree which can be transferred under this Section.⁷

An award filed in Court under Section 11 of the Arbitration Act is enforceable under Section 15 of that Act as if it were a decree of the Court and therefore it could be transferred under this Section for execution as a decree.⁸

This Section has been applied to Arakan Hills. See Arakan Hills District Laws Regulation, 1916 (I of 1916), Schedule I.

3. "Court which passed a decree."—See Section 37. An award passed under rules framed under Section 43 of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act is enforceable, on application to any Civil Court having jurisdiction, as a decree of such Court. Such Court therefore has power to transfer it for execution to another Court.¹ The same principles hold good as regards awards filed under Section 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899.²

4. "Decree-holder."—See Section 2 (3) Note 2.

5. When and to what Court a decree may be sent for execution.—Section 38 read with this Section shows that the Court which passed the decree is primarily the Court to execute the decree, but that such Court may send the decree for execution to another Court either on the application of the decree-holder or of its own motion if certain conditions are satisfied. Where the transfer is made on an application by the decree-holder, one of the conditions in clauses (a) to (d) of sub-section (1) must be satisfied.^{1a} Where it is made on the Court's own motion the conditions in sub-section (2) must be satisfied, namely, that it must be made to a subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction.¹ It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the competency of the Court under sub-section 2 of this Section must be determined by reference to its competence to try a suit of similar valuation to the suit in which the decree was passed.^{1b} But the Lahore High Court has held that the words "competent jurisdiction" refer to competence to deal with the decree and not to competence to try the suit in which the decree was passed.^{1c}

A decree cannot be sent, under this Section, for execution to a Court not in British India² except in the cases mentioned in Section 45, infra.³ But it is not necessary that the transferee Court should be of the same kind as the transferor Court.⁴ Thus, a Civil Court may transfer its decree to a Revenue Court and vice versa.⁵

As to whether a decree can be sent for execution to a Court which has no pecuniary jurisdiction over the suit, see Section 38 Note 7, ante.

As to the procedure to be followed by the transferor Court in sending a decree for execution to another Court, see O. 21 R. 6 and as to the procedure that is to be followed by the transferee Court, see O. 21 R. 7. See also Note 1 to Section 42.

6. Residence outside jurisdiction — Clause (a). — Under clause (a) it is sufficient if it is shown that the judgment-debtor resides within the jurisdiction of the Court to which the transfer is sought. The decree-holder is not bound to state the mode in which the decree is sought to be executed, i. e., whether against the person or property of the judgment-debtor.¹ Where a prohibitory order is to be served on the garnishee of the judgment-debtor, the decree may be transferred to the Court within whose jurisdiction the garnishee resides.²

7. Having property outside jurisdiction — Clause (b). — The jurisdiction of a Court is circumscribed by and is co-extensive with its territorial limits. Where property sought to be attached is bona fide outside the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree, that Court cannot attach it but must transfer the case to the Court within whose local jurisdiction the property is situated.¹ Similarly, the decree of a temporary Court, which has no local jurisdiction, must be transferred for execution to the Court which has local jurisdiction over suits in respect of such property.² The word 'may' used in this Section does not mean that, in such a case it is in the discretion of the Court which passed the decree either to execute the decree itself or transfer it to another Court; it should send the decree to the Court having territorial jurisdiction.^{2a}

Where it is alleged by the decree-holder applying for transfer that the properties within the jurisdiction of the Court are not sufficient to satisfy the decree, it is enough if the allegations are supported by an affidavit or some other evidence on which the Court can reasonably rely. It is not necessary that the Court should go through the process of sale in order to find out whether in fact the proceeds will be sufficient to satisfy the decree.^{2b}

When a decree is transmitted for execution to another Court, the presumption is that the decree was intended to be executed against properties within the jurisdiction of the latter Court and not against properties situated within the jurisdiction of the transmitting Court.³ Similarly, it has been held that where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court on the ground that one of the judgment-debtors has no property within the local limits of the Court which passed the decree and has property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the other Court, the decree cannot be executed against another judgment-debtor who does not fulfil that condition.⁴ But, it has been held by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case⁵ that the fact that a decree has been transferred to another Court under clause (b) of this Section on the ground of the judgment-debtor having property within the jurisdiction of such Court, does not preclude such Court from arresting the judgment-debtor.

8. Decree for sale or possession of property outside jurisdiction —

Clause (c). — See also Note 6 to Section 38. Clause (c) includes also cases where the Court passing the decree has subsequently lost territorial jurisdiction.¹

Where properties mortgaged are within the jurisdiction of more than one Court and one of such Courts has passed a decree for sale, the Court which has passed the decree is entitled to sell the properties outside its jurisdiction also and it is not bound to transfer the decree to the Court having territorial jurisdiction over such property.² The reason is that as observed in Note 2 ante, the Section is only directory and not mandatory.

In the undermentioned case,³ a decree was passed by the Bombay High Court for the sale of property in Karachi and the property was also sold by the Bombay High Court and purchased by the decree-holder himself. The decree-holder was obstructed in obtaining possession of the property. Thereupon the Bombay High Court transferred the decree to the Karachi Court for removal of the obstruction. On a contention being raised that removal of obstruction was not, properly speaking, execution of the decree and that therefore the decree could not be transferred to the Karachi Court, it was held that the decree being one for sale of property within the jurisdiction of another Court, the case came within clause (c) of Section 39 and that as the auction-purchaser was the decree-holder himself the proceeding for the removal of obstruction was a proceeding in execution (within Section 47) and hence the decree could be properly transferred for 'execution' under clause (c) of Section 39.

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Section.
2. "Shall certify."

3. Jurisdiction of transferee Court, how long continues. See Note 3 to Section 42.

1. Scope and object of the Section. — The Court to which a decree is sent for execution must, on the determination of the proceedings in that Court, certify to the Court which passed the decree the result of those proceedings.¹ This certification is a very important act as its effect is to determine the jurisdiction of the transferee Court.² This Section has been applied to Arakan Hills. See Arakan Hills District Laws Regulation, 1916 (I of 1916), Schedule I.

2. "Shall certify." — In Shivlingappa v. Shidmallappa,¹ Macleod, C. J., held that there must be a formal certification by the transferee Court to the transferor Court and that the fact of certification should not be left open to inferences to be drawn from entries in the register of suits of the transferor Court showing the result of the proceedings in the transferee Court. In an earlier case,² where a decree on the small cause side had been transferred to the original side of the same Court for execution and the result of the proceedings in execution was entered in the small cause suit register, the same learned Chief Justice however held that the requirements of Section 41 were "clearly" satisfied. It is submitted with respect that the view taken in the later case is the correct one.

An order by the transferee Court that the result of part satisfaction of the decree may be communicated to the transferor Court^{2a} or a report by the former Court to the latter of the facts relating to an arrangement come to between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor,^{2b} is not such a certificate as is contemplated by the Section and does not determine the jurisdiction of the transferee Court. But when the transferee Court dismissed the execution case and directed that the transferor Court should be informed of it and a copy of this order was actually filed in the latter Court with the application of the decree-holder asking for a transfer to another Court, it was held that this was sufficient compliance with the requirements of the Section.^{2c}

Where the transferee Court dismisses the execution case on the ground that an objection as to limitation is a valid one, and sends back the case to the transferor Court with the requisite certificate, but the objection as to limitation is disallowed on appeal, the transferee Court can get back the records and proceed with the execution. The position is the same as if no certificate of the manner of execution had been sent under this Section to the transferor Court.³

It cannot transfer the decree to another Court for execution^{5b} or stay execution of the decree except under the provisions of O. 21 R. 26 so as to enable the parties to get the objections decided by the transferor Court.⁶ Nor can it decide the liability of a third person under O. 21 R. 50, sub-rule 2 as a partner of a firm.^{6a}

but must execute the decree as it stands.⁸ Where the decree-holder dies after the date of transfer, his legal representative must apply to the Court which passed the decree for substitution of his name on the record. See Notes to O. 21 R. 16, infra. Similarly, where a judgment-debtor dies after the date of transfer, the application to implead his legal representatives must be made to the Court which passed the decree.⁹ There was a conflict of decisions as to whether the transferee Court also could entertain and dispose of the application. All the High Courts except the High Courts of Calcutta and Lahore held that the proper Court to apply is only the Court which passed the decree.¹⁰ The Calcutta¹¹ and Lahore¹² High Courts, on the other hand, held that the application can be made even to the transferee Court. They further held that even if it be assumed that the application should be made only to the transferor Court, the making of an application to the transferee Court, even if objected to by the judgment-debtor, is only an irregularity in procedure curable by Section 99.¹³ The High Court of Madras was, however, of opinion that the non-compliance with the rule that the application should be made to the Court which passed the decree, if objected to at the proper time is not a mere irregularity though if not so objected to, is an irregularity curable under Section 99.¹⁴ The Privy Council has now reconciled the apparent conflict by holding that while an application for substitution of legal representatives should be made to the Court which passed the decree, the non-compliance with the rule is only an irregularity in procedure which, if acquiesced in by a party, cannot be challenged by him later on.¹⁵

The transferee Court cannot question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree.^{15a} Under the old Section 225 corresponding to O. 21 R. 7, the words 'or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it' occurred. This gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to whether the transferee Court can go into the question of jurisdiction of the Court which passed it. The said words have now been removed thus setting the conflict at rest.¹⁶⁻¹⁷

Where it is brought to the notice of the transferee Court that the decree sought to be executed has, subsequent to the transfer, *ceased to exist*¹⁸ or is satisfied out of Court,¹⁹ the Court is bound to go into the question and if the allegation is correct, should refuse to proceed with the execution.

Where a decree has been transferred to another Court and that Court certifies its failure to execute the same, it is only the Court which passed the decree and not

2. Pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the transferee Court. — See Section 38 Note 7.

3. Jurisdiction of transferee Court, how long continues. — The transferee Court retains its jurisdiction over the execution proceedings until it certifies to the Court which passed the decree in the manner set forth in Section 41¹ or until the execution has been withdrawn from it.² Where, therefore, a decree has been executed by it partly, an application for further execution can be made to it without obtaining a fresh certificate under O. 21 R. 6 from the transferor Court.³ It is not bound to send the certificate as soon as one application for execution fails. The failure should be complete and not partial.⁴ The mere fact that the execution petition is struck off for some informality does not determine its jurisdiction in the matter⁵ and it can review its order striking off the petition⁶ or review the execution proceedings.⁷

After the issue of the certificate under this Section the transferee Court ceases to have jurisdiction to receive execution petitions or to do anything further in the matter⁸ except to decide objections in respect of anything done in the course of the execution proceedings which were pending before it.⁹ The Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court has, however, held that its jurisdiction does not cease even after a certificate is sent under this Section and that it can therefore entertain a fresh application for execution without another transfer under O. 21 R. 6 from the transferor Court.¹⁰

But the fact that execution has been transferred to another Court does not deprive the transferor Court of all control over the execution proceedings.¹¹ Thus, it decree had been passed by itself, such order would be appealable. Thus, where a small cause suit is transferred to the original side for execution and an appealable order is passed in execution by the Court of transfer, such order would be appealable notwithstanding that the decree transferred is itself not appealable.¹ But the transfer of the decree cannot alter the *nature of the suit*² and the provisions of Section 102 will control this Section with the result that in the case of suits of a small cause nature, no second appeal will lie.³

[S. 229.] Any decree passed by a Civil Court established in any part of British India to which the provisions relating to execution do not extend, or by any Court established or continued by the authority of the Central Government or the Crown Representative^a in the territories of any foreign Prince or State, may, if it cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed, be executed in manner herein provided within the jurisdiction of any Court in British India.

another British Indian Court.¹ The addition of the words 'any decree passed. . . . extend' in the present Section makes it clear that the Section applies to Courts in areas in British India to which the Code does not apply.

3. Courts established or continued by authority of the Central Government or the Crown Representative in the territories of any foreign Prince or State. — The words "the Central Government or the Crown representative" have been substituted for the words "the Governor-General in Council" by the Adaptation of Indian Laws Order, 1937. The Court of the Political Agent at Sikkim is situated in a foreign territory and was held to be a Court "established or continued by the authority of the Governor-General in Council" within the meaning of this Section, and a decree of that Court was held executable by a British Indian Court.¹ The Court of the Dewan Ahilkar of Cooch Behar is situated in a foreign territory but was not established or continued by the authority of the Governor-General in Council.² The Court of the Native Commissioners of Kondh situated within the family domains of the Maharajah of Benares was held to be a Court established by the authority of the Governor-General, though not situated in foreign territory as the family domains of the Maharajah of Benares are in British India. This Section does not therefore apply to the execution of the decrees of such Court.³

4. Limitation applicable to foreign decrees. — See Section 44.

44. The Provincial Government may by notification in the Official Gazette declare that the decrees of any Civil or Revenue Courts in any Indian State, not being Courts established or continued by the authority of the Central Government or of the Crown Representative; or any class of such decrees, may be executed in the Province as if they had been passed by Courts of British India.^a of notification under this Section to the Governor-General in Council whereas under the new Section the power is given to the Provincial Government. Again, the previous Section applied to Courts situated in the territories of any Native Prince or State in alliance with His Majesty whereas the new Section refers to Courts situated in any "Indian State."

2. Scope of the Section. — This Section applies to a particular class of foreign Courts, namely those situated within the territories of any "Native Prince or State" while Section 43 applies to British Courts situated in the territories of "any foreign Prince or State."

3. Notifications. — See General Statutory Rules and Orders, Vol. I, pages 622-625, Vol. III, p. 475 (Edition 3),¹ Vol. IV, pp. 682, 683 and 685 and Sup. Vol. I, pp. 775-781.² See also Notification No. 170—I of Government of India, dated 23rd March, 1927.

4. British Indian Courts, if and when can refuse to execute foreign decrees. — A decree of a Native State notified under this Section does not thereby cease to be a foreign decree.¹ The Section merely alters the procedure for enforcing the foreign judgment of a Native State.² It does not bar any objections being raised in execution which are open in suits on foreign judgments.³ Thus the judgment-debtor is not precluded from questioning the jurisdiction of the Court passing the decree⁴ or from objecting that the decree was obtained by fraud.⁵

A British Indian Court is not bound under this Section to order execution of the decree in all cases.^{5a} It can refuse to execute the decree not only on the grounds specified in Sections 13 and 14^{5b} but also on the other valid grounds as well.⁶

When foreign decrees are sought to be executed in British Indian Courts, as an invariable rule notice ought to be issued to show cause against execution.⁷

by which the decrees of Indian States could be executed in Burma.¹ By para. 9 of the Burma Laws Adaptation Order, 1937 and Sections 148 and 149 of the Government of Burma Act, the said notifications will be in force even after the separation of Burma on 1st April 1937, unless altered or repealed by the Legislature or other competent authority. Consequently it was held in the undermentioned case² that the decree of a Court in the Pudukkottah State, in respect of which a notification under this Section had been issued, could be executed by the Courts in Burma.

6. Limitation and procedure. — The rules as to limitation and procedure applicable to the execution of a decree of a foreign Court, are those prescribed by the law of British India and not those prescribed by that of the foreign State.¹ See also the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Section 11 Note 2 and Article 182, Note 95.

44 A. ^a(1) Where a certified copy of a decree of any of the superior Courts of the United Kingdom or any reciprocating territory has been filed in a District Court, the decree may be executed in British India as if it had been passed by the District Court.

(2) Together with the certified copy of the decree shall be filed a certificate from such superior Court stating the extent, if any, to which the decree has been satisfied or adjusted and such certificate shall, for the purposes of proceedings under this section, be conclusive proof of the extent of such satisfaction or adjustment.

(3) The provisions of section 47 shall as from the filing of the certified copy of the decree apply to the proceedings of a District Court executing a decree under this section, and the District Court shall refuse execution of any such decree, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the decree falls within any of the exceptions specified in clauses (a) to (f) of section 13.

Explanation 1. — “Superior Courts,” with reference to the United Kingdom, means the High Court in England, the Court of Session in Scotland, the High Court in Northern Ireland, the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster and the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Durham.

Explanation 2.—“Reciprocating territory” means any country, or territory, situated in any part of His Majesty’s Dominions ^{b* * *} which the “[Central Government] may, from time to time, by notification in the “[Official Gazette], declare to be reciprocating territory for the purposes of this section; and “superior Courts”, with reference to any such territory, means such Courts as may be specified in the said notification.

Explanation 3.—“Decree”, with reference to a superior Court, means any decree or judgment of such Court under which a sum of money is payable, not being a sum payable in respect of taxes or other charges of a like nature or in respect of a fine or other penalty, and—

- (a) with reference to superior Courts in the United Kingdom, includes judgments given and decrees made in any Court in appeals against such decrees or judgments, but
- (b) in no case includes an arbitration award, even if such award is enforceable as a decree or judgment.

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Section. | 2. Explanation 3.

1. Scope and object of the Section.—Under the Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933, provision is made for the extension of Part I of the Act by Order in Council to His Majesty’s Dominions outside the United Kingdom and also for the specification by such Order in Council of the Courts which shall be deemed to be “superior Courts” within the meaning of the Act. On the Act being extended to British India, the decrees of the Courts in British India which may be deemed to be “superior Courts” for the purpose of the Act may be executed in the United Kingdom. This Section is intended to reciprocate the policy contained in the above Act and to be part of a reciprocal arrangement under which on the one part decrees of British Indian Courts should be executable in the United Kingdom and on the other, decrees of Courts in the United Kingdom and other notified areas should be executable in British India.¹

2. Explanation 3.—This Explanation has been added to the Section with two objects in view, viz., to include a Court of Appeal in the United Kingdom among “superior Courts” and to define decrees so as to assimilate the meaning of the term to that applicable to the corresponding British statute (Section 10, Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933).¹

45. So much of the foregoing sections of this Part as empowers a Court to send a decree for execution to another Court shall be construed as empowering a Court in any Province to send a decree for execution to any Court established or continued by the authority of the Central Government or of the Crown Representative in the territories of any foreign Prince or State to which the Provincial Government has by notification in the Official Gazette declared this section to apply.

1. Execution of decrees of British Indian Courts in foreign territory.
2. Notifications.
3. "Any foreign Prince or State."
4. Step-in-aid of execution.

1. Execution of decrees of British Indian Courts in foreign territory. —

This Section deals with cases converse to those dealt with by Sections 43 and 44. It deals with the execution of decrees of British Indian Courts in foreign territory. But in order to send a decree of a British Indian Court for execution in foreign territory it is necessary that the transferee Court should be one —

1. which is established or continued by the Governor-General in Council in such foreign territory, and

2. to which the Governor-General in Council has, by notification, declared this Section to apply.¹

In the absence of either of these conditions a British Indian Court has no jurisdiction to send its decrees for execution to a Court not situate in British India.² The reason why the Code is silent as to the execution of decrees of British Indian Courts by the Courts of Native States is that the Indian Legislature has no power to legislate for foreign Courts.³ But by treaty arrangements decrees of British Indian Courts may be executed in Courts of Native States.⁴

2. Notifications.—See General Statutory Rules and Orders, Vol. I, pp. 618 to 621. This Section applies to Arakan Hills. See Arakan Hills District Laws Regulation, 1916 (I of 1916), Schedule I.

3. "Any foreign Prince or State."—The Courts contemplated by this Section are Courts in the Native Indian States in alliance with the British Government.¹

4. Step-in-aid of execution. — As to whether an application to a British Indian Court to send its decree to the Court of a Native State between which and the British Courts reciprocity prevails, is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution, see the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Article 182, Note 107.

(2) The Court to which a precept is sent shall proceed to attach the property in the manner prescribed in regard to the attachment of property in execution of a decree:

Provided that no attachment under a precept shall continue for more than two months unless the period of attachment is extended by an order of the Court which passed the decree or unless before the determination of such attachment the decree has been transferred to the Court by which the attachment has been made and the decree-holder has applied for an order for the sale of such property.

QUESTIONS TO BE DETERMINED BY COURT EXECUTING DECREE

47. [S. 244.] (1) All questions⁴ arising⁶ between the parties⁷ to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives,¹⁷ and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree,²⁸ shall be determined⁷³ by the Court executing the decree⁷⁴ and not by a separate suit.⁷²

(2) The Court may, subject to any objection as to limitation⁸³ or jurisdiction, treat a proceeding under this section as a suit or a suit as a proceeding⁸² and may, if necessary, order payment of any additional court-fees.

(3) Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the representative of a party, such question shall, for the purposes of this section, be determined by the Court.²⁷

Explanation. — For the purposes of this section, a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed and a defendant against whom a suit has been dismissed,⁸ are parties to the suit.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section.— This Section, like Section 11, has been enacted for the purpose of checking needless litigation¹ and with a view to enable parties to obtain adjudication of questions relating to execution without unnecessary expense or delay, which a fresh trial might entail.² The rule of res judicata, however, deals with the finality of a decision of a Court on matters actually or constructively in issue before it and bars a fresh trial of any kind of such questions in subsequent proceedings between the parties; while Section 47 deals with the enforcement of such decisions and enacts that the questions specified in the Section shall be tried in execution and not by a separate suit.³ In other words, where there is an executable judgment, no suit lies for the enforcement thereof, or for the determination of the questions specified in the Section.⁴ The object of the Section being to save unnecessary expense and delay and to afford finally relief to parties cheaply and speedily without the necessity of a fresh suit,⁵ it must be construed as liberally as the language would reasonably admit of.⁶ It embraces all matters connected with the execution of an existing decree, between the parties or their representatives and covers all questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.⁷ It does not matter whether such questions arise before or after the decree has been executed⁸ and the fact that an alternative remedy by suit is provided in certain circumstances⁹ or that an application was made under another provision of the Code,¹⁰ does not prevent the Section from being applied for the decision of the questions falling within its scope. The Section does not make any distinction between a money decree and a mortgage decree¹¹ or between the Court which passed the decree and the Court executing it, inasmuch as both qualifications may be possessed by the same Court.¹²

But in order that the Section may apply, the following two conditions must be satisfied :

1. The question must be one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree is passed, or their representatives, and
2. it must relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.¹³
See Notes 4 and 28 infra.

The Section applies to the execution of decrees of the Privy Council.^{13a}

The Section does not apply to the decrees of foreign Courts¹⁴ or to the Ganjam and Vizagapatam Agency Tracts.¹⁵

3. Applicability to proceedings under other Acts. — It has been seen in Note 2 above that in order that Section 47 may apply, one of the essential requisites is that the question must relate to execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree. Where, therefore, an order passed in proceedings under the provisions of other Acts is enforceable under the provisions of those Acts as if it were a decree, Section 47

will apply.¹ Thus, it has been held that an award filed under Section 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act, being under Section 15 enforceable as if it were a decree; Section 47 will apply to proceedings in execution thereof.² As to cases of orders under other Acts which are not enforceable as decrees and to which Section 47 does not apply, see the undermentioned cases.³

Before the enactment of the present Code, and the incorporation therein of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act relating to orders absolute for sale or foreclosure of mortgaged property, the question arose whether, when such an order absolute has been made, any question that may arise as to such an order is not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of Section 244 of the old Code. There was a conflict of opinion on the matter among the several High Courts.⁴ The question is not of any importance now under the present Code.

4. Question must be one arising 'between the parties' to the suit in which the decree is passed or their representatives. — This, as has been said before, is one of the essential conditions for the applicability of the Section. The words 'between the parties' do not necessarily mean parties on opposite sides as plaintiff and defendant, but mean parties opposed to each other in the suit.¹ See Note 5 below; 'Parties arrayed on the same side.' Where a question for decision does not arise between the parties to the suit as explained above or their representatives, it cannot be decided under this Section.² On the other hand, all questions that arise between such parties or their representatives and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree must be decided under this Section and not by a separate suit.³

The Section does not confer on the decree-holder any right of proceeding in execution against persons who are not judgment-debtors under the decree except as provided by Section 50, infra.⁴ As to whether a representative not falling under Section 50 can be made a party to the execution proceedings either by the Court suo motu or on his own application, see Notes to O. 22 R. 10. 5. Parties arrayed on the same side. — The words 'between the parties' do not, as has been seen already, necessarily mean parties ranged on opposite sides as plaintiff and defendant but mean parties opposed to each other in the suit.¹ Thus, in a partition suit, parties who are co-defendants are often arrayed against each other. In such a case a question between them relating to the execution of the decree may fall within Section 47.² But it is necessary that the opposite side should be interested in the question raised between parties on the same side. Thus, a dispute between joint decree-holders will be a dispute 'between parties' if the judgment-debtor is interested in such dispute but not otherwise.³⁻⁴ Similarly, a dispute between co-judgment-debtors will be a dispute between parties if the judgment-creditor is interested in such dispute⁵ but not otherwise.⁶

1. A obtains a mortgage decree in respect of four items against B and C, B being a subsequent mortgagee of items 1, 2 and 4 and C the purchaser of item 3 after A's mortgage. B applies that item 3 should be sold first and that items 1, 2 and 4 should be sold only if the proceeds of the sale of item 3 prove insufficient to discharge the decree. Is the question thus raised between B and C a question 'between the parties to the suit?' Yes, inasmuch as the question is one affecting the decree-holder's right in execution.⁷

2. A obtains a money decree against B and C and a receiver is appointed in execution to recover the decree-amount from out of certain properties belonging to B and C. After a certain portion of the decree-amount is thus recovered, C pays up the balance thus completely discharging the decree. B thereupon applies for delivery of the property in the hands of the receiver, jointly to B and C and not to C alone as claimed by the latter. Here the decree having been satisfied, the decree-holder has absolutely no interest in the dispute between B and C. The question is therefore not one "between the parties to the suit" and Section 47 does not apply.⁸

3. A and B obtain a joint decree against C. By virtue of an alleged power of attorney by B in favour of A, the latter applies to execute the whole decree to the exclusion of B. Here the

47 judgment-debtor C is in no way interested in the solution of the dispute between A and B and the question is not therefore one "between the parties to the suit."⁹

The High Court of Allahabad and the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Nagpur have, however, held that a question is not within Section 47 unless it is one between parties ranged on opposite sides as decree-holder and judgment-debtor.^{9a} It is submitted that this view is not correct.

A question between two rival decree-holders for rateable distribution of the assets of a judgment-debtor or for other reliefs is not a question between the parties to any suit inasmuch as neither of them was a party to the suit brought by the other.¹⁰ If, however, the question raised between them affects the judgment-debtor, the question will be one also between the decree-holder who raises the question and the judgment-debtor, that is, between the parties to the suit.¹¹ A question between a party and his own representative is not one between the parties to a suit.¹² Similarly, a dispute as between the representatives of the same party will not fall within this Section.^{12a}

Where a decree gives two independent reliefs against two sets of defendants, one set cannot be considered parties to the suit in any question relating to the execution of that portion of the decree that arises between the decree-holder and the other set of defendants.¹³

6. "Arising," meaning of.—The words 'all questions arising' should be read as meaning 'all questions directly arising.'¹ Further they do not mean only such questions as are actually raised in the execution proceedings; for if it were so, a party, by not raising a particular question in execution proceedings, might retain the right to bring a separate suit in order to agitate that question. The words only mean that the questions must be such as would relate to or affect the rights of parties to the suit.² The words 'arising between the parties to the suit' contemplate their having continued to be parties to the suit up to the stage at which the question arises.³ In other words, they indicate that the person raising the question should be either a party or a representative of the party to the suit at the time when the question is raised.⁴

7. "Parties to the suit," meaning of.—Except where a person sues or is sued in a representative capacity,¹ the expression 'parties to the suit' is restricted to de facto parties admitted rightly or wrongly as parties on the record.² A person against whom no relief is claimed and no decree is passed but who has been impleaded as a party to the suit must be deemed to be a party to the suit within the meaning of the Section.^{2a} A person, whose name is not on the record as a party at the time the decree is passed, does not become a party by acquiring, subsequent to the decree, an interest in the disputed property,³ or by applying for execution,⁴ or by objecting to a sale in execution.⁵ On the other hand, a party on the record does not cease to be a party because he is not impleaded as a party in the appeal in which the final decree was passed.⁶ A party, however, whose name is struck off from the record, ceases to be a be only deemed to be parties in the capacity in which they were so represented. They can in no sense be deemed to be parties in any other capacity, especially if such capacity is adverse to the person who represented them.²² Thus, where the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad is sued as representing the tarwad, the other members of the tarwad will be represented by the karnavan merely in respect of their interests as members of the tarwad; in their individual capacity, they cannot be represented by the karnavan and cannot be deemed to be parties to the suit constructively.²³

In the undermentioned case,²⁴ it was held that where certain persons are sued as the legal representatives of a deceased person and a decree is obtained against them, another person who also claims to be a legal representative of the deceased cannot be regarded as a party to the suit.

Where a person is impleaded as a party to a suit in one capacity and he raises in execution proceedings an objection in a different capacity, such objection will not fall within this Section.²⁵

8. Plaintiff whose suit is dismissed and defendant against whom suit is dismissed — Explanation. — Under the old Code, there was a conflict of opinion as to whether such a person was a party to the suit, the Allahabad¹ and Calcutta² High Courts holding that he was not and the High Courts of Bombay,³ Madras⁴ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur⁵ holding that he was. The conflict has now been set at rest by the addition of the Explanation to the Section. Under the present Code, therefore, a plaintiff, whose suit has been dismissed and a defendant against whom a suit has been dismissed are nevertheless parties to the suit for the purpose of this Section.⁶

Even under the present Code, a difference of opinion has arisen as to whether a party who has been exonerated from the suit on the ground of misjoinder of parties, but whose name has not been actually struck off from the record is a party to the suit for the purposes of the Section. It has been held by the High Court of Madras⁷ that where a Court finds that a party has been improperly impleaded, resulting in a misjoinder of parties, the proper procedure is to strike out the name of the party from the record and that the mere fact that the Court failed to do its duty but merely "exonerated" such party from the suit or dismissed the suit against him cannot place the party in a worse position than a party in respect of whom the Court does adopt the correct procedure; a party, therefore, who is exonerated from the suit, or against whom the suit is dismissed on the ground of misjoinder of parties, is in the same position as if his name is struck off from the record and is not a party to the suit within the meaning of Section 47. The High Court of Rangoon has followed the view of the High Court of Madras.⁸ See also the undermentioned cases of the other High Courts.^{8a} On the same principle it has been held that where a person has been properly impleaded as a party, but the plaintiff does not wish to proceed against him or is unable to prove his claim against him, the proper procedure is to dismiss the suit against him and not to strike out his name from the record. If, however, his name is wrongly "struck off," it has been held by the High Court of Madras that, he nevertheless does not cease to be a party to the suit.⁹ But the High Court of Lahore has taken a contrary view and has held that in such a case the question whether this Section applies or not must be determined with regard to the order on the form as actually framed, viz., striking off and not with regard to the form in which it should have been framed.^{9a} It is proper for the executing Court, when such questions arise, to consider not only the decree itself but the judgment and the pleadings also and see whether, upon the facts of the case, the parties, though the suit was dismissed against them, remained parties to the suit.¹⁰

8a. Person against whom suit abates.— In the undermentioned case,¹ a person was added as a defendant to the suit. But, on his death, his legal representatives were not brought on the record. It was held that such legal representatives could not be impleaded as joint judgment-debtors in the execution proceedings.

9. Surety under Section 145.— Under Section 145, a surety against whom execution has been taken out is a party within the meaning of Section 47 only for *the purposes of appeal.*¹ Beyond this he cannot be deemed to be a party within the Section.² Hence, if he seeks to get his bond cancelled on the ground of fraud,^{2a} or applies for discharge on the fulfilment of the condition imposed,³ he can proceed only by way of suit and not under Section 47.

The surety can be proceeded against either by way of execution⁴ or by a suit;⁵ but if he is proceeded against in execution, he becomes a judgment-debtor and must contest his liability in the execution proceeding itself.⁶

Under the old Code a person who became a surety after the decree was passed was held not to be a party so as to attract the remedy by way of execution.⁷ But now the distinction no longer holds good.

10. Government in proceedings under Order 33. — Under the Code of 1882, it was held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the Government in proceedings relating to pauper suits was not a party to the suit within Section 47.¹ The Allahabad High Court, on the other hand held a contrary view.² Order 33 Rule 13 was newly added in the present Code to set this conflict at rest. Under that Rule, it is provided that all matters arising between the Government and any party to the suit under Rules 10, 11 or 12 of Order 33, "shall be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of Section 47." A Collector applying under Order 33 for payment of court-fee in pauper suits is now a party within Section 47 and an order on his application is one under the Section.³

whether he can be proceeded against in execution under Section 145 of the Code as a surety. If he can be so proceeded against, the principles mentioned in Note 9 above will apply. Otherwise they will not apply. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether he can be proceeded against under Section 145 as a surety, for which see Note 4 to Section 145, infra.

12. Unnecessary party. — See Note 8 above.

13. Intervenor. — An intervenor who is impleaded as a party will, of course, be a party to the suit within the meaning of Section 47.¹ But a person who pays down money to avoid an attachment of his properties wrongly identified as the judgment-debtor's is not a party and cannot claim his money back in execution under this Section.²

14. Trespassers. — The word "parties" in the Section, as has been seen in Note 7 above, means parties to the suit and on the record. So, a third party who, at the instigation of the judgment-debtor, obstructs the decree-holder in getting possession of the property,¹ or who violates the rights of the attaching decree-holder by cutting and carrying away the crops on the attached land,² is not a party to the suit within the meaning of the Section, and consequently a claim for possession or for damages against such person must be enforced only by way of suit and not in execution.

15. Party sued in a representative capacity. — A person actually made a party to a suit cannot be said to be not a party thereto merely because he is sued in a representative capacity.¹ On the other hand, his right in every capacity, whether representative or individual, must be deemed to be the rights of a party to the suit within the meaning of Section 47 and should be determined in execution and not by a separate suit.²

As regards the position of persons who were represented by a party to the suit, see Note 7, above.

16. Questions as to who is a party can be decided by the executing Court. — When, during the execution of a decree, the question arises as to who is a party to the suit or whether a person is such a party, the executing Court can and should itself decide the question. Thus, where an objection is taken that a certain person was not a party to the suit at the time of decree and therefore it is not open to the executing Court to issue process against his legal representative, the executing Court can and must determine the question under the Section.¹ Similarly, where a decree has been obtained by a benamidar and execution is sought to be obtained by the true owner and the judgment-debtor challenges the ownership of the latter, the question as to who is the party to the suit, within the meaning of the Section, entitled "To determine, therefore, whether a particular person is a representative of a party to the suit, the two tests to be applied are, first, whether any portion of the interest of the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor, which was originally vested in one of the parties to the suit, has, by act of parties or by operation of law, vested in the person who is sought to be treated as representative, and, secondly, if there has been any devolution of interest, whether, so far as such interest is concerned, that person is bound by the decree."

It is not necessary that the transfer of the interest should be after decree; it may be before or after decree.⁶ Thus, a transferee of property during the pendency of suit concerning that property will be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and will be bound by the decree; he will therefore be a representative of the party whose interest has been transferred.⁷

The following persons have been held to be representatives of parties within the meaning of this Section —

- (a) A devisee of the decree-holder.⁸
- (b) A legatee⁹ or universal donee.^{9a}
- (c) A person taking the judgment-debtor's share in joint property by survivorship.¹⁰
- (d) A second-mortgagee defendant paying off the first-mortgagee plaintiff and stepping into his shoes.¹¹⁻¹²

- (a) An unrecorded co-sharer in a tenancy is not a representative of the recorded tenant.¹³
- (b) A rival decree-holder is not a representative of the judgment-debtor.¹⁴

Chief Court of Oudh⁹ and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur¹⁰ are conflicting: some, holding that he is a representative of the judgment-debtor; others, holding that he is not a representative of any of the parties, and yet others, holding that he is a representative of the decree-holder. It is submitted that the first mentioned view is correct on principle. The purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree is a representative of the mortgagor.^{10a} There is a conflict of decisions as to whether such a purchaser is a representative of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee. It has been held, in the undermentioned cases,¹¹ that a sale under a mortgage decree passes to the purchaser, the interests of the mortgagor as well as of the mortgagee, and that the purchaser is, consequently, the representative of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee. In a recent Full Bench case of the Allahabad High Court, Sulaiman, C. J., has, however, expressed the view that the auction-purchaser does not purchase the mortgagee's interest also in the execution sale, but gets the mortgagee's right by virtue of the doctrine of subrogation.^{11a} It is submitted that the former view is correct. Whether, in any particular case, he is to be considered the representative of the judgment-debtor or of the decree-holder, is a question which depends upon the nature of the dispute involved in the enquiry.

Illustrations

1. In execution of a money-decree obtained by A, B purchased the property of the judgment-debtor. The sale was set aside on an application by the judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 90, and the purchase money returned to B. On appeal, however, the lower Court's order was reversed, and the sale was confirmed. B having failed to return the purchase money, A filed a suit against B for the recovery of the purchase money. Held, that the suit was barred by this Section. Rahim Uddin v. Ram Lal, I. L. R. 27 Allahabad 155.

2. A executed five mortgage-deeds hypothecating different portions of his property in favour of M. M brought a suit on foot of all the mortgages and obtained a consolidated decree for sale for the whole amount. After obtaining an order absolute, M applied for sale of the properties in execution. Meanwhile, G, the plaintiff who had purchased a portion of the properties in execution of a simple money decree against R objected to the sale but his objection was disallowed. He, thereupon, brought the present suit for the determination of the same question. Held, that the suit was barred by this Section. Guljari Lal v. Madho Ram, I. L. R. 26 Allahabad 447 (F. B.).

In the first of the above cases, it will be seen that B is the representative of the judgment-debtor and the question of the return of the purchase money is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree. The question is, therefore, one falling within Section 47 and a separate suit is barred. In the case mentioned in illustration 2 above, C having purchased the interest of B, is his representative, and the question raised by him is one relating to the execution of the decree. Section 47 therefore applies and the suit is barred. So far, the case of a stranger purchaser has been dealt with. Where, however, the decree-holder himself becomes the purchaser in execution of a decree obtained by him, it has been held by the High Courts of Madras¹² and Calcutta,¹³ the Chief Court of Oudh¹⁴ and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Nagpur¹⁵ and Sind,^{15a} that he retains his character of a party to the suit and does not divest himself of his character as such by reason of his having become the purchaser. A question therefore arising between the decree-holder-purchaser and the judgment-debtor in respect of the purchase, is, according to this view, one "between the parties to the suit." On the other hand, the High Courts of Allahabad,¹⁶ Bombay,¹⁷ Lahore¹⁸ and Patna¹⁹ hold that there is no distinction between a decree-holder-purchaser and a stranger purchaser and that the fact of his being a party to the suit is only an accident which will not have the effect of making his position better or worse than that of a stranger purchaser. The observations of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case²⁰ seem to support the view of the Madras and Calcutta High Courts though it is not clear from the report of the decision that this aspect of the question was before their Lordships' mind. But, where the representative character of the decree-holder-purchaser comes in question in a distinct proceeding, his character as decree-holder in one execution proceeding can have no effect on his position in another and he will be in the same position as that of a stranger purchaser.²¹

In applying the principles stated above to cases of disputes between the auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor arising in proceedings relating to delivery of possession, two questions may arise—

- (1) whether an appeal will lie from an order in such an enquiry, and
- (2) whether the dispute can be agitated in a separate suit.

The answer to the questions depends upon whether the question is one "between the parties," and, secondly, whether it relates to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. All the Courts are agreed that, where the purchaser is a stranger, he can, apart from the summary remedy provided by O. 21 Rr. 95-102, agitate the matter in a separate suit and that if he avails himself of such summary remedy, no appeal would lie from an order passed in such proceedings.²² The reason is that if the purchaser is not at all a representative of the judgment-debtor (as has been held in some decisions referred to above), the question is not one between the parties, and, even if he is a representative of the judgment-debtor, still, the question is only one between the judgment-debtor and his representatives, and consequently, is not one "between the parties." See Note 7. But when the decree-holder is the purchaser, the question is one "between the parties." Further, according to the High Courts of Madras²³ and Calcutta²⁴ and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Nagpur,²⁵ Sind²⁶ and Peshawar^{20a} a question relating to delivery of possession is one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. They proceed on the view that, so far as the decree-holder is concerned, his decree cannot be said to be satisfied until he has either obtained the sale proceeds or possession of the property which represent the money for which he obtained his decree. The High Courts of Allahabad,²⁷ Bombay,²⁸ Patna,²⁹ Lahore³⁰ and Rangoon³¹ and the Chief Court of Oudh³² hold, on the other hand, that, upon the judgment-debtor's property being sold and the amount due under the decree being realised, the decree is fully executed, and the question relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree remains to be considered, and, that, whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold, is wholly immaterial for the purposes of the decree. The result is that, according to the former view, where a decree-holder purchases the property in court-auction, his remedy for recovery of possession from the judgment-debtor is only by way of an application under O. 21, R. 95, and a separate suit would be barred. Also, an order passed in execution upon a question relating to delivery of possession between himself and the judgment-debtor would be appealable as a decree under Section 96 read with Section 2 clause (2). According to the latter view, the purchaser has an additional remedy by way of suit and no appeal would lie from an order passed in execution proceedings with respect to a dispute between the purchaser and the judgment-debtor either on the view that it is not a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree or on the view that the matter is not one between the parties or their representatives. Where the decree-holder purchases obtains possession under the sale and is thereafter dispossessed again by the judgment-debtor, a suit for possession by the decree-holder is not barred under this Section, inasmuch as the matter in dispute in such a case arises after the satisfaction of the decree.³² A dispute between the decree-holder purchaser and a third party in possession will not come within this Section.³¹ As to cases in which the auction-purchaser is interested in a dispute between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, see Note 49, infra.

As to cases in which the auction-purchaser is interested in a dispute between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, see Note §9, infra.

20. Transferee from auction-purchaser. — The High Courts of Calcutta¹ and Madras² have held that a transferee from a degree-holder purchaser is a representative of the degree-holder. A contrary view has been held by the Chief Court of Lower Burma.³ The High Court of Madras has also held in the undermentioned case⁴ that the purchaser from a degree-holder purchaser under a money decree is the representative of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of an enquiry into a question relating to the execution of a distinct decree affecting the same property.

21. Transferee from a party. — The term 'representative' includes, as has been seen already in Note 17 above, the transferee of the interest of a party who, so far as such interest is concerned is bound by the decree. A transferee from a party may be bound by the decree against such party, on any of the following grounds and will consequently be his representative within the meaning of Section 47 —

(1) Where the suit is one in which any right to immovable property is

(1) Where the suit is one in which any right to immovable property is directly and specifically in question and the transferee gets a transfer of such property pendente lite,¹ See Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It was, however, held by Mr. Justice Oldfield in the undermentioned case,^{1a} that where it is found in the suit that the transferee had no title at all which he could transfer, the transferee pendente lite is not his representative. Mr. Justice Ramesam dissented from this view. It is submitted that the view of Mr. Justice Oldfield cannot be supported on principle. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a transferee pendente lite cannot be a representative of the transferor within the meaning of Section 47 for the purpose of attacking the decree-holder's right to sue.^{1b}

deposits the value of the portion sold in Court under Section 6 of the Tenancy Act and obtains possession. C is not the representative of S in respect of a decree obtained by M against S and others in respect of his mortgage, inasmuch as, on the deposit under the Tenancy Act, the mortgage attaches to the deposited amount and not to the property transferred.⁸

22. Purchaser from party to suit in which injunction has been granted affecting such property.—A purchaser of property from a party to a suit in which an injunction has been granted affecting such property is not the representative of that party inasmuch as the injunction does not run with the land and the purchaser cannot claim the benefit of the order of injunction.¹

23. Official Assignee or Official Receiver.—The Official Assignee or Official Receiver, claiming property on behalf of the creditors of an insolvent judgment-debtor is not a "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Section.¹ See also Note 58 to Section 11.

A receiver in insolvency may represent both the creditors and the insolvent according to the circumstances of the case.^{1a}

23a. Liquidator of company.—The liquidator of a co-operative society claiming priority over a mortgagee of the judgment-debtor who has obtained a decree on the mortgage and is seeking to execute the decree is not a representative of the judgment-debtor and an order of the executing Court allowing the claim of such liquidator is not one under this Section.¹

24. Transferee of decree.—Under O. 21 R. 16, the transferee of a decree, by assignment in writing, or by operation of law, may apply to execute the decree and the decree may be executed in the same manner as if the application were made by the decree-holder. The transferee in such a case is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of Section 47.¹ So is a transferee from such a

30. Question as to the existence of the decree.—It has been seen in Note 8 to Section 38 ante, that a question of territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree cannot be allowed to be raised in execution proceedings,^{1a} but that a question as to jurisdiction of the Court in other matters rendering the decree a nullity can be entertained even by the executing Court. Thus, a question whether a decree is a nullity and not in existence by reason of the fact that it was passed by a Court without jurisdiction¹ or that it was passed against a dead person,²⁻³ is a question which can be entertained in execution. Similarly, the executing Court can see whether the decree to be executed is a subsisting and operative decree capable of execution.⁴ Similarly, again, the executing Court can, in a case where a decree is lost or destroyed, find out what are the terms of the decree or whether the decree was in existence.⁵ See Note 8 to Section 38 ante for a full discussion.

It has been held that the want of proper representation of a minor against whom a decree has been passed cannot be gone into by the Court executing such decree,^{6a} the reason being that the decree is not a nullity in such cases.

But, though the executing Court can go into the question of jurisdiction or of the existence of the decree, the question cannot be regarded as one "relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction, of the decree" within the meaning of Section 47 and the refusal of the executing Court to execute the decree on the ground of want of jurisdiction will not bar a separate suit by the aggrieved party or operate as res judicata.⁶

31. Pre-decree matters.—There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether a Court executing a decree can, under this Section, entertain an objection to the date of the decree. The High Courts of Calcutta,¹ Lahore² and Rangoon³ and the Judicial Commissioners' Court of Nagpur⁴ have held that it cannot. The High Courts of Allahabad⁵ and Bombay⁶ have held broadly that it can. The High Court of Madras has expressed divergent views on the question. One group of cases hold that an agreement postponing the execution of a decree for a time is a matter that can be gone into in execution, notwithstanding the fact that the effect of postponing execution will be virtually to vary the terms of the decree.⁷ This view is based mainly on the long course of decisions in the Madras Presidency to that effect. Another group of cases hold that except in cases of agreements relating to execution,⁸ a pre-decree arrangement which attacks the decree itself cannot be gone into in execution on the broad ground that it would be most dangerous to allow the decree itself to be attacked in execution.⁹ It is submitted with respect that the first of the two views of the Madras High Court is not correct on principle. If an executing Court cannot go behind the decree, i.e., cannot vary, add to or alter its terms, but must execute the decree as it stands, then it cannot deal with a pre-decree arrangement as to its execution, etc., which must necessarily have the effect of varying the decree to some extent. Further, Section 47 speaks of questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. The words "the decree" refer to the decree passed by the Court and of which the decree-holder is seeking execution and not any decree as agreed to by parties.

been taken⁹ in execution, or where the decree is vague and indefinite,⁹ or where the decree becomes incapable of execution by events subsequent to the decree,¹⁰ or where the decree is fully executed,¹¹ or where a fresh suit is ordered,¹² the remedy is only by way of suit and not an application under this Section, the decree in all these cases being incapable of execution. Scheme-decrees under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code, generally are declaratory, but it cannot be laid down as a general rule that all scheme-decrees are always declaratory and can never be executable. The question whether a decree framing a scheme is executable or not depends upon the language and on the scope of the decree or of that particular part of the decree in respect of which the question arises. Such a decree may, in part, be declaratory, and, in part, be declaratory.¹³ Directions in such a decree are matters intended to be enforced in execution.¹⁴ Otherwise, where it is merely declaratory, it cannot be enforced under Section 47 in execution.¹⁵

38. Decree incapable of execution.—As has been seen in Note 2 ante, this Section bars a suit to enforce an executable judgment. But to admit of an application under the Section, the decree must not only be subsisting or in course of execution but also be one capable of being executed¹ and the question whether a decree is capable or incapable of execution is, as has been seen in Note 30 ante, pre-eminently one coming under this Section² and a decision on such a question is a decree.³ A decree which merely declares the rights of parties and does not direct any act to be done, in other words, a decree in which no definite order is made which the Court contemplates enforcing by execution, is merely a declaratory decree which is incapable of being executed and only a separate suit and not an application under this Section will lie to enforce the rights so declared by the decree.⁴ Similarly, a decree which does not provide for a certain relief though it declares a right to such relief is one not capable of being executed.⁵ Thus, a partition decree without actually allotting shares or a decree for joint possession is incapable of being executed; a suit, and not an application under Section 47, is the proper remedy to obtain a partition by metes and bounds.⁶ So also, where a relief could not be obtained, or an objection could not have been taken' in execution, or where the decree is vague and indefinite,⁹ or where the decree becomes incapable of execution by events subsequent to the decree,¹⁰ or where the decree is fully executed,¹¹ or where a fresh suit is ordered,¹² the remedy is only by way of suit and not an application under this Section, the decree in all these cases being incapable of execution. Scheme-decrees under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code, generally are declaratory, but it cannot be laid down as a general rule that all scheme-decrees are always declaratory and can never be executed. The question whether a decree framing a scheme is executable or not depends upon the language and on the scope of the decree or of that particular part of the decree in respect of which the question arises. Such a decree may, in part, be declaratory, and, in part, be declaratory.¹³ Directions in such a decree are matters intended to be enforced in execution.¹⁴ Otherwise, where it is merely declaratory, it cannot be enforced under Section 47 in execution.¹⁵

34. Questions arising between the preliminary and final decrees.—Where provision is made under the Code, as in suits on mortgage or for partition or for administration of an estate, for the passing of preliminary and final decrees, matters arising after, and out of, the preliminary decree, but before the final decree, are not matters relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of any decree, inasmuch as the matters in controversy in the suit are not completely disposed of, the only decree finally determining the suit and as such executable being the final decree. Thus, an order directing accounts to be taken in an administration suit,¹ or an order appointing or refusing to appoint a commissioner for effecting a partition in a partition suit,² or an order on an application for final decree,³ or for making absolute a decree nisi for sale, foreclosure or redemption of a mortgage,⁴ is an order passed in the suit itself and does not come under this Section. Where a preliminary decree for redemption in a mortgage suit is passed and allowed to be barred by time without the decree being made final, the Section is no bar to a fresh suit for redemption.⁵

decree," is sold to or taken possession of by the decree-holder, the proper remedy for the judgment-debtor to recover the whole or the excess land is by an application under this Section and not by a separate suit, as the matter is one in execution between the parties to the suit. Where, however, such possession is taken by the decree-holder, not through the officer of the Court but by his own act, the judgment-debtor is not barred by Section 47 from bringing a suit to recover land thus wrongly taken as the possession could not be said to have been taken in execution of a decree.³ Similarly, where monies are improperly realised by a third party in defiance of an order of injunction, the question is not one between the parties and is not within the Section.⁴ But monies unduly or wrongly realised by the decree-holder as due under a decree,⁵ or surplus sale-proceeds or jewels wrongly seized,⁶ or moveables misappropriated,⁷ are recoverable only under this Section and not by a separate suit. Similarly, where the decree-holder, who has realised smaller sums in full satisfaction owing to mistake or the misrepresentation of the judgment-debtor, wants to claim the balance, the question as to the deficient execution is one relating to the execution of the decree, and a separate suit in respect thereof is barred.⁸

36. Question of damages for acts done under cover of execution. — Where damages result from acts done under cover of execution proceedings, a separate suit for the recovery of such damages lies. The question is not one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree itself but is one outside the decree.¹

not recognised by the executing Court,⁸ or for damages for breach of an agreement against execution,⁹ or of a contract to enter up satisfaction of the decree.¹⁰

See O. 21 R. 2 for a full discussion of the whole matter.

41. Agreement against execution of decree.—In Note 31 above, agreements against execution entered into before the passing of the decree have been dealt with. Where, after the passing of the decree, the parties enter into an agreement against execution of the decree, the question whether such an agreement can be pleaded as a bar to execution depends upon the nature of the agreement and the intention of the parties. If it is clearly the intention of the parties to abandon the decree and to enter into a new and different contract in supersession of the decree, the contract may form the basis of a subsequent suit and the Section is no bar.¹ Where, however, the agreement does not so supersede the decree but is merely pleaded as a bar to execution, the executing Court can inquire into and decide the matter under the Section,² subject to the provisions of O. 21 R. 2, where such an agreement amounts to an adjustment of the decree.³ In Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Bind Bansi Kuer,⁴ their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

“ If it appears to the Court acting under Section 47 that the true effect of the agreement was to discharge the decree forthwith in consideration of certain promises by the debtor, then no doubt the Court will not have occasion to enforce the agreement in execution proceedings, but will leave the creditor to bring a separate suit upon the contract. If, on the other hand, the agreement is intended to govern the liability of the debtor under the decree and to have effect upon the time or manner of its enforcement, it is a matter to be dealt with under Section 47. In such a case, to say that the creditor may, perhaps, have a separate suit, is to misread the Code, which, by requiring all such matters to be dealt with in execution discloses a broader view of the scope and functions of an executing Court.”

42. Contribution among judgment-debtors.—Where one of two or more judgment-debtors purchases the decree in full¹ or in part,² or is compelled to pay the whole of the decree amount himself in execution,³ a suit by such judgment-debtor against others for contribution and recovery of his share of the common debt is not barred, as such a question cannot be said to relate to matters in execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree between the parties to the suit within the meaning of the Section. As regards the general right to sue for contribution of costs paid under a decree, see Note 34 to Section 35 ante.

43. Maladministration of estate of deceased judgment-debtor.—Where a decree-holder, unable to realise the decree amount out of the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor, raises a question as to the maladministration of the estate by the executors, the matter is one which involves a much wider question than one merely relating to the execution of the decree and cannot be decided under this Section. A suit will, therefore, lie against the executors for the administration of the estate and for an account on the footing of maladministration.⁴

44. Stay of execution.—Under the old Code, there was a difference of opinion as to whether a question of stay of execution of a decree is one relating to the execution of the decree, one group of cases holding that it is,¹ and another, that it is not.² In order to remove this conflict, the words "or to the stay of execution thereof" were inserted in clause (c) of Section 244 by Act VII of 1888, after which the trend of decisions was uniform in holding that such questions are within the Section.³ The words "or to the stay of execution thereof" were, however, omitted from Section 47 of this Code and the omission has again created a conflict of views in the various High Courts. Three such different views, at least, have been expressed—

(1) That the question of stay of execution is clearly a matter relating to the execution of the decree and that the decision on such a question is a decree and is therefore appealable.⁴

(2) That such a question is one relating to execution but that the decision thereon cannot be said to be one "on the rights of the parties" and consequently cannot amount to a decree and is therefore not appealable.⁵

(3) The question does not relate to execution at all within the meaning of this Section.⁶

The first two views proceed on the assumption that omission of the words in Section 47 by the Legislature was by reason of their being considered superfluous and a surplusage.⁷ The last view proceeds on the assumption that the omission was deliberate and intended to show that they should not be considered to be within the Section. It is submitted with respect that the last view is not correct. Reference to the history of the enactment is not a legitimate method of interpreting a Section where there is no ambiguity of any kind and there is nothing in the language of the Section itself that a stay of execution is not a matter relating to execution.

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that it is only where the order in question as to stay of execution is passed by the Court executing the decree that the matter will come under Section 47. An order for stay by the Appellate Court in an appeal from the decree is not one within Section 47.⁸

But such an objection preferred by a third party does not come within this Section²⁶ and a separate suit by him in respect thereof will not be barred.³ A person against whom a suit has been dismissed is a party to the suit within the meaning of this Section and hence, an objection by such person will be covered by this Section.^{3a} An objection raised by a judgment-debtor not in his private capacity but in a representative capacity as shewait of an idol on the ground of the property belonging to the idol, will be one by a stranger and not by a party to the suit and as such will not be covered by this Section.⁴ As to whether an order on such objection by a party, and therefore coming under the Section, is appealable as a decree, see Note 84 infra.

Where a puisne mortgagee who is impleaded as a party to a suit on a prior mortgage objects to the sale of the mortgaged property on the ground that it belongs to him, his objection being one which attacks the decree itself, does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree and hence is not covered by this Section.⁵ But an objection by him that the sale should not be unconditional so as to conclude his rights can be entertained by the executing Court under this Section.⁶

ground that the property is his own and not that of the debtor,¹ or that he has a charge or lien thereon,² the question is one in execution of the decree between a party and a representative of the opposite party and is within the Section. Where, in execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgaged properties are brought to sale, and the legal representative of the judgment-debtor or that it could not have been validly mortgaged by him, the objection is really one which attacks the decree itself which directs the sale of the properties. Such an objection, therefore, cannot be gone into by the executing Court, but should be raised in a separate suit.⁴ But, where in execution of a mortgage decree, properties not mortgaged are brought to sale as part of the mortgaged properties, the objection of the legal representative that such properties are his own properties will fall under this Section.⁵

47. Question, if debts were contracted without legal necessity or tainted with immorality or that the attached property is self-acquired or ancestral.—The question of the liability of a Hindu son for a debt contracted by the father and its binding nature upon him, the liability of the property of the father in the hands of the son,⁷ and the question as to whether the debt was contracted without legal necessity,⁸ are questions relating to the execution of the decree and must be determined under this Section. Similarly, the objection to the execution of the decree that the debts are tainted with immorality or illegality can be gone into in execution proceedings under this Section.⁹ The question whether the property is ancestral or self-acquired in the hands of the sons to satisfy their father's debts is again one

48. Question as to the transferability of the property proceeded against. — Where application is made to execute a decree for money by the attachment and sale of an occupancy holding, the judgment-debtor is entitled under this Section to raise the question that the holding is not saleable according to custom or usage and to have that question determined in execution proceedings.¹ See also Note 45 above.

51. Setting aside sales in execution.—As between the judgment-debtor and a decree-holder an objection to the sale in execution of the decree or an application to set it aside is one in execution and must be determined in execution and not by a separate suit.¹ But the power to set aside the sale, in cases where the grounds for so setting it aside fall within O. 21 Rr. 89, 90 or 91, is circumscribed by those provisions. To hold otherwise would be to render those provisions superfluous so far as parties to the suit or their representatives are concerned. An application to set aside a sale on grounds not within the purview of those provisions must be dealt with under this Section independently of those provisions.²

52. Decree obtained by fraud.—A question whether a decree was obtained by fraud or collusion is not one which relates to the execution of the decree but one which affects its very subsistence and validity and such a question can only be raised by a separate suit.¹ See also Note 29 supra and Section 38 Note 8. Therefore, where not only the sale is impugned as being fraudulent, but the very decree in execution of which the sale took place is impeached as having been obtained by fraud, the Section is not a bar to a suit to set aside the sale thereunder.²

53. Fraud in execution proceedings.—Where a judgment-debtor impeaches the validity of an execution sale, not on the ground of fraud in the publishing and conducting of the sale, but on the ground of fraud in execution proceedings which preceded and led up to the sale, the question, as between the parties, is one falling within this Section and not under O. 21 R. 90.¹

54. Fraud anterior to sale.— See Note 53 above.

55. Fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.— As has been seen in Note 51 ante, the question of setting aside an execution sale on any ground is, as between the parties, one falling under this Section. This would therefore include an application to set aside a sale for fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.¹ The question, however, whether such an application falls within the terms of O. 21 R. 90 is important because, if it does, the Court cannot, except under the conditions specified in that Rule, set aside the sale. (See Note 51.) It is also important for the purpose of determining whether it is a decree or only an appealable order. For, if it is one covered by O. 21 R. 90, it is only an appealable order though it may fall under Section 47 also, inasmuch as Section 2 clause (2) enacts that the word "decree" includes the determination of any question within Section 47 but does not include any adjudication from which appeal lies as an appeal from an order. The word "fraud" was absent in Section 311 of the old Code corresponding to O. 21 R. 90 of the present Code, and, in the absence thereof, it was held that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud could only come under Section 244 (now Section 47) and not under Section 311.² Under the present Code, however, O. 21 R. 90 covers such cases³ though the provisions of the new Code cannot retrospectively affect the character of an order passed under the old Code and take it out of the Section.⁴

An application to set aside a sale on grounds not within O. 21 R. 90 and 91 falls, as has been seen in Note 51 ante, under Section 47 only and the order on such application is appealable as a decree.⁵ See Notes under O. 21 R. 90, Note 10.

56. Other grounds for setting aside sale.— See Notes 57 to 71, infra.

57. Property not saleable.— See Note 45 above.

58. Reversal of decree.— As has been seen in Note 51 ante, the question between the parties of setting aside the sale on any ground (including the ground of reversal or variation of the decree) is one in execution falling within this Section. As to whether a claim for restitution of properties taken in execution of such a decree is one in execution of the decree or not, see Notes 30 and 33 of Section 144 infra.

59. Amendment of decree after sale.— See Notes 39 and 58 above and Notes 4, 13, 30 and 33 to Section 144 infra.

60. Ex parte decree set aside after sale.— Where a property is sold in execution of an ex parte decree and purchased by the decree-holder and the decree is subsequently set aside under O. 9 R. 13, an application under this Section and not a suit is the remedy to set aside the sale.¹ See Note 51 ante.

61. Want of notice under O. 21 Rr. 16, 22 and 66.—An objection against a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that no notice was served on the judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 22,¹ or under Rule 66,² and an application to set it aside on that ground is one falling under the Section. Where, however, such notice is not necessary the question cannot be considered to be one under the Section.³ The question of the irregularity or illegality of a notice under O. 21 R. 16, and its effect upon execution proceedings and sale is, as between the parties, one that must be determined under this Section.⁴

62. Purchase by decree-holder without permission.—A judgment-debtor seeking to set aside a sale of his land on the ground that the decree-holder has purchased it without permission to bid, must proceed only under this Section and not by a suit.¹

63. Setting aside sale on deposit.—Under the old Code, an order under Section 310 A (O. 21 R. 89) was not appealable as an order and it was held that a question of setting aside a sale on deposit of the decree amount was, as between the parties, one under Section 244 (now Section 47) of the Code, and open to second appeal.¹ Under the present Code, however, such an order is only an appealable order and, though it may be one under Section 47 also, is not a decree open to second appeal.² See Note 55 above.

64. Judgment-debtor having no saleable interest.—Order 21 R. 91 enacts that a purchaser at the execution sale can apply to have the sale set aside on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. Obviously, such an application is not one between parties to the suit and does not lie under Section 47.¹ A judgment-debtor seeking to set aside the sale on the ground that he had no saleable interest cannot do so under O. 21 R. 91. Nor can he, as against the action-purchaser, do so under Section 47, as the question is not one between parties to the suit.² As against the decree-holder, however, such an application will clearly fall under Section 47 and a fresh suit will be barred in respect of such relief.³ But where the sale is in execution of a mortgage decree, an objection that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property is really an attack on the decree itself and cannot be gone into by the executing Court.⁴

65. Sale in contravention of the Transfer of Property Act.—A sale of property in contravention of the provisions of Order 34 of this Code can be set aside, as between the parties to the suit, only by an application under this Section and not by a suit.¹

66. Sale in contravention of stay order.—An application to set aside a sale held in contravention of a stay order is as between the parties to the suit one under this Section.¹ But where the original application for stay as well as the order for stay is without jurisdiction, as where an application was made to the original Court after the transfer of the decree to the Collector for execution under Section 68 of the Code, an application to set aside the sale on the ground of its being one in contravention of the stay order is not one under Section 47.²

67. Sale in contravention of injunction order.—Where a judgment-debtor seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that it was held during the pendency of a temporary injunction, his remedy, if any, is by an application under this Section and not by a separate suit.¹ It has been held that where a sale takes place in contravention of an express direction of the Court, the latter has an inherent power to set it aside suo motu.²

68. Sale not warranted by decree.—The proper procedure to set aside a sale on the ground that it is not warranted by the terms of the decree or that it was held in contravention of the directions contained therein is, as between the parties to the suit, by an application under this Section and not by a suit.¹

69. Sale under time-barred decree.—A separate suit does not lie to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that at the time of execution it was barred by time; the remedy as between the parties to the suit is by an application under this Section.¹ See also Order 21 Rule 94.

70. Sale without jurisdiction.—Even where the sale is held without jurisdiction, as where, at the time of the sale the judgment-debtor is dead,¹ or the property is outside the territorial jurisdiction of the Court,² a party seeking to set aside the sale on that ground must do so under this Section.

71. Other grounds for setting aside sale.—A judgment-debtor may seek to set aside an execution sale on grounds other than the ones set out above in Notes 54 to 70. The following are some of the cases in which only an application under this Section lies and not a separate suit—

- (a) Where the receiver of an insolvent's estate seeks to set aside an execution sale on the ground of a prior adjudication of the debtor.¹
- (b) An objection by the judgment-debtor to the sale founded on a misdescription of the terms of the decree in the execution application.²
- (c) An objection by the judgment-debtor that the execution sale was void on the ground that the auction-purchaser, the liquidator of the decree-holder company, was not competent to bid for, and purchase, any property as liquidator under law.³
- (d) Where the decree-holder seeks to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in that the permission granted to him to bid has been modified behind his back.⁴
- (e) Where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of failure of the purchaser to make the deposit of 25 per cent. required under O. 21 R. 84.⁵
- (f) Where it is sought to be set aside on the ground that the decree has been satisfied before the sale.⁶
- (g) Where the decree-holder seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree-holder's own property was sold by mistake instead of that of the judgment-debtor.⁷⁻⁹ See also Note 6 to O. 21 R. 64.
- (h) Where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground that the petition to set aside the sale was compromised behind the applicant's back and in fraud of his rights,⁹ or by the judgment-debtor's son without authority.¹⁰
- (i) Where a receiver appointed under O. 40 R. 1 purchases the property in court-sale in the capacity of decree-holder without obtaining special leave for that purpose, even though he has obtained leave under O. 21 R. 72.¹¹

72. "Shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit." — All objections that can be raised in execution under this Section "shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit."¹ The words "by a separate suit" have given rise to a conflict of decisions as to whether the bar of suit applies only where the questions are raised by a party as plaintiff in a suit, or whether it applies to such questions raised in defence to a suit as well. The High Court of Calcutta has held that the Section bars a plea in defence also on the ground that the words "shall be determined by the Court executing the decree" give exclusive jurisdiction over the matter to the Court executing the decree, and cannot be merely construed to mean that the executing Court must determine it if it is raised in the course of execution proceedings.² But it has been also held by that High Court that where the defendant has been kept out of knowledge of the execution proceedings, until after the suit has been brought, by the fraud of the decree-holder, he could raise such objections by way of defence to the suit.^{2a}

The High Court of Madras has, on the other hand, held that the bar is not applicable to pleas in defence.³ It has followed the undermentioned case of the Calcutta High Court⁴ which held that the words "by a separate suit" cannot be taken to mean "in a separate suit." In view of the fact, however, that the said case of the Calcutta High Court has been overruled by a later Full Bench of that Court,⁵ the Madras decisions will have to be reconsidered.

It has been held that a plea that a suit is barred under this Section cannot be raised for the first time in appeal when it has not been raised in the first Court.⁶

73. "Determined," meaning of. — The word "determined" shows that the questions contemplated by the Section are to be finally disposed of and the effect of the word is therefore to give the Court executing the decree jurisdiction to dispose of finally such questions by granting appropriate relief.¹

74. "Court executing the decree," meaning of. — "The Court executing the decree" means only the Court executing the decree at the time when the application is made. Therefore, it does not include the Court which has executed the decree and has thereby become functus officio,¹ or an Appellate Court.² A Collector executing a decree transferred to him is not a "Court executing a decree" within the meaning of this Section.³ The Court which sends the decree to the Collector remains "the Court executing the decree" and hence a question coming under this Section can be entertained by such Court even after the decree has been transferred to the Collector for execution.⁴ The words "the Court executing the decree" do not restrict the applicability of the Section to proceedings initiated by the decree-holder. The Section also applies to proceedings initiated by the judgment-debtor.⁵ See also Note 2 to Section 70, infra.

75. Powers of the executing Court. — See Notes to Section 38 generally.

76. Power to construe decree. — Where there is no ambiguity in the terms of a decree the Court is bound to interpret it according to its plain meaning and cannot ignore its terms or assume mistake on the part of the parties.¹ Where, however, there is any ambiguity in the decree, the executing Court may, and should, construe the decree in order to ascertain its precise meaning² and, for this purpose, it may refer to the judgment and the pleadings in the case.³ In construing an appellate decree, the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court may be referred to,⁴ but not the statements in the judgment of the first Court which are not based on pleadings.⁵ See also Note 9 to Section 38, ante.

77. Rules of construction of decree. — There is no general rule for construing decrees; each case depends on itself.¹ The following general principles may, however, be found useful in interpreting decrees —

1. A decree should be construed in accordance with law.² Where, therefore, the judgment admits of two meanings, it is wrong to construe it in a way which violates both law and equity.³

2. Where the decree is consistent with either of two inconsistent views, that interpretation which is in conformity with the judgment should be adopted.⁴

3. A construction which may, in future, result in a multiplicity of suits, should be avoided.⁵

4. A decree must be construed in a fair and reasonable way so as to accelerate its execution⁶ and the benefit of the doubt ought to go to the judgment-debtor.⁷

5. In cases of conflicting descriptions of property in the decree, applicable to two different sets of facts, that which is certain, stable, and the least likely to have been mistaken, must prevail.⁸

6. The interpretation to be put upon a consent decree ought to be the same as that to be placed on the original agreement between the parties.⁹

6a. Similarly a decree passed on the basis of an award should be construed in the light of the award.^{9a}

7. Where a decree is passed in favour of A conditional on his paying into Court a certain sum of money "within 30 days of the decree becoming final," a payment made within the time extended by Section 12 of the Limitation Act, but after the expiry of 30 days from the decree, is within time.¹⁰ Similarly, where the decree directs A to pay a certain sum to another within a certain time as a condition precedent to recovery of possession, the payment made within the same period from the date of the appellate decree is valid.¹¹

8. A direction that the defendant "do pay a certain sum of money" imposes prima facie a personal liability on the defendant,¹² though, no doubt, the words are not conclusive of the question.^{12a}

9. A decree must be construed as a whole.¹³

The power under this Section is discretionary and may be exercised according to the circumstances of each case.⁴ But two essential conditions must be satisfied before the Court can exercise its discretion and treat a suit as an application —

1. The Court in which the suit is brought must have jurisdiction to execute the decree,⁵ and

2. the application should not have been barred by limitation at the date of the institution of the suit.⁶

The power exercisable under this sub-section may not only be exercised by the original Court, but also by the Appellate Court, subject, however, to the same two conditions, namely, that the original Court had jurisdiction to execute the decree⁷ and that the suit was filed within the limitation period prescribed for applying under this Section.⁸

The discretion given under this sub-section must be exercised when the plaint or application is filed, and after the procedure has once been determined at that stage (subject to the usual control of an appellate or revisional Court) it cannot thereafter be altered.^{9a} Hence, it has been held that where a claim suit has been filed and has proceeded to its conclusion, a Court in which an application for execution is subsequently filed cannot treat such suit as an application to take a step-in-aid of execution for the purpose of saving limitation in respect of the subsequent execution application.^{9b}

Where an application falling under this Section is dismissed on the merits and the applicant then brings a suit for the same relief, the suit cannot be converted into an application under this Section, on its being contended that such suit is barred by this Section. The remedy of the aggrieved party was to have appealed against the decision dismissing his prior application.^{9c}

Where a proceeding in execution is treated, under this Section, as a suit, the judgment-debtor who objects to the execution of the decree is in the position of a plaintiff and therefore he has to pay the court-fee due to the Government in respect of the suit.⁹

83. Objection as to limitation, when to be considered. — An objection as to limitation may be taken at any stage of the execution proceedings if the facts upon which the objection is based are patent upon the face of the record.¹

See also Note 23 to Section 11.

84. Appeal. — Where an order amounts to a determination of a question between the parties and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, it will be a decree within the meaning of Section 2 cl. (2) and is appealable as such under Section 96.¹ As to whether every such order is appealable, see Note 86, and therefore an appeal would lie against an order in execution of an award.⁵ Where a decree is obtained in a suit brought under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act and an order is passed in proceedings in execution of that decree, no appeal lies against that order.^{6a} The reason is that Section 9 of that Act provides that "no appeal shall lie from any order or decree passed in any suit under this Section" and applications for execution of decrees are proceedings in suit.

Where a judgment-debtor or a party to the suit objects to the attachment and sale of his properties in execution, or in other words prefers a claim, an order deciding such a claim falls within this Section and is appealable as a decree under Section 96 read with Section 2 clause (2).⁶ The words 'as if he was a party to the suit' in O. 21, R. 58 show that a claim by a party to the suit is not within the scope of that Rule. Even if the matter comes within O. 21 R. 58, still a right of appeal under Section 96 cannot be taken away by any provision, such as O. 21 R. 63, which is not contained in the body of the Code. (Compare the words "provided in the body of this Code" in Section 96 with the words "provided in this Code" in Sections 141, 146 and 148.)

Section 2 clause (2) excludes from the definition of decree any adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order. Thus an order appointing a receiver in execution under O. 40 R. 1 is appealable under O. 43 R. 1 (s) and is not a decree appealable under Section 96.⁷ As to appeals from orders passed under O. 21, Rr. 89, 90 and 91, see those Rules.

Appeals from orders under this Section are expressly excepted from the provisions of Article 1 of Schedule I of the Court-fees Act by notifications of the various Local Governments under Section 35 of the Court-fees Act and consequently ad valorem fee is not payable in respect of such appeals.⁸ It has been held that an order under O. 21 R. 50 clauses 2 and 3 is not an order under this Section and that on an appeal from such an order ad valorem court-fee is payable.^{8a} The Court can require a person appealing from an order under this Section to give security for the costs of the appeal.⁹

See also the undermentioned cases.¹⁰

85. Forum of appeal.—The value of the original suit in which the execution is taken out determines the forum of appeal in respect of an order passed in execution proceedings. The actual value of the subject-matter in dispute involved in the order is not the criterion.¹ See Note 18 to Section 96 as to the value of appeal for the purposes of jurisdiction.

86. Interlocutory orders in execution proceedings.—The phrase “determination of any question within Section 47” in Section 2 cl. (2) does not make every decision of any question within this Section, a decree. In order to be appealable as a decree, the decision must also have the essential characteristics of a decree as defined in that Section, that is, it must also be the formal expression of an adjudication conclusively determining the rights of the parties. If not, the order is merely an interlocutory one and is not appealable as a decree.¹ Otherwise “every interlocutory order in an execution proceeding, such as an order granting or refusing process for the examination of witnesses, would be appealable; and far greater latitude would be given

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to paragraphs 3 and 4 of Section 230 of the Code of 1882 with the following alterations:—

- (i) The old Section applied only to decrees for payment of money or delivery of other property. The present Section is made applicable to all decrees of any kind whatsoever, except decrees granting injunction. See Note 2 below.
- (ii) The words "under the Section and granted" occurring after the word "made" in the old Section have been omitted, with the result that the present Section applies under whatever Code the previous application may have been made and whether such application was granted or not. See Note 2 below.
- (iii) For the words "no subsequent application to execute the same decree shall be granted after" have been substituted the words "no order for execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after." See Notes 6 and 7 below.
- (iv) The words "or of the decree in appeal (if any) affirming the same" have been omitted as superfluous and tending to confusion. See Note 10 below.
- (v) The words "or at recurring periods" have been newly added in sub-section (1) clause (b). See Note 12 below.
- (vi) Sub-section (2) clause (b) was newly added. See Note 9 below.

Article 180 of the second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, corresponds to Article 183 of the Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, Schedule I.

2. Object, applicability and scope of the Section. — A decree-holder is entitled, as of right, to execute his decree and for that purpose may make any number of applications in succession.¹ He cannot be refused execution unless his application is barred by the principles of res judicata or by Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908. This Section imposes a further restriction on the rights of the decree-holder by fixing a maximum limit of time for execution and by enacting that no order for execution shall be made upon an application presented after the expiry of twelve years from certain specified dates.² The effect of the Section is not to supersede the law of

Under the Code of 1877, S. 230, there was a provision for an application to be made after the 12 years, if the same was made within 3 years of the passing of that Code. But only one such application could be made within those three years:

- ('81) 1881 All W N 58 (58). (Meaning of "after the passing of the Code" in S. 230 of 1877 Code.)

limitation but only to fix the outside period after which, execution of a decree, though not barred by the Limitation Act, may not be granted.³ The object of this Section is to prevent execution proceedings being kept pending indefinitely to the harassment of judgment-debtors and to require sufficient diligence on the part of the decree-holders.^{3a}

Section 230 of the old Code referred only to decree for the payment of money or delivery of other property, and it was consequently held that it did not apply to mortgage decrees.⁴ There was also a conflict of opinion as to the application of the Section to cases where a decree was passed personally against A for payment of money, and in default, for sale of B's (surety's) property.⁵ The omission of the words, "for the payment of money or delivery of other property" in the present Section makes it clear that it applies to all decrees of any kind except a decree granting injunction.⁶

Before the execution of a decree can be held to be barred under the Section, it must be shown that the decree was, in all parts, ripe for execution on the date from which the twelve years' period is to be computed.^{6a} Where a decree-holder applies for execution and a fresh application therefor in the future is likely to be barred under the provisions of this Section, the Court should allow the decree-holder to exhaust all lawful means of realising his decree in the pending application, before finally dismissing it.⁷ But the salutary rule enacted in this Section should not be permitted to be evaded as, for example, by striking off an execution petition and continuing the attachment so as to enable the decree-holder to apply for execution after the twelve years' period under the pretext of continuing a pending application.⁸

The Section only requires that the application should be presented within twelve years. The order on such application may be made even after the expiry of the specified period.⁹

This Section does not apply to decrees of Presidency Small Cause Courts and such decrees, though transferred for execution to the City Civil Court, are nonetheless not governed by the Section.¹⁰

The Section bars only the execution of the decree after the specified period. The rights of the decree-holder in other respects are not in any way affected by its provisions.¹¹

3. Retrospective operation of the Section. — It has already been observed in Note 3 to the Preamble that no one has a vested right in procedure. The right to execute a decree is only a right of procedure and not a vested right¹ and the law governing an application to execute a decree will be the law of procedure in force at the time of the application and not the law in force when the decree was passed.² Thus, where a mortgage decree is passed under the old Code but an application is presented for execution of that decree more than twelve years after the date of the decree and after the present Code came into force, the application will be barred though Section 230 of the old Code did not apply to mortgage decrees.³

4. "Application to execute a decree." — An application to execute a decree means an application under O. 21 R. 11 or otherwise by "which proceedings in execution are commenced and not merely an incidental application."¹ It should be an application in accordance with law, asking for a relief granted by the decree and for obtaining it in the mode admitted by law.² An application to the Court passing a decree to transfer it for execution to another Court is not such an application.³ But where a decree gives reliefs of different characters, there is nothing in the Code preventing separate and successive applications for execution as regards each of such reliefs.⁴

5. "Has been made." — As to the distinction between the present Section and old Section 230 in this respect, see Note 2 above. The words "under this Section and granted" which occurred after the word "made" in the old Section gave rise to

As a general rule where the previous application has been suspended or stayed or dismissed for no fault of the decree-holder and the second application is similar in scope and character to the previous one, the second application will be deemed to be an ancillary one in continuation of the previous one.⁵ Where the character of the second application is different from that of the former, as for instance, where the relief claimed in the second application is against properties or persons different from those in the previous application, the second application will be deemed to be a "fresh application" within the meaning of this Section.⁶ Similarly, where the proceedings under the prior application have come to an end, the second application cannot be taken to be one in continuation of the prior application.^{6a}

Where an application made within twelve years of the specified date is found to be defective, an amendment thereof after twelve years is not necessarily ultra vires of the powers of the Court. But a decree-holder who is not diligent should not in the absence of special and sufficient grounds be allowed to circumvent the provisions of this Section by way of amendment. Where the decree-holder applied on the last day of limitation for the arrest and attachment of moveable property of the judgment-debtor and thereafter sought to amend it by adding a prayer for the attachment of immovable property, it was held that the result of allowing the amendment would be to circumvent the provisions of this Section and that it should not therefore be allowed.^{6b} Where an amendment is allowed, the question whether it will operate so as to make the application a proper one for the purposes of the Section on the date on which it was made, depends upon the circumstances of each case.⁷ If the defect is not a fundamental one, it will have such operation.⁸ If it is a fundamental one, the amendment will not operate to save limitation under this Section.⁹

A Court executing a decree, while rejecting an application for execution, is not competent to order that a fresh application may be filed within a certain time when such an application would be barred by the Section.¹⁰

8. Successive applications for execution of decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts. — See Note 2 above. As has been observed in that Note, this Section only fixes the maximum limit of time for execution of a decree and subject to such outside limit, a final order on a previous execution application or an application to take some step-in-aid of execution will afford a fresh starting point of limitation.¹

1. See Article 182 (5) of the Limitation Act, as amended by Act IX of 1927.

As to what are "steps-in-aid of execution," see the Limitation Act, Article 182 and also the undermentioned cases.²

9. Applicability of the Section to Chartered High Courts—Sub-section 2 (b) — Sub-section 2 (b) is new. It was held under the old Code that, in view of the provision in Article 180 of the Limitation Act, 1877, for a revivor of the decrees of Chartered High Courts in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction and of orders of His Majesty in Council, Section 230 did not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction.¹ Sub-section 2 (b) has been added to give legislative recognition to that view. In the case of such decrees and orders, therefore, any number of applications for execution can be made and cannot be refused² unless they are barred on the principle of *res judicata*³ or under Article 183 of the Limitation Act, 1908. Article 183 of the Limitation Act, 1908, does not however apply to decrees of Chartered High Courts in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction.⁴

10. "Date of the decree sought to be executed." — In the absence of the circumstances specified in sub-section 1 (b) and in the absence of anything postponing the period of execution, the period of twelve years is to be computed from the date of the decree.¹ The date of the decree is the date which it ought to bear under O. 20 R. 7 and not the date when it is actually prepared and signed by the Judge.²

Where there is a preliminary and a final decree in a suit, the two must, for the purposes of this Section, be taken to be a single and indivisible decree and the date from which the time is computed is the date of the final decree.³ Where a decree is amended, the date of the amendment will not give a fresh starting point of limitation under this Section.⁴ In the case of a combined mortgage decree which provides that if the nett proceeds of the sale are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim the balance be realised from the person and other properties of the mortgagor, the period will run from the date of the decree in respect of both remedies.⁵ If, however, after the sale of the mortgaged properties a personal decree for the balance is passed under O. 34 R. 6, time will run in respect of the personal decree from the date thereof.⁶ Where a redemption decree does not mention any date for the payment of the mortgage debt, it must be taken as payable on the date of the decree itself.⁷

The words "or of the decree in appeal confirming the same" have been omitted in this Section as being a mere surplusage. Where there has been an appeal from the original decree, the period under the Section is to be computed from the date of the appellate decree even though the appeal was only from a portion of the original decree⁸ and even if the original decree is confirmed in appeal⁹ or is dismissed as not pressed.^{9a} The same principle applies to cases of appeals to the Privy Council.¹⁰ Where, however, an appeal is preferred where no appeal lies,¹¹ or where an appeal is withdrawn¹² or is dismissed for default,¹³ or is rejected for insufficiency of stamp,¹⁴ time will run only from the original decree. Where a decree is passed severally against two or more defendants and one of the defendants appeals, the period of twelve years as against the other defendants runs from the date of the original decree.¹⁵ In the light of the decision in A.I.R. 1932 Privy Council 165, the above view might require reconsideration.

Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree has been rejected, the period for the execution of the ex parte decree runs from the date of the decree notwithstanding the pendency of the application.¹⁶

It has been held in the undermentioned case¹⁷ that this Section obviously refers to a decree which is capable of execution and that in the case of a decree which is not capable of execution except on the happening of a particular contingency, time will not begin to run until that contingency occurs.

11. Subsequent order, meaning of. — Where a subsequent order directs payment of money or delivery of property at a future date, the period of twelve years will run from such date.¹ Thus, an order under O. 20 R. 11 (2) will be a subsequent order within the meaning of this Section.² According to the High Courts of Allahabad³ and Patna⁴ and the Chief Court of Oudh,^{4a} a subsequent order must be one passed by the Court which passed a decree as such Court and not an order of an executing Court. The Bombay High Court⁵ has, on the other hand, held that the order may be of any competent Court including a Court of execution. The Calcutta⁶ and Lahore⁷ High Courts and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur⁸⁻⁹ and Sind^{9a} are also inclined to this latter view.

12. "At a certain date or at recurring periods." — Where a decree does not fix a definite date the question whether a sum is payable by a certain date should be ascertained by construction of the decree and if so ascertainable, time runs from that date.¹ An order merely directing a compromise petition for payment by instalments to be filed, is not an order directing payments to be made at a particular date.²

Decrees for payment in instalments, annual or monthly,³ and decrees for future maintenance,⁴ are decrees for payment "at recurring periods." Time in the case of such decrees and of decrees for the payment of money at a particular date, runs from the date of default or the expiry of the period as the case may be.⁵ Where an instalment decree provides for the payment of the whole sum in default of any one instalment and either no option is given to the decree-holder or an option is given and exercised by him, time for the execution of the whole decree runs from the date of the first default.⁶

In the undermentioned case,^{6a} an instalment decree provided that in default of payment of any instalment, the decree-holder was entitled to realise the whole amount of the decree at once. It was held that such a decree could not be considered to be a decree payable "at a certain date" within the meaning of this Section, and that therefore, after 12 years from the date of the default, only that instalment will be barred in respect of which the default was made.

Where a decree is for delivery of possession of immovable property contingent on the non-payment of annuity, the decree-holder is not bound to execute for

Where a decree directs that money be recoverable from a party only on failure to recover the same from another, the period of 12 years runs from the date of decree and not from the time of the failure of the other to make the payment.⁸

13. Exclusion of time during minority or other disability of decree-holder. — See Section 6 Note 21 of the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act.

14. Deduction of time for other causes. — Where the period of twelve years expires on a day when the Court is closed, the application can be presented on the next re-opening day on the broad principle that where the parties are prevented from doing a thing by the act of the Court they are entitled to do it at the first subsequent opportunity.¹

As to whether the Sections of the Limitation Act extending the period of limitation "prescribed" apply to the period of twelve years under this Section, see the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act² and the undermentioned cases.^{2a}

In cases of intervening insolvency of the judgment-debtor the period during which the adjudication lasts will be excluded in computing the period of twelve years under this Section.³

By virtue of Section 48 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, the time spent in obtaining the conciliator's certificate can be deducted in computing the period of limitation under this Section.⁴

Where property is under the management of the Collector under Schedule III of the Code, the period of such management can be excluded under Para. 11 (3) of Schedule III in calculating the "period of limitation" applicable to the execution of any decree in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder has been temporarily deprived. The expression "period of limitation" has been interpreted as including the period fixed by Section 48.⁵ But Para. 11 (3) only applies when the decree has been transferred to the Collector for execution⁶ and only in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder is temporarily deprived.⁷

The pendency of an appeal by the judgment-debtor is not a ground of suspension of the period prescribed by this Section in the absence of fraud or force.⁸ When a decree is conditional on the redemption of a prior mortgage and the decree-holder redeemed the prior mortgage after twelve years from the date of his decree, the period up to the date of the redemption is not excluded, as nothing prevented him from redeeming it earlier and applying for execution within time.⁹

15. "By fraud or force." — Sub-section (2) (a) of this Section permits the execution of a decree at any time within twelve years after the date on which the judgment-debtor has by fraud or force prevented the execution of a decree in an application properly made for execution. In other words, fraud or force which prevents execution gives a fresh period of twelve years within which the decree may be executed.¹ In order to get the benefit of this sub-section it must be proved that —

(1) there was fraud or force on the part of the judgment-debtor,² and

(2) the decree-holder was thereby prevented from executing the decree.³

The fraud however need not be such as to have continued to prevent execution up to the expiry of the twelve years.⁴ There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether the Court has any discretion to refuse execution even when fraud or force on the part of the judgment-debtor preventing execution is established within twelve years of the application. According to the Calcutta High Court⁵ the Court has such discretion which will be exercised in favour of the decree-holder if he had been diligent in proceeding with the execution of the decree from the date of the decree. The Madras High Court is, on the other hand, inclined to the view that no such discretion exists under the Section.⁶ The Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court has held⁷ that even in the view of the Calcutta High Court stated above, the due diligence required is nothing more than keeping the decree alive under the provisions of the Code. It is submitted with respect that the Madras view is correct. The language of the sub-section makes it clear that sub-section (1) which precludes the Court from ordering execution in the cases specified does not bar an application made after the specified period if the conditions mentioned in sub-section (2) are satisfied. There is nothing to show that the Court has any discretion in the matter.

The term "fraud" in the Section should be interpreted in a very liberal sense.⁸ Any improper means resorted to by the judgment-debtor to prevent execution of the decree would amount to such fraud.⁹ The term includes not merely deceit but also circumvention.¹⁰ But mere objections by the judgment-debtor cannot be taken advantage of as "fraud" within the meaning of this Section.¹¹ In the case noted below^{11a} an objection raised to the jurisdiction of the Court was held not to amount to fraud.

But raising a plea based on a false statement would be fraudulent.^{11b} Where there are frequent futile and false objections raised by the judgment-debtor accompanied by his keeping out of the way when warrants of arrest are issued, his conduct may be taken to amount to fraud.¹² In the following instances the conduct of the judgment-debtor has been held to amount to fraud within the meaning of the Section —

- (1) Where he raised frivolous objections in order to delay execution of the decree against him.¹³⁻¹⁴
- (2) Where he wilfully evaded the arrest warrant.¹⁵
- (3) Where, knowing that a warrant of attachment was issued against his moveable property, he locked up his house and so prevented the moveable property therein being attached.¹⁶
- (4) Where he or his heirs made fictitious and fraudulent alienation of property which was subsequently set aside in a regular suit.¹⁷
- (5) Where he kept out of British India so that the decree-holder was not in a position to take out execution against his person.¹⁸

Where the Court merely refused to permit execution against properties of the judgment-debtor in the hands of a receiver but it was open to the decree-holder to proceed against the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor or of the surety and he did not do so within the twelve years, it was held that Section 48 (2) was of no help to the decree-holder.¹⁹

Fraud or force of one judgment-debtor will not extend the time against a co-judgment-debtor who did not resort to it.²⁰

16. Appeal from orders under the Section. — An order granting or refusing execution of a decree under the Section is, it is conceived, a final order amounting to a decree under Section 47 and is therefore appealable.

17. Plea of bar under the Section, when to be raised. — Where notice of petition for attachment in execution is duly served on the judgment-debtor who allows orders to be passed ex parte, he cannot ask for a review of the order, nor can he in appeal raise the plea that the execution application is barred by the expiry of the

Where an executing Court decides that the execution of a decree is not barred, notwithstanding the provisions of this Section, it is merely an erroneous decision and not an illegal exercise of jurisdiction. Therefore, so long as the order is not set aside in appeal or revision, it cannot be attacked in any collateral proceeding on the ground of want of jurisdiction in the executing Court.²

1. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section may be compared with Section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, which is based on the same principle,¹ namely, that the assignee of a claim stands in no better position than the assignor as regards equities existing between the assignor and his debtor at the time of the assignment.^{1a} An attaching decree-holder is an "assignee" of the attached decree within the meaning of O. 21 R. 16 and is, under this Section, subject to the same equities that the judgment-debtor in attached decree had against his decree-holder.² The equity, to which a transfer of a decree is subject, must, however, be one available against the original decree-holder and not one available against others.³ A mere claim for restitution made by the judgment-debtor against the original decree-holder is not an equity which can be availed of against an assignee from the decree-holder.⁴ The equity which the judgment-debtor seeks to enforce against the transferee must have been existent at the date of the assignment.⁵

1. Section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act runs as follows: "The transferee of an actionable claim shall take it subject to all the liabilities and equities to which the transferor was subject in respect thereof at the date of transfer."

2. Equity of the judgment-debtor to set off cross-decree. — A right to set off a cross-decree or cross-claim under O. 21 Rr. 18 and 19 is an equity which can be enforced against the transferee of the decree,¹ but the decree against which the set-off is asked for must be before the Court for execution² and it is that Court that should consider whether the assigned decree is subject to any equities.³ A right to set off a cross-decree is not affected when the assignment of one of them has been found to be fraudulent.⁴

3. Transferee during pendency of suit by judgment-debtor takes it subject to the result of the suit. — An assignee of a decree which, subsequent to the assignment, is confirmed on appeal without the assignee being brought on the record, is nevertheless an "assignee" within O. 21 R. 16 who can execute the appellate decree¹ but a satisfaction entered on the decree under O. 21 R. 18 is binding on him though made subsequent to the assignment to him and before his name is brought on the record.² The right of a judgment-debtor to ask for a stay under O. 21 R. 29, infra is an equity which will bind an assignee of the decree.³ Hence, where the decree is assigned during the pendency of a suit by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder and a decree is passed subsequently in the later suit in favour of the judgment-debtor, the latter will be entitled to a set-off in respect of such decree against the transferee of the decree in the prior suit.⁴

4. Other equities enforceable against the assignee. — In cases coming under Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, a mortgagee who had also a money decree against the mortgagor could not, in execution of the money decree, bring the equity of redemption to sale. It was held by the Bombay, Calcutta and Madras High Courts that the assignee of such money decree could not also bring the equity of redemption to sale and thus deprive the mortgagor of his equitable right.¹ The Allahabad High Court, however, held a contrary view.² Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has now been repealed and re-enacted in O. 34 R. 14 of the Code but with this difference, namely, that the equity of redemption could not be sold now in execution of decrees for the payment of money in satisfaction of such claims only as arise under the mortgage. The cases cited above are, therefore, now no longer law.

See Notes to Order 34 Rule 14, infra.

5. Assignee's want of knowledge of equity, if affects rule. — An assignment takes effect against the debtor only on notice to him and is subject to all also include cases where the debtor dies before suit and the suit itself is instituted against the legal representative. This Section provides for the execution of decrees against the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor who dies before the decree has been fully satisfied. Normally, it applies to cases where judgment-debtor dies after the decree. But the Section is wide enough to include the case where the judgment-debtor dies before decree, provided the decree is valid in spite of his death, e.g., where under O. 22 R. 6 death occurs after hearing but before judgment, or in the case of Privy Council appeals.¹ Section 53 extends the scope of Sections 50 and 52 to ancestral property in the hands of a descendant which is liable under the Hindu law for payment of debts of the ancestor.

3. "Holder of the decree." — For the definition of "decree-holder," see Section 2 sub-section (3). A person who appears upon the face of the decree as the person in whose favour the decree is passed is entitled to execute it, unless it is shown that some other person has taken his place.¹ The Code does not provide that execution abates by death of decree-holder.² See also O. 22 R. 12 infra. For purposes of limitation, an application for execution by any person who, for the time being, is recognised as the proprietor of the estate of a deceased decree-holder is held to be good, though later on it is found that he had no title.³

4. "Legal representative." — See Order 22 Rule 3.

5. Appeal against order determining legal representative. — An order determining the question whether a person is the legal representative of a deceased party is within Section 47 and is appealable as a decree. See Section 47 sub-section (3), and Note 26 to that Section. If, however, the Court does not decide the question, the mere placing of the legal representative on the record is not appealable.¹

Where a legal representative is brought on the record in the place of a deceased party, he becomes a party to the suit² and all further questions in execution between him and the opposite party must be decided in execution and not by a separate suit and an appeal will lie from such a decision.³

6. Extent of liability of legal representative. — See Note 13 to Section 52.

7. Legal representative bound by what the deceased judgment-debtor himself would have been bound by. — The liability of the legal representative is co-extensive with that of the deceased judgment-debtor himself, subject, however, to the condition that it does not extend beyond the assets actually received by him and which have not been duly disposed of. Thus, where the property could not be proceeded against even when in the hands of the judgment-debtor, as where it is governed by the special provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, it cannot be proceeded against when it comes into the hands of the legal representative.¹ On the other hand, the legal representative will be bound by the decree passed or the previous proceedings taken, against the judgment-debtor himself.² Thus, where the properties had been attached or charged or mortgaged, or directed to be sold by the decree, in the lifetime of the judgment-debtor, they continue to be liable in the hands of the legal representatives.³ Similarly, where the judgment-debtor was impleaded in the suit as a subsequent mortgagee but did not plead his rights of marshalling, it is not open to his legal representatives, when substituted in execution proceedings, to raise the question again.⁴ A Hindu son or a descendant of a Hindu is liable just like other legal representatives, and cannot question the validity of the decree against the ancestor,⁵ except in one respect, namely, that the decree debt is of an illegal or immoral nature so as not to bind him or his share in the joint family property under the Hindu law. 9. Official Assignee. — See Note 10 below.

10. "Where a judgment-debtor dies." — This Section applies only where the judgment-debtor dies.¹ The word "dies" is used in its natural meaning and does not include a civil death.^{1a} Consequently, the Section has no application where the judgment-debtor only becomes an insolvent or has only alienated or gifted away his property, or where, in his lifetime, there is a transfer or devolution by operation of law. After property vests in the Official Assignee, no proceedings can affect the property of the deceased insolvent in his hands unless he has been impleaded in the matter adjudicated upon.² Since attachment does not create any interest in the property and prevents only a private alienation, it does not prevail against the Official Assignee or Official Receiver and the decree-holder cannot claim payment of the money realised,³ much more so if the attachment is only prior to judgment.⁴

11. Decree against deceased defendant. — See Note 8 to Section 52.

12. "Before the decree has been fully satisfied." — The word "satisfied" has been substituted in this Code for the word "executed" in the previous Codes. Prior to this Code, there was a conflict of views amongst the High Courts as to the meaning certain powers for the purposes of the Section. Now the executing Court may be the Court which passed the decree or it may be the Court to which it is sent for execution.² The application to execute the decree against the legal representative must under cl. (1) be made to the Court which passed the decree.³ The Section, however, does not specify which Court has to pass orders thereon. At any rate the Court that passed the decree need only decide one point, viz., whether the decree is executable against the legal representative, and pass orders accordingly.⁴ All further proceedings, inclusive of ordering notice of execution can, where the decree is sent to another Court for execution, be taken by the Court executing the decree.⁵ As to the effect of non-compliance with the rule that the application for substitution should be made to the Court which passed the decree, see Section 42, Note 1 ante. See also the case cited below.^{6a} The execution proceedings once commenced can be continued after the death of the judgment-debtor by substitution of the name of his legal representative in place of his name in the application for execution. No fresh or substantive application under O. 21 R. 11 is necessary.⁶

An application under this Section is necessary only when further execution is needed or asked for. A separate application merely for substituting a legal representative is not necessary⁷ and no limitation is prescribed for such substitution in execution proceedings which do not abate merely by the death of the parties.⁸ See O. 22 R. 12.

It is not incumbent on a party, to be entitled to apply under O. 9 R. 13 of the Code as the legal representative of the deceased defendant, to be first brought on record under Section 50 before filing an application to set aside the ex parte decree.⁹

14. Execution against wrong legal representative or without the legal representative. — It has been seen in Note 63b to Section 11, ante, that a decree against one of several representatives will, in the absence of fraud or collusion, bind all the representatives, but that a decree against a wrong person as the legal representative does not bind the real representatives. The same principles will apply to execution proceedings taken against legal representatives. Thus, a proceeding taken against one of several representatives who prima facie is entitled to represent the estate of the deceased is binding on all the representatives.¹ But if it is taken against a wrong person as such legal representative, it will as a general rule not bind the actual or real legal representatives.² (See also Note 6 to Section 52.) Where, however, in such a case the real representative stands by and allows the proceedings to be taken or continued against a wrong person who is allowed to be in possession of the estate of the deceased, he and persons claiming through him will not be allowed to challenge the proceedings subsequently.³

Similarly, where a wrong person is impleaded as a legal representative but the Court decides that he is the true heir and orders execution to proceed, such proceedings cannot be said to be void for want of jurisdiction.⁴

Another class of cases may be noted in this connexion, namely, cases where one person is competent, in law, to represent the interest of others in the estate, as for instance, a Hindu father or manager of a joint Hindu family, or the guardian of a minor, or a Hindu widow; in all these cases the proceedings taken against such persons in their representative capacity are binding on all persons who are represented by the person against whom such proceedings are taken.⁵ But if the proceedings are

PROCEDURE IN EXECUTION

enforce execution.

51. Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may, on the application of the decree-holder, order execution of the decree —

- (a) by delivery of any property specifically decreed;
- (b) by attachment and sale or by sale without attachment of any property;
- (c) by arrest and detention in prison;
- (d) by appointing a receiver; or
- (e) in such other manner as the nature of the relief granted may require:

“Provided that, where the decree is for the payment of money, execution by detention in prison shall not be ordered unless, after giving the judgment-debtor an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to prison, the Court, for reasons recorded in writing, is satisfied, —

(a) that the judgment-debtor, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the execution of the decree, —

(i) is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(ii) has, after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, dishonestly transferred, concealed, or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation to his property; or

(b) that the judgment-debtor has, or has had since the date of the decree, the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof and refuses or neglects or has refused or neglected to pay the same, or

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section was newly inserted in the Code on the suggestion of the Advocate-General of Madras.¹ It enumerates in general terms the various modes² in which the Court may, in its discretion, order the execution of a decree according as the nature of the relief granted may require. In the Notes on Clauses the Select Committee observe as follows: "This clause states generally the powers of the Court in regard to execution leaving the details to be determined by rules. It will be observed that the power to direct immediate execution is no longer restricted to one class of suits but that it is now general in terms. Any limitation that may be found necessary will be imposed by rules." The Section accordingly is made to operate "subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed."

1a. "Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed." — This Section merely enumerates the different modes of execution in general terms while the conditions and limitations under which alone the respective modes can be availed of are prescribed further on by different provisions. As observed by Sulaiman, C. J., in Anadilal v. Ram Sarup,¹ "The Legislature has taken care to preface the Section with the words 'subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed.' It is obvious that there is no wide and unrestricted jurisdiction to order execution in every case in all the ways indicated therein. The jurisdiction has to be exercised subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed by the rules in the following schedule . . . Obviously, all the various modes mentioned in Section 51 are not open to an executing Court in every case; it is to be guided by the procedure laid down in the schedule, and must resort to the method appropriate to each case."

"Prescribed" under Section 2 (16) means "prescribed by rules", and "rules," under Section 2 (18) means "rules and forms" contained in the First Schedule of the Code or framed by the respective superior Courts in different Provinces under Section 122 or Section 125.

2. Powers of the Court in execution. — It is for the judgment-creditor to decide in which of the several modes mentioned in the Section he will execute his decree; and the Court has no authority except under the circumstances mentioned in the proviso, to refuse to order execution of the decree in the mode asked for on the ground that the decree-holder should, in the first instance, proceed by another mode.¹ On the same principle, a Court passing a decree against a defendant should not ordinarily place any limitation as to the mode in which it is to be executed.² In fact, a decree may, under the provisions of O. 21 R. 30, be executed simultaneously against both the person and the property of the judgment-debtor,^{2a} though the Court has, under O. 21 R. 21, a judicial discretion to refuse to order such simultaneous execution in proper cases. The reason is that, as their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed out in the undermentioned case,³ "the difficulties of a litigant in India begin when he has obtained a decree" and that far too many obstacles are placed in the way of a decree-holder who seeks to execute his decree against the property of the judgment-debtor. It is also an important principle of law that rules of procedure are only handmaids of justice and ought not to be used for obstructing justice. It is accordingly the duty of the Court executing the decree to aid the decree-holder in realising the amount due under his decree, and it should therefore offer him all possible and reasonable facilities for realising the decretal amount in as short a time as possible.⁴ As to simultaneous executions generally, see Note 10 to Section 38 and O. 21 Rr. 21 and 30.

Ordinarily there can be only complete execution^{4a} but where it is ineffectual and invalid, another execution, valid in law, can be ordered.^{4b} Thus, where a delivery of possession was made after an unconditional order of stay of execution had been passed by the Appellate Court, and consequently became ineffectual, the decree-holder can, after the dismissal of the appeal by the judgment-debtor, again apply for delivery of possession.⁵

3. "By delivery of any property specifically decreed." — As to the mode of execution of a decree for specific moveable property, see O. 21 R. 31 and that for specific immovable property, see O. 21 Rr. 35 and 36. As to whether, in an order for delivery of any property decreed, the Court can grant an alternative relief by way of damages in default of such delivery, see Note 7 below.

4. "By attachment and sale or by sale without attachment of any property"—Clause (b). — Where the decree itself directs the sale of properties, as in the case of mortgage decrees, it is clear that no attachment is necessary for bringing the properties to sale in execution of that decree.¹ But, is an attachment an essential pre-requisite for the validity of sale of property in execution of a money decree? In order to answer this question it is necessary to read this Section, which enables a Court to order a sale without attachment, along with O. 21 R. 30, which provides that a money decree may be executed by attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and along with O. 21 R. 64, which provides that the Court may order that any property attached by it shall be sold. Under the old Code which contained no provision corresponding to the present Section, there was a conflict of opinion, one class of cases holding that the object of an attachment is to bring the property under the control of the Court with a view to prevent the judgment-debtor from alienating it, and that the absence of attachment is nothing more than an irregularity and does not ipso facto vitiate the sale;² and another class of cases holding that an attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money, and that the absence of attachment makes the sale de facto void.³

The present Section 51 now makes it clear that a sale without attachment is not without jurisdiction though in view of O. 21 Rr. 30 and 64 it may amount to an irregularity. This is the view taken by the High Courts of Lahore,^{3a} Patna,⁴ Madras⁵ and Rangoon.⁶ The High Court of Calcutta⁷ has, on the other hand, held, relying on certain observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari,⁸ that a sale without attachment is ipso facto void. The High Court of Bombay also has held in an earlier decision that a property cannot be sold without attachment.⁹ Neither of these decisions, however, adverted to Section 51, nor, it is submitted, does the decision in Thakur Barmha's case support the view taken by them.^{9a} The said decisions cannot be accepted as sound. The purpose of attachment being to prevent a judgment-debtor from placing any obstacles in the way of the Court selling the property, it cannot be that the want of it will vitiate a sale which has actually been effected without any such obstacles. In a recent decision of the Bombay High Court^{9b} that Court also has held, dissenting from its earlier decision, that a sale in execution without an attachment is not a nullity.

Section 51 clause (b) empowering the Court, in general terms, to attach and sell in execution any property must be interpreted to mean that the Court has jurisdiction to attach and sell in execution any property which the decree-holder puts forward as the property of his judgment-debtor.¹⁰ If the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor but to a stranger, the latter will not be bound by the sale in any way.¹¹ But it is not void as between the decree-holder, judgment-debtor and the auction-purchaser,¹² and the purchaser can only apply under O. 21 R. 91 to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold. The property to be sold must, however, be saleable property under Section 60 of the Code.¹³ Thus, lands inalienable according to the provisions of special enactments such as Section 3 of the Bengal Regulation III of 1872,¹⁴ or Section 1 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act,¹⁵ cannot be sold in execution.

There is a difference of opinion on the question whether the Court can, under this clause, order a temporary alienation of property in execution, such as by mortgaging or leasing it out for a term. There is also a conflict of opinion on the question whether, where a sale is prohibited under a special or local Act, the Court can, by way of execution, grant a mortgage or a lease of the judgment-debtor's property. On the first question it has been held by the High Court of Lahore that Section 72 implies that the Court has authority to order a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's property. It has also held that the power to transfer the entire bundle of rights constituting ownership by way of sale includes the lesser power of transferring some of those rights.¹⁶ The High Court of Allahabad has, on the other hand, dissented from the Lahore view and has held that a power to sell does not include a power to grant a lease. As regards Section 72, it has held that that Section circumscribes the Court's powers as regards the granting of leases to the conditions prescribed by it.¹⁷ The Peshawar Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the Court has power, apart from the provisions of Section 72, to order a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's property.^{17a} The Nagpur High Court has held that the Court has no inherent power to order temporary alienation, apart from the provisions of Section 72.^{17b}

On the second question, the High Court of Lahore holds that the prohibition of sale does not prevent the Court from mortgaging or leasing the property under this clause and that the provisions of Section 72 do not affect the powers of the Court in this respect.¹⁸ According to the High Court of Allahabad, as has been seen already, the power to grant a lease arises only under Section 72 which applies only when a sale has been ordered, so that, where no sale can be ordered by reason of statutory prohibition, the Court has no power to grant a lease at all.¹⁹

According to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar, when a sale is prohibited, all powers, such as those of mortgaging or leasing the property which are derived from the power to sell are also taken away.²⁰

The Nagpur High Court has held that the Court cannot order the attachment of property for the purpose of temporary alienation when such property is not liable to be sold in execution.^{20a}

Where not only a sale but also a temporary alienation is prohibited, it is of course clear that the Court cannot, by way of execution, make an order for temporary alienation.²¹

The word "sale" in the Section includes not only a sale in court auction but also a sale by a nominee of the parties under a consent decree.²²

The fact that immovable property is attached before judgment and the attachment is continued after the decree will not disable the decree-holder from applying for the attachment and sale of the moveable property of the judgment-debtor.²³

5. "By arrest and detention." — Under O. 21 R. 30 a decree for the payment of money, including a decree for the payment of money as an alternative to some other relief, may be executed by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor. Under O. 21 R. 31 (1) a decree for specific moveable property may be similarly executed by the arrest and detention of the judgment-debtor. But there are some exceptions to this rule. Thus, a decree cannot be executed by arrest and detention where the judgment-debtor is a woman (Section 56) or a minor or legal representative of a deceased person (Sections 50 and 52).¹

As has been seen in Note 2 above, it is for the judgment-creditor to decide in which of the several modes he will execute his decree. Where, therefore, a decree-holder prays for the arrest of the judgment-debtor the Court cannot (except as provided for by the proviso) compel the decree-holder to proceed against his property^{1a} or to accept payment by instalments.²

See also Sections 55 to 59 and O. 21 Rr. 30, 31 (1) and 37 to 40 infra which contain further provisions on this mode of execution.

5a. Proviso to the Section. — The proviso to the Section was inserted in the Code by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act of 1936 (21 of 1936), Section 2. The proviso restricts the power of the Court to arrest the judgment-debtor in execution of a money decree and lays down that except in certain specified cases, the judgment-debtor shall not be arrested in execution of such a decree. See the under-mentioned cases¹ decided with reference to the proviso.

6. "By appointing a receiver"—Clause (d).—Execution by appointment of a receiver is known as *equitable execution*¹ and is entirely within the discretion of the Court.² It is thus an exception to the general rule stated in Note 2 above that it is for the decree-holder to choose the mode of execution and that the Court has no power to refuse to order execution in the mode asked for. This mode of execution was being adopted by Courts even under the old Code,³ and this Section only gives legislative sanction to the exercise of such powers. The Section, however, does not confer a general power on the executing Court to appoint a receiver in every case. It merely prescribes a mode of execution of the decree by appointment of a receiver while the conditions and limitations under which such appointment is to be made are prescribed by O. 40 R. 1.^{3a}

There is a difference of opinion as to whether a receiver may be appointed in respect of properties which cannot be attached and sold. According to the High Courts of Allahabad,^{3b} Calcutta,⁴ and Lahore^{4a} and the Judicial Commissioners' Courts of Nagpur,⁵ and Peshawar,^{5a} such an appointment can be made, the Nagpur Court taking the view that the appointment of a receiver does not amount to attachment. The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, held that such an appointment amounts to an equitable attachment and that therefore no such appointment can be made in respect of properties not liable to be attached and sold under Section 60.⁶ The Allahabad High Court has held in a recent decision that where the law prohibits the dispossession of the judgment-debtor from certain property, a receiver cannot be appointed in respect of such property.^{6a} No receiver can be appointed in respect of a mere right to future maintenance inasmuch as such a right is not property at all.⁷ But where the maintenance is charged on property or is to come out of specified properties, it has been held by the Privy Council that a receiver may be appointed for realising the rents and profits of the properties and for applying them towards the maintenance of the debtor and the balance towards the discharge of the decree debt.⁸

A receiver may be appointed to realise a decree or debt which has been attached in execution proceedings,⁹ or to collect the future rents and profits accruing due from attached properties,¹⁰ or from the estate of a deceased debtor in the hands of his heirs,¹¹ or even in respect of property situate outside the Court's jurisdiction,^{11a} or for realisation of property by prosecuting causes of action arising outside jurisdiction.¹²

Where a receiver has been appointed at the instance of one decree-holder, it is not necessary that every decree-holder should also have a receiver appointed in his own suit in respect of the same property,¹³ though it does not disable him from asking for such relief in proper cases. Thus, a mortgagee decree-holder can ask for the appointment of a receiver though a receiver has already been appointed in a partition suit.¹⁴

O. 21 R. 34. — Execution of decree for execution of a document or endorsement of a negotiable instrument.

O. 21 R. 53. — Attachment of decrees.

O. 21 R. 56. — Delivery of attached coins or currency notes to the party entitled under the decree.

This clause does not enable a Court to add to, or subtract from, the terms of the decree itself inasmuch as it is a general principle of law that an executing Court cannot go behind the decree but must execute it as it stands.¹ Thus, where a decree in a redemption suit directs delivery of title deeds without any alternative provision for payment of damages in default of doing so, the executing Court cannot award such damages, though a separate suit may lie therefor.²

As to adjustments or agreements of parties out of Court as to the mode of execution of the decree, see O. 21 R. 2.

8. "On the application of the decree-holder." — The Section requires that the Court can act only on the application of the decree-holder. The reason for this requirement is that it concerns the parties alone and that the Courts need execute their decrees only if the parties entitled thereto want it.¹ But the application need not necessarily be in writing; it may be oral.² Nor need the mode of execution be specifically expressed in such application; it may be inferred from the act of the Court executing the decree.³ As regards the appointment of a receiver, it has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that even without an application, the Court can suo motu order the appointment of a receiver under Section 94 (d) and O. 40 R. 1.⁴ This view is correct. The requirement as to the application in this Section is subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed by the rules—in this case O. 40 R. 1—under which the Court can act suo motu.

This Section requires that the application must be made by the decree-holder. A stranger to the suit or decree cannot apply for execution though there may be a benefit conferred on him by the decree.⁵ Nor can the judgment-debtor apply under this Section, e. g., for the appointment of a receiver.⁶

For definition of "decree-holder," vide Section 2 clause (3).

9. Appeal. — This Section must be read with O. 40 R. 1, and an order appointing a receiver in execution, if it falls under O. 40 R. 1, is appealable as an order under O. 43 R. 1 (s).¹ But if the order of appointment is only a conditional one on the furnishing of security and security is not furnished, the order does not take effect at all and no appeal lies.² An order refusing to discharge a receiver is one relating to the

(2) Where no such property remains in the possession of the judgment-debtor and he fails to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such property of the deceased as is proved to have come into his possession, the decree may be executed against the judgment-debtor to the extent¹³ of the property in respect of which he has failed so to satisfy the Court in the same manner as if the decree had been against him personally.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "in respect of which he has failed so to satisfy the Court" have been substituted for the words "not duly applied by him" in clause (2) of the Section.

In an early decision of the Calcutta High Court, it was held that where there are several legal representatives of the deceased it is not necessary that their shares should be defined; it is enough if a joint decree is passed against all of them.⁶ But it has been recently held by the Privy Council that in a suit against the heirs of a deceased Mahomedan for a dower debt due by the deceased, the proper form of decree is against each of the heirs of the deceased for that proportion of the plaintiff's joint claim which corresponds to the share of each heir in the estate of the deceased.^{6a} The decree against a legal representative under this Section should direct the defendant to pay the decree debt out of the assets of the deceased in his hands.⁷ A decree which does not make such a direction is an erroneous decree.⁸

The decree passed under this Section is a mere money decree and does not create a charge on the assets of the deceased. The Section only states the extent to which and the manner in which the debt can be recovered, and in no way provides for reservation of property to satisfy the debt.⁹ Where a person is sued as a representative, a decree cannot be passed against him on the ground that he is a partner since it would alter the nature of the suit.¹⁰

In order that the provisions of this Section may apply, the decree must be against a person and not merely against something which is not a person. Thus, a decree merely against the assets of a deceased person without mentioning the name of the legal representative is inexecutable.¹¹

Where a decree is passed against several heirs of a deceased person and the decree-holder realises the entire decretal amount from some of the heirs alone, the latter can sue the other heirs for contribution.¹²

5. Decree against some of several legal representatives — Validity and legal effect. — As has been already mentioned in Note 63b to Section 11, a decree obtained against some only of several heirs of a deceased person is binding on the estate¹ in the absence of fraud or collusion, on the principle of substantial representation.^{1a} This principle will not, however, apply where all the heirs are impleaded and some of them are subsequently exempted by the plaintiffs from the array of defendants. In such a case the defendant exempted cannot be considered to have been represented by the other defendants.^{1b} (See also Section 50 Note 14.) In the case of co-administrators or two or more legatees, it has been held that a decree against one only will not bind the estate.²

6. Decree against wrong legal representative — Effect. — Where a creditor selects from among several rival claimants to the estate of his deceased debtor any one whom he bona fide believes to have the best prima facie title as legal representative and obtains a decree against him, the decree and the consequent execution sale will bind the true heir in the absence of fraud or collusion.¹ This is an exception to the general principle of law that a decree will bind only the parties to it or those claiming through them. But the true legal representative cannot, after the decree, be brought on record for the purpose of execution and the deceased debtor's property in his hands cannot be attached and sold in that same suit.² If a person who has no sort of right to represent the deceased is made a party to the suit and a decree is obtained against him as representing the deceased, such decree cannot bind the true heir.³ In such a case it cannot be said that the suit was a bona fide one.

As regards the cases where the true heir is affected by estoppel the principle stated in Section 50 Note 14 applies here also. See also the undermentioned cases.⁴

7. Decree against executor who has not proved the will — Effect. — An executor appointed by will does not represent the deceased by virtue of the will until he has obtained probate. Therefore, a suit against him by the creditor is not maintainable unless the executor has intermeddled with the estate.¹ In order that the just claims of the creditor in such cases may not be defeated by the executor not taking out probate, the persons who take possession of the estate of the deceased will be treated as the representatives of the deceased. Even if the decree obtained against them cannot be executed against the estate in the hands of the executor when he has taken out probate, it is sufficient to enable the plaintiff to bring a suit against the executor in order to have the decree satisfied.²

8. Decree against dead person—Effect. — A suit against a dead person is not maintainable.¹ If a decree is obtained against a dead person without impleading the legal representative, the decree is a nullity and cannot be executed.² But the decree is not invalid if the defendant dies after the conclusion of the hearing but before the pronouncing of the judgment.³ See O. 22 R. 6. So also a decree passed by the Privy Council against a respondent who dies pending the appeal is not a nullity.⁴

9. "Out of the property of the deceased." — A decree obtained against the legal representative of a deceased debtor can be executed only against the estate of the latter in his hands.¹ The decree-holder is not entitled to proceed against his separate property.² As to cases of survivorship in Hindu joint families, see Section 53 Note 2. Where the survivor does not inherit as heir of the deceased but gets into the estate in his own individual right,^{2a} or where lands are attached to a hereditary office and are inalienable, they have not the character of simple heritable property and do not form part of the assets of the deceased person.³ But, where under a grant for maintenance, a grantee has a heritable but non-transferable interest in the property, it cannot be said that each successive heir has only a life-interest in the property. As the grant is heritable each heir derives his interest by inheritance and the property in his hands forms the assets of the deceased grantee.^{3a}

Rents and profits of immovable property are legal incidents of such property and bear the same character as the property itself. So, where a decree is passed against the assets of a deceased person in the hands of his heir, the rents and profits accruing since his death form part of his assets.⁴ But in the case of lands attached to a hereditary office and which are inalienable, the income is not liable to attachment under this Section.⁵ A right to a share of offerings in a temple which has been inherited by a person forms part of the assets of the deceased for the purpose of this Section.^{5a}

Where a decree is passed against the assets of the deceased in the hands of the representative and the representative himself dies thereafter, the property in the hands of his heir or legal representative does not cease to be assets of the deceased debtor.⁶

10. Property in the hands of a third party.—When a person is sued as the legal representative of a deceased person for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased, and a decree is passed for money to be paid out of the assets of the deceased in the hands of the representative, the decree is nonetheless a decree against the legal representative. It refers to him as the judgment-debtor, and it follows that such a decree can be executed only against the representative who was made a defendant in the suit or his or her representatives.¹ As has been already mentioned in Section 50, Note 15, a judgment-creditor cannot in execution of his decree follow the assets of the deceased in the hands of transferees in good faith and for valuable consideration,² unless the transfers are affected by the doctrine of *lis pendens*³ or the transferees knew that there were unpaid debts and that the transferor did not intend to apply the sale proceeds to pay them.⁴ Even in such a contingency, the transfer not being a void property of the deceased is in the possession of the judgment-debtor.⁵ If payments are not made by the heir rateably to all the creditors, it does not follow that he has failed to apply the assets duly. Every payment on account of a debt is perfectly lawful, irrespective of its effect upon the other creditors.⁶ In such cases the analogy of Section 323 of the Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925) governing executors and administrators does not apply. Where payments are made by the legal representative to the extent of the full value of the property of the deceased which has come into his hands, the decree cannot be executed even though he may still have in his possession property which originally belonged to the deceased.⁷ This Section does not provide that the representative shall be made answerable as well for what, with diligence on his part, would have come to his hands as for what actually has come to his hands.⁸ In such a case, the creditor may have a remedy by an administration suit or other regular action.⁹

14. Manner of execution. — See Note 13 Foot-notes 1 to 5.

Where the heir pleads in answer to execution that the property attached is his own private property or is otherwise one which is not liable to be proceeded against in execution, the question should be decided in execution and not referred to a separate suit.¹ The decree-holder is entitled to attach and sell any property of the deceased in the possession of his heirs independently of the fact whether the property in such possession is more than his share or not.² He cannot be delayed till the legal representatives are able to ascertain all the creditors and the extent of their debts or till they effect a partition among themselves or settle their disputes inter se, or till probate is obtained, or till the assets are reduced to possession.³

The words "attached and sold" should be taken distributively; so that where income from property in the hands of the legal representative is attached, it is unnecessary to sell it.⁴ A decree-holder is entitled to have the whole of his decree satisfied

1. Scope, applicability and object of the Section. — This Section is new. It was introduced for the first time in the Code in 1908. Under the Hindu law, an undivided son or other descendant who succeeds to the joint family property on the death of the ancestor, does so by right of survivorship and takes the property in his own right and not as heir of the ancestor.¹ He is not a legal representative of the deceased ancestor as defined in Section 2 clause (11).² But he is liable under the Hindu law by reason of his pious obligation, to pay the debts of his deceased ancestor, to the extent of the joint family properties in his hands. Under the old Code, the term "legal representative" was not defined, and there was a conflict of decisions as to whether a Hindu undivided son or other descendant could, so far as the ancestral property was concerned, be regarded as the legal representative of the deceased ancestor and whether the said liability could be enforced in execution, or only by a separate suit, inasmuch as the liability was quite distinct from, and independent of, the contractual liability of the ancestor or of the liability of a legal representative to pay the debts of the deceased out of the property of the deceased in his hands.¹ The High Courts of Madras² and Allahabad³ held that the liability could be enforced only by way of a separate suit. The other High Courts held that it could be enforced in execution. It is in order to settle this conflict of views in the procedure to be adopted for enforcing the said liability under Hindu law that this Section has been enacted.⁴

This Section is an explanation to Sections 50 and 52. The latter Sections provide for the remedies of a creditor against the properties of his deceased debtor in the hands of his legal representative. This Section explains the meaning of the words "property of the deceased." It also extends the meaning of the term "legal representative" as defined in Section 2 clause (11) by expressly making the son or other descendant of a Hindu, his legal representative in respect of the joint family property in his hands which is liable under Hindu law, for the satisfaction of the debt of the deceased ancestor.⁵ Reading these Sections together, it is now clear that ancestral property in the hands of a son or other descendant can be proceeded against in execution as assets of the deceased in the hands of such descendant.¹⁰ The descendant can, in such proceedings, show that in fact no pious obligation exists in view of the illegality or immorality or the non-existence of the debt.¹¹ In fact, a separate suit will be barred in respect of that matter by virtue of Section 47.¹²

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that this Section, being only a matter of procedure, can be applied even to pending cases, and that an order passed under the old Code can be reversed by the Appellate Court on the ground that Section 53 has been enacted in the meantime.¹³ The Madras High Court has, on the other hand, taken a contrary view.¹⁴ Where, however, in a prior order the decree has been construed to be restricted to the assets of the deceased in the restricted sense of the old Code, it becomes res judicata, and, thereafter, the present Section cannot be availed of, to increase the liability and attach it to the ancestral property in the hands of the descendant.¹⁵

There is nothing in this Section to justify the view that a suit for administration will lie where a Hindu father dies leaving no property of his own except his share in joint family property.¹⁶

See also Notes 3 and 4 below.

2. "Property in the hands of a son or other descendant." — The Section applies only where the joint family property passes by survivorship to a son or other descendant who is liable, under the Hindu law, to pay the ancestor's debts.¹ The only persons who, under the Hindu law, are under a pious obligation to pay their ancestor's debts are the son, the grandson and the great-grandson² and none else. Hence, the Section has no application where the property has passed into the hands of persons other than the ancestor's sons, grandsons and great-grandsons,³ ib. e. g., a brother,⁴ father,² uncle³ or nephew.⁴ But if the property of the deceased passes into the hands of a son or other descendant, it does not cease to be liable for the debt even though the son or other descendant dies and even though the property has passed to his heirs.⁵ Nor does it cease to be liable where it has passed to the son or other descendant jointly with other persons such as a grandfather or uncle; the reason is that the expression "in the hands of a son" does not necessarily mean property which is exclusively in the hands of a son or other descendant without any partner or coparcener. The expression stands for property belonging to the son or property in which he has a proprietary interest and which may be in his actual or constructive possession joint or exclusive.

See also Note 6, infra.

3. "Which is liable under Hindu law for the payment of the debt of a deceased ancestor?" — In order to ascertain the liability of property in the hands of a son or other descendant for the debts of an ancestor, primarily the Hindu law itself and the decisions on the point should be referred to. A few broad aspects may, however, be mentioned here.

Under the Hindu law, a son or other descendant (son or grandson or great-grandson) is under a pious obligation to pay his ancestor's debt, but only to the extent of the joint family property in his hands, and provided that such a debt is not 'avyavaharika,' that is, neither illegal nor immoral.⁶ The descendant is therefore entitled to

that the father's share should be sold first.⁹

This Section does not affect the rule of Hindu law that the property of a coparcener which has been attached in execution of a decree in his lifetime⁹ or which has been validly mortgaged by him¹⁰ can be proceeded against even subsequent to his death. Nor does it affect the provision of Hindu law by which the whole of the family property can be sold in execution of a decree against the father or manager where the latter was sued in a representative capacity.¹¹ Nor again can the holder of a decree against the legal representative take advantage of S. 53 and attach ancestral property in the hands of the legal representative where the decree directs that it shall be realised from such property only as belonged to the deceased personally.¹²

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether in the case of Hindu impartible zamindari estates, the debts of a deceased zamindar are enforceable against the estate in the hands of the successor. See the undermentioned cases.¹³

the estate ceases to be liable in the hands of their sons.¹⁴ They can attack the decree not only on the ground of the illegality or the immorality of the debt, but also on the ground of want of necessity; and this question can be raised even in execution as it relates to the liability of the judgment-debtor's property for the decree.¹⁵ Under Section 5 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (3 of 1874) watan property is not saleable to non-watanadars. Hence watan property in the hands of a descendant is not saleable for debt of the deceased ancestor.¹⁶

4. "Deceased ancestor."—The pious obligation of the son or other descendant under the Hindu law exists whether the ancestor is alive or dead.¹⁷ This Section, however, deals with the obligation after the death of the ancestor, and cannot be extended to a case where the ancestor is living.¹⁸ But, independently of this Section, on general principles, if the family continues to be joint at the time when execution is sought, the son's share also in the joint family property can be proceeded against in execution of the decree against the father, even during the lifetime of the father.¹⁹ The reason is that in such a case, the son's share will be property which the father can transfer to pay off his own debts. But, where at the time when execution is sought, partition has taken place between the father and the sons, the shares allotted to the sons at such partition cannot be proceeded against in execution during the lifetime of the father,²⁰ as in such a case, the father will not have any power of alienation over the share of the sons.

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether in a case where partition has taken place but the father is dead at the time of execution, the shares allotted to the sons at such partition can be proceeded against in execution under this Section. One view is that under this Section, such share can be proceeded against in execution,²¹ while the other view is that such share cannot be so proceeded against in execution.²²

5. "Decree." — For definition of "decree," see Section 2 clause (2) ante.

The Section applies only if there is a decree in respect of the debt sought to be realised out of the property of the deceased.¹ It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the word "decree" in the Section is not limited to money decrees passed against the ancestor, but also includes decrees against property. Thus, according to that Court, a decree passed in respect of joint family properties against the father can be executed against the sons after the father's death.² The reason seems to be that, where a descendant has received property which, under Hindu law, would be liable to satisfy the ancestor's debts, if any, the descendant becomes a legal representative of the ancestor for all purposes and that every decree got against the ancestor, whether money decree or not, can be executed against him. The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, held that a decree for injunction against an ancestor could not be executed against the descendants on the ground that they were not the legal representatives of the ancestor and that the object of the Section is not merely descriptive but also limitative.³ The Section has no application to the execution, against legal representatives, of mortgage decrees obtained against the ancestor. Where, therefore, a decree passed under Order 34 determines unconditionally that certain property is chargeable and shall be sold, the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor cannot, in execution, raise the plea that the mortgage debt was immoral or illegal.^{3a}

The Section only applies where the decree sought to be executed against a person is binding on such person. Thus, where a suit is brought against the sons and grandsons of a deceased Hindu for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased but the suit is dismissed against the grandsons and is decreed only against the sons, the decree will not bind the grandsons and the interest of the latter in the joint family cannot be proceeded against in execution of such decree.^{3b}

A decree passed by the Privy Council against a respondent (who is a Hindu) who dies pending the appeal is not a nullity (See O. 22 R. 4, Note 19) and can be executed against the property coming into the hands of his sons under this Section.^{3c} A decree against a son or other descendant is not a personal decree against him but is only one against the assets in his hands.⁴

6. "Property of the deceased." — The words "property of the deceased" do not include the self-acquisitions of the son or other descendant himself.

Illustration

A and his son B form members of a joint Hindu family. B has got his own self-acquired or separate property over which A has no control. A dies. The separate property of B cannot be proceeded against in execution of a decree against A as "the property of the deceased."¹

The word "property" is used in this Section in its ordinary and general sense. Thus, although lands inherited by the son of an agriculturist cannot be attached under certain special Acts such as the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act and the Bombay

1. Legislative changes.—The words "or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf" are new. Other alterations are merely verbal.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section.—This Section deals with a case in which a Civil Court can pass a decree but cannot itself execute it. That has to be effected by the Collector. Sections 68 to 72, infra deal with another class of cases in which also the decrees passed by the Civil Court have to be executed only by the Collector. The reason for the provision in this Section restricting the ordinary powers of the Civil Courts to execute their own decrees is two-fold: firstly the Revenue Authorities are more conversant, and better qualified to deal with such matters than the Civil Court¹ and secondly the interests of the Government with regard to the revenue assessed on the assets would be better safeguarded by the Collector executing the decree than by the Court.² The Section does not apply to decrees other than decrees for partition, or separate possession of a share of an undivided revenue paying estate.³ Nor does it apply even to decrees for partition or separate possession of such estates, save where as a result of partition the revenue might be affected.⁴ Where, therefore, no separate allotment of the revenue is asked for and the joint liability of the shares for revenue in respect of the whole estate is left unaffected, this Section has no application.⁵ But where a prayer is made for division of revenue in the suit, the Section becomes applicable though the prayer is made, not by the plaintiff, but by a defendant.⁶

The Section applies only to a case where the decree contemplates the partition of the whole of the estate paying revenue to Government. It does not apply where the decree is for separate possession of a share of a portion of an undivided estate.⁷ The word "estate" must be taken to be used in its ordinary signification¹ and not in the limited sense in which it may be used in other Acts.² There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the Section applies to temporarily settled estates or only to permanently settled estates. The High Court of Madras has held that it applies only to permanently settled estates and not to property temporarily settled, such as property held on ryotwari tenure.³ A contrary view has been taken by the Bombay High Court. According to it, the Section applies even to property temporarily settled, such as sheri lands or lands held under a lease from Government for a fixed period.⁴ According to the Rangoon High Court, the Section is meant to be applied only to estates assessed to revenue in one lump sum for the whole estate and not to estates like the ordinary paddy lands in Burma which are assessed at acre rates.⁵ According to the Allahabad High Court the word "estate" cannot be taken to mean isolated plots of land which fall short of being the share of a co-sharer of a malhal.⁶ Where a land is an estate to which the Section applies, the crops attached to the land⁷ and trees growing thereon⁸ will go with the land and can be dealt with by the Collector in the same way as he can deal with the land.

4. Partition decree, meaning of.—A decree for the partition of an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue must be drawn up as provided by O. 20 R. 18 clause (1); that is, it should declare rights of the several parties interested in the property but should direct the actual partition to be done by the Collector or gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in that behalf. It is a joint declaration of the rights of persons interested in the property sought to be partitioned and is a decree, when properly drawn up in favour of each share-holder or set of share-holders having a distinct share.⁹ It has been held by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that where the decree gives no such directions as are required by O. 20 R. 18 clause (1), it is incumbent on the plaintiff to have it corrected within the time allowed by law, and if this is not done, he cannot ask the Court to transfer the proceedings to the Collector.¹⁰ The partition contemplated by this Section is not confined to a mere division of the lands but includes also the delivery of the shares to the respective allottees, thus completely carrying out the partition.¹¹

5. "Shall be made by the Collector."—As has been seen in Note 2, the Civil Courts have, under this Section, jurisdiction to try and decide suits for partition or separate possession of estates of the kind contemplated by the Section but have no power to execute the decrees passed in such suits.¹² Even the initial application for an

Civil Court itself.² In respect of some orders and acts the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is expressly excluded.³ As to the Civil Court's power to control the execution, by the Collector, of the decree passed under this Section, see Note 7 above.

9. Decree for partition, when and how may be passed.—For the form of decree to be passed under the Section, see O. 20 R. 18, clause (1).

Where a decree declaring a right to partition has not been given effect to and the decree has, by lapse of time or otherwise, become unenforceable, it is open to the parties, if they still continue joint, to sue afresh for partition.¹ Similarly, where a suit for partition is dismissed for default, a fresh suit for partition can be maintained notwithstanding O. 9 R. 5 of the Code.² The reason is that the right to enforce partition is a legal incident of a joint tenancy and as long as such tenancy exists, so long may any one of the joint tenants apply to the Court for partition of the joint property.³ But where the shares have been separated as per the Civil Court's decree, the decree is final and cannot be re-opened by a fresh suit.⁴

All interests in estates such as subordinate tenures of a fractional share of an estate⁵ or the estate of a Hindu widow⁶ can be partitioned provided there is no incon-venience caused thereby to the other shares or persons owning interests in that estate. But the partition should be complete, that is, should embrace all the properties in which the plaintiff is interested⁷ and should be effected between all persons interested therein.⁸ As has been seen already in Note 4 above, the decree under this Section is a joint decree in favour of all the sharers. It follows that for purposes of limitation steps taken by one of them will save limitation in favour of all.⁹ There can, however, be no decree in favour of sharers who do not agree to, or ask for, a partition of their own shares.¹⁰ Nor can there be a decree in favour of any sharer where the plaintiff's suit is itself dismissed.¹¹

Where there is a decree in favour of the plaintiff and none in favour of the defendants, the latter's shares cannot be partitioned in execution of the decree.¹²

ARREST AND DETENTION

55. [S. 336.] (1) A judgment-debtor may be arrested³ in execution of a decree at any hour and on any day,⁴ and shall, as soon as practicable,⁵ be brought before the Court, and his detention may be in the civil prison of the district in which the Court ordering the detention is situate, or, where such civil prison does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint⁶ for the detention of persons ordered by the Courts of such district to be detained :

Provided, firstly, that, for the purpose of making an arrest under this section, no dwelling-house shall be entered after sunset and before sunrise :

Provided, secondly, that no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open⁷ unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto, but when the officer authorized to make the arrest has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may break open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe the judgment-debtor is to be found :

Provided, thirdly, that if the room is in the actual occupancy of a woman who is not the judgment-debtor⁸ and who according to the customs of the country does not appear in public, the officer authorized to make the arrest shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw, and, after allowing a reasonable time for her to withdraw and giving her reasonable facility for withdrawing, may enter the room for the purpose of making the arrest :

Provided, fourthly, that, where the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested, is a decree for the payment of money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

(2) The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that any person or class of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience⁹ to the public shall not be liable to arrest in execution of a decree otherwise judgment-debtor unless asked to do so.⁷ An arrest is not accomplished unless the officer touches the person of the judgment-debtor.^{7a}

Where a warrant of arrest has been executed by a person authorised to do so by Nazir, the fact that the endorsement was subsequently made irregularly by the Nazir will not invalidate the arrest.⁸

4. "At any hour and on any day."—An arrest is not illegal because it was made on a Sunday¹ or on a day on which the Court was closed.²

5. "As soon as practicable."—It is the duty of the officer arresting a judgment-debtor to bring him before the Court "as soon as practicable." But this does not mean that, if the Court is closed for the vacation, he should take the judgment-debtor to the Court building or to the Judge of the Court at his private residence. The judgment-debtor should be produced at the next sitting of the Court, and in the meantime the arresting officer is empowered to confine him even in the decree-holder's house.¹

6. "In any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint."—The imprisonment of the arrested person must be either in the civil prison of the district in which the Court ordering the detention is situate, or in any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint. Where a debtor committed to a particular jail is handed over by the officer arresting him of his own motion, to the officer in charge of a different jail, the imprisonment is unlawful and the prisoner is entitled to be discharged.¹

For a list of places appointed by the Provincial Government under this Section, see the undermentioned notifications.²

7. Breaking open of outer door.—Under Section 336 of the old Code no outer door of a dwelling-house could be broken open under any circumstances. Under the present Section, the outer door may be broken open if—

(1) such a dwelling house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor, and

(2) he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto.

The object of this change in the law is to prevent vexatious forms of resistance to execution which constantly obstruct decree-holders in the execution of their decrees.¹

8. Where room is in the occupancy of a woman, not a judgment-debtor.—The third proviso to sub-section (1) only applies where the room is in the occupancy of a woman who is herself the judgment-debtor against whom a warrant of arrest was issued, as, for instance, in execution of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights,¹ the proviso has no application.²

9. Exemption of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience.—This sub-section is new and is intended to cover the cases of certain persons or classes of persons whose summary arrest might, as in the case of railway servants, be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public.¹ But, where a suit is brought against such persons, the fact that they could not be arrested in execution is no ground for not passing a decree against them.²

10. Court's duty to inform judgment-debtor that he may apply to be declared insolvent.—Where a judgment-debtor is arrested and brought before the Court, it is the duty of the Court to inform him that he may apply to be declared insolvent.¹ This, however, is unnecessary where he has already applied in insolvency and the application is pending.² The Court has, in such a case, a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force if the judgment-debtor furnishes security for his appearance when called upon.³ Similarly, in a case where the judgment-debtor has already applied in insolvency and his application has been dismissed by the Insolvency Court and he is re-arrested, the executing Court need not inform him that he may apply to be declared insolvent, or take the other steps indicated in sub-section (3). The reason is that until the order of dismissal of the insolvency application is set aside with the permission of the Insolvency Court the judgment-debtor cannot apply again to be declared an insolvent.⁴

The provisions of sub-section (3) or the mere fact of arrest will not, however, entitle the debtor to be adjudged an insolvent except in conformity with the provisions of the insolvency law.⁵

Under the Codes of 1877 and 1882, the provisions corresponding to this sub-section did not apply to the presidency towns⁶ nor to Provinces which were not notified by the Local Governments.⁷

11. Security bond to be given by the judgment-debtor.—This Section applies only where the judgment-debtor is under arrest. Where he is already committed to jail, he can only be discharged under Section 58, infra.¹

The judgment-debtor brought under arrest must furnish security—

1. that he will, within one month, apply to be declared insolvent, and clear that the surety is not discharged by the mere filing of the insolvency application by the judgment-debtor, but that his liability continues until a final order is made on the petition in insolvency.²

The surety will be liable (1) if the judgment-debtor fails to apply in time to be declared an insolvent,^{2a} or (2) if he fails to appear whenever called upon to do so.³

Application within one month to be declared an insolvent. — A surety is not discharged by a petition by the judgment-debtor to be declared an insolvent where it is not in proper form and not within the prescribed time.⁴ Where a judgment-debtor presented an insolvency application not in a proper form and not accompanied with the necessary deposit, and the same was returned for amendment but was not re-presented thereafter, the surety was held not discharged from his liability.⁵ Where, however, a surety bond is given undertaking that the judgment-debtor would "continue the insolvency proceedings," the liability continues only up to the adjudication. The fact that after adjudication it is annulled for the default of the insolvent will not render the surety liable under the bond.⁶ A Court has no jurisdiction to extend the period of one month fixed by the Section. The period being one fixed by law, Section 148 has no application to it.⁶

Appearance whenever called upon. — A security bond under this Section is in the nature of a continuing guarantee and the surety is entitled to produce the judgment-debtor before the Court and request it to absolve him from further liability under the bond.⁷ But the production of the judgment-debtor at a time when it is impossible for the Court or the decree-holder to take any steps to have the judgment-debtor taken into custody does not amount to his appearance when called upon to appear and the surety will not be discharged thereby.⁸ Where the judgment-debtor dies before breach of either of the conditions of the bond, the surety is discharged thereby.⁹ But where he dies after the breach of any one of the conditions, as for instance where he fails to apply within one month and then dies, the liability of the surety continues and he is not discharged.¹⁰

Under the old Code, the security had to be "that he will appear when called upon" and it was held that this referred to the particular execution application in which the judgment-debtor was arrested, so that if that application was dismissed or struck off, the surety was discharged.¹¹ Under the present Section the security must be "that he will appear, when called upon in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested." This makes it clear that a surety will not be released by the dismissal of the particular execution application¹² especially where a breach of the conditions of the bond had occurred before the dismissal.¹³ But, where, after the execution of the security bond, the judgment-debtor applied to the Debt Conciliation Board to settle his debts including the debt due to the decree-holder and on production of the certificate showing that such application had been made, the execution case was struck off as infructuous and the order was accepted without protest by the decree-holder, it was held that both parties must be considered to have accepted the position that the execution proceedings had come to an end and that the matter would be dealt with, thereafter, by the Debt Conciliation Board, i.e., in other words, that the surety bond was regarded as cancelled and it was not thereafter open to the decree-holder, when he had refused to accept the offer made by the judgment-debtor before the Debt Conciliation Board, to ask the Court to realise the security.^{13a}

The non-production of the judgment-debtor owing to illness which renders his attendance physically impossible without risk to health or life is a valid excuse and does not render the surety liable on the bond.¹⁴ Nor can he be proceeded against while the proceedings in insolvency filed by the judgment-debtor are pending and there is no other default.¹⁵ See also the undermentioned cases.^{15a}

15. Damages for wrongful arrest.—In a suit for damages for wrongful arrest in execution of a decree, the plaintiff must show—

- (a) that the original action out of which the alleged injury arose was decided in his favour,
- (b) that the arrest was procured maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, and
- (c) that he has suffered some collateral wrong.¹

16. Insolvency, when a protection from arrest.—A judgment-debtor is not protected from arrest by the mere fact of his having applied in insolvency whether the debt for which he is sought to be arrested is mentioned in the schedule or not.¹ Even an order of adjudication will not protect the debtor in respect of debts not mentioned in the insolvency petition.² In respect of debts scheduled in the insolvency petition, there is, by the mere fact of adjudication, a qualified protection inasmuch as the debtor cannot be proceeded against without the leave of the Insolvency Court.³ Where a protection order has been made in favour of the insolvent under Section 31 of the Insolvency Act, the debtor will have an unqualified protection against all proceedings in respect of the scheduled debts.⁴

17. Application for arrest, if a step-in-aid of execution.—An application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor will be an application for execution and will give a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.¹ An application by the heirs of the decree-holder will also be a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of the said Article 182 even though the heirs have not obtained a succession certificate and have not been placed on the record.²

18. Appeal and revision from orders under the Section.—An order against the judgment-debtor or against the surety under this Section is an order falling within Section 47 and is appealable as a decree.¹ So also is an order against a decree-holder refusing simultaneous execution against the person and property of the judgment-debtor.²

As mentioned in Note 13, when a condition of the bond is broken, the option of proceeding against the surety or the judgment-debtor lies with the Court. When the Judge exercises the option in favour of the surety, the matter cannot be subsequently re-opened before him. If he does so, and passes fresh orders, they are passed without jurisdiction and can be set aside in revision.³

Prohibition of arrest or detention of women in execution of decree for money.

1. Scope of Section.—Before the Code of 1908 was enacted, there was no rule prohibiting the arrest of women in execution of decrees and a purdannahin woman was held not exempt from arrest.¹ Under the present Section a Court cannot arrest a woman in execution of a money decree.² But, can a woman be arrested in execution of a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights? Under O. 21 R. 33 as it originally stood, such arrest was legal.³ But after that Rule was amended by Act XXIX of 1923 a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights, whether against the husband or the wife, cannot be executed by the arrest of the judgment-debtor.

Although this Section exempts a woman from arrest in execution of a decree for money, yet where in a suit for money a woman is the plaintiff, she may be required under O. 25 R. 1 (3) to give security for the defendant's costs.

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the main changes effected : —
(1) Clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) correspond to Section 342 of the old Code, but the phraseology has been changed with a view to make it clear that the Court has no power to fix shorter periods than those mentioned in the Section. See Note 6 below.
(2) The proviso to sub-section (1) and sub-section (2) correspond to Section 341 of the old Code, clauses (a) to (d).

2. "Subsistence allowance." — The cost of clothing, etc., of the judgment-debtor, required to be supplied by the decree-holder under Section 33 of the Act, is not "subsistence allowance" under Section 58 which includes only the monthly allowance fixed by scale under Section 57 of the Code.¹

3. Omission to pay subsistence allowance will result in release of judgment-debtor. — On failure of the decree-holder to pay subsistence allowance the judgment-debtor should be released.¹ A payment cannot be considered to have been made to the officer in charge of the prison until it actually reaches his hands. Hence, though the subsistence allowance has been sent by money-order to such officer where, sufficiently early to reach him in time, it does not actually reach him in time, there is an "omission to pay" within Section 58 (b) (iv).² Where a judgment-debtor is released on the application of the decree-holder the latter is entitled to a refund of the balance of the subsistence money advanced by him that remains in Court at the time of the debtor's release.³

4. Person released from detention under this Section cannot be re-arrested.

— A judgment-debtor released from detention under this Section cannot be re-arrested in execution of the same decree.¹ Hence a judgment-debtor cannot, in execution of an instalment decree, be arrested and imprisoned separately for default in respect of each instalment.² But the immunity from re-arrest exists only when the judgment-debtor has been actually *detained in prison*³ and not where he has been merely arrested. Hence, where after arrest the judgment-debtor is released before actual imprisonment, he can be re-arrested in execution of the decree.³ But where the warrant of commitment to jail has been made out, a discharge of the judgment-debtor whilst in confinement in the court-house is a release from "detention" within the meaning of this Section.⁴ Another condition for the applicability of the immunity from re-arrest is that the release from detention must be under this Section. Thus, a debtor who has been released owing to a mistake of the jail authorities in sending the demand for clothing under Section 33 of the Prisons Act to a wrong address is not exempt from re-arrest under this Section.⁵ See also Note 5. A Court cannot direct the re-arrest of a judgment-debtor without any petition or motion of the decree-holder.⁶

5. Interim protection order, effect of.

— Where a judgment-debtor who has been arrested and imprisoned in execution of a decree applies to be adjudicated an insolvent and obtains an interim protection order and is released, is he liable to be re-arrested under the decree? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. The High Courts of Allahabad¹ and Bombay² take the view that the judgment-debtor is liable to be re-arrested in such a case as, according to them, the only cases in which the judgment-debtor is entitled to exemption from re-arrest are those enumerated in Section 58. But the Calcutta High Court has taken the opposite view and held that once the judgment-debtor is released from imprisonment in execution of a decree he cannot be re-arrested under the same decree.³ It is submitted that the view taken in Bombay and Allahabad is more in consonance with the language of the Section.

6. Period of detention.—Under this Section, the Court has no power at its discretion to fix shorter periods of imprisonment than those prescribed in the Section.¹ Where the defendant is under imprisonment under O. 38 R. 4 of the Code, such imprisonment suffered after the date of the decree must be deemed as imprisonment in execution of the decree and the period of imprisonment after that date must be taken into consideration in calculating the period prescribed by Section 58.² Where a judgment-debtor is released, not under this Section, but under a mistake of the jail authorities and he is re-arrested, the period of imprisonment under the new warrant should include the period of imprisonment already suffered under the old warrant.³

7. Release does not discharge debtor from debt.—A release under this Section does not discharge the debtor from the debt. His property remains liable to attachment and sale¹ and he can also be adjudicated an insolvent for the debt.² Under the Agra Tenancy Act,³ where a judgment-debtor has been released from detention and the amount due under the decree does not exceed Rs. 100, the Court may declare him absolved from liability for payment of money, and such liability shall thereupon be extinguished except in regard to liability to ejectment.

8. Contempt of Court.—This Section does not apply to cases of imprisonment for contempt of Court,¹ the power of the Court to imprison for contempt being irrespective of the Code.²

9. Application for arrest, if saves limitation.—An application for the arrest of a judgment-debtor in contravention of this Section does not give a fresh starting point of limitation.¹

10. Miscellaneous.—A Court will release a debtor where the jailor holds no warrant¹ but not where the warrant is only informal.²

A return to a writ of habeas corpus must be taken to be true and cannot be controverted by affidavit;³ but where a debtor who is arrested and imprisoned under a warrant of the Presidency Small Cause Court is brought before the High Court on a writ of habeas corpus, he is entitled to show that he was privileged from arrest, the Presidency Small Cause Court not being a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction with the High Court but subordinate to it.⁴ Under the Oudh Rent Act⁵ the imprisonment and attachment may, subject to the provisions of this Section, be continued until the party complies with the terms of the decree.

Synopsis

- 1. Discretion of Court in issuing warrant.
- 2. On the ground of serious illness.

1. Discretion of Court in issuing warrant. — The provisions of this Section are based on humanitarian grounds and if a judgment-debtor is suffering from serious illness, the Court would be well advised in ordering his release so as to escape from the moral responsibility in case anything should happen to him on being sent to jail. A Court is not bound in every case to issue a warrant for arrest and if it has reason to believe that the judgment-debtor is not in a fit state of health to undergo confinement, it would act wisely in issuing a notice to him to show cause in the first instance.^{1a} The discretion exercised in issuing a warrant of arrest will not ordinarily be interfered with in appeal.²

2. On the ground of serious illness. — Asthma and indigestion do not constitute "serious illness" sufficient to enable the Court to cancel a warrant of arrest issued against the judgment-debtor.¹

60. (1) The following property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, namely, lands, houses or other buildings, goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hundis, promissory notes, Government securities, bonds or other securities for money, debts, shares in a corporation and, save as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, moveable or immoveable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which, or the profits of which, he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person in trust for him or on his behalf:

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale, namely:—

- (a) the necessary wearing-apparel, cooking vessels, beds and bedding of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children, and such personal ornaments as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman; (b) tools of artisans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such, and such portion of agricultural produce or of any class of agricultural produce as may have been declared to be free from liability under the provisions of the next following section;
- (c) houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) belonging to an agriculturist and occupied by him;

(d) books of account;

(e) a mere right to sue for damages;

(f) any right of personal service;

(g) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Crown, or payable out of any service family pension fund notified in the Official Gazette by the Central Government or the Provincial Government in this behalf, and political pensions;

(h) the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind; and salary, to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary;

(i) the salary of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary:

Provided that, where the whole or any part of the portion of such salary liable to attachment has been under attachment, whether continuously or intermittently for a total period of twenty-four months, such portion shall be exempt from attachment until the expiry of a further period of twelve months and, where such attachment has been made in execution of one and the same decree, shall be finally exempt from attachment in execution of that decree;

(j) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Indian Army Act, 1911, or the Burma Army Act applies, or of persons other than commissioned officers to whom the Naval Discipline Act as modified by the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, applies;

(k) all compulsory deposits and other sums in or derived from any fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1925, for the time being applies in so far as they are declared by the said Act not to be liable to attachment;

(l) any allowance forming part of the emoluments of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority which the [appropriate Government] may by notification in the [Official Gazette] declare to be exempt from attachment, and any subsistence grant or allowance made to any such officer or servant while under suspension;

(m) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest;

(n) a right to future maintenance;

(o) any allowance declared by any Indian law to be exempt from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree; and,

 (p) where the judgment-debtor is a person liable for the payment of land-revenue, any moveable property which, under any law for the time being applicable to him, is exempt from sale for the recovery of an arrear of such revenue.

Explanation 1.—The particulars mentioned in clauses (g), (h), (i), (j), (l) and (o) are exempt from attachment or sale whether before or after they are actually payable, [and in the case of salary other than salary of a public officer or a servant of a railway company or local authority the attachable portion thereof is exempt from attachment until it is actually payable.]

Explanation 2.—In clauses (h) and (i), “salary” means the total monthly emoluments, excluding any allowance declared exempt from attachment under the provisions of clause (l), derived by a person from his employment whether on duty or on leave.

Explanation 3.—In clause (l) “appropriate Government” means —

(i) as respects any public officer in the service of the Central Government, or any servant of a Federal Railway or of a cantonment authority or of the port authority of a major port, the Central Government;
 (ii) as respects any public officer employed in connexion with the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, the Crown Representative;
 (iii) as respects any other public officer or a servant of any other railway or local authority, the Provincial Government.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed — to exempt houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof and the lands immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) from attachment or sale in execution of decrees for rent of any such house, building, site or land.

Retrospective effect of amendments.

Under Section 3 of the Amending Act IX of 1937 referred to above, the Amendments made by Section 2 of that Act and referred to above have no effect in respect of any proceedings arising out of any suit instituted before the 1st June 1937.¹

3. Scope and applicability of the Section.—This Section declares what properties are liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree and what properties are exempt therefrom.² It classifies the attachable properties under two heads:

1. lands, houses or other buildings, etc., which are specifically mentioned, and
2. all other saleable property belonging to the judgment-debtor or over which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, except in the cases specified in the proviso.

The Section does not, however, affect any special or local law under which properties attachable under this Section are declared to be not attachable in execution of decrees.³ Thus, the properties which have been declared by the following enactments to be not attachable cannot be attached even though such properties are not exempted from attachment under this Section:—

1. The Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), Section 192 (h).—Exempting from attachment and sale the manure stocked by an agriculturist.
2. The Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Schedule II, Section 60.—Exempting from attachment and sale the manure stocked by an agriculturist.

See also the cases cited below.^{10a}

A mere right to sue is not 'property' but is only a title to recover future property.^{10b} A claim, therefore, to the right and interest of X in a future award which might be made on a reference to arbitration of matters in dispute between X and Y is not a claim to "property."¹¹

5. "All other saleable property."—The property, in order to be attachable under this Section, must be "saleable property."¹² The word "saleable" in this Section means saleable by court auction at a compulsory sale.¹³ For this purpose it is firstly essential that the property should be in existence. Uncertain, future and fluctuating profits derivable from a property,¹⁴ or an indeterminate interest in properties varying according to contingencies, as for example, the interest of a Buddhist couple in marriage property,¹⁵ is not 'saleable property.' Secondly it is also essential that the property must, in law, be capable of being transferred. Where it is so transferable it is saleable property.¹⁶ Property in which the judgment-debtor has no legally transferable

6. "Belonging to the judgment-debtor or over which or the profits of which he has a disposing power." — All saleable properties belonging to a judgment-debtor may be attached unless such attachment is prohibited by any law or the proviso to this Section. For instances of saleable property, see the undermentioned cases.¹

Even though a property may not belong to the judgment-debtor it may still be attachable if he has a disposing power over it which he may exercise for his own benefit.² Thus, a Hindu father has a disposing power over the whole of the joint family property for the purpose of satisfying his personal debts under certain circumstances.³ Similarly, a Hindu coparcener in Madras has a disposing power over his share of the joint family property.⁴ So also the karnavan and the senior amindavan of a Malabar turwad have a disposing power over the turwad properties which they may exercise for the purpose of satisfying debts contracted for the benefit of the turwad.⁵ But on partition between a Hindu father and his sons the father will cease to have disposing power over the shares allotted to his sons.^{3a}

A Hindu widow has no disposing power over property which she is entitled to enjoy for her life but which she is not entitled to alienate.⁴ See also cases under clause (n) below.

A person in whose favour a retiring gratuity or bonus has been declared by a railway company, but which has not been completed by either a registered document or payment, has no disposing power over it so as to make it attachable in execution of a decree against him.⁵

A member of a mutual benefit fund or society has no disposing power over the monies which by rules of the fund or society are payable after the death of the member to his nominee or legal heir.^{3a}

A person who holds properties in trust for another person or for other purposes has no disposing power over them⁶ and the corpus of the trust property in the hands of the trustee cannot be attached in execution.⁷ Where X effects an insurance policy on his own life and it is expressed to be for the benefit of his wife or of his wife and children, such expression amounts, in cases to which the Married Women's Property Act applies, to a trust in their favour, and consequently X has no disposing power over the policy so as to enable his creditors to attach it in execution of a decree against him.⁸ In cases to which the said Act does not apply, the simple declaration, (in the absence of an assignment under Section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act, or a declaration of trust under Section 5 of the Indian Trusts Act) does not create a trust in their favour, and X has a disposing power over the policy which he can exercise for his own benefit and the policy can consequently be attached in execution.⁹

A person who has transferred his property to another has no longer a disposing power over it.^{9a} Thus, money deposited under decree to the credit of a decree-holder who has already assigned his interest in the decree to another cannot be attached by the creditors of the decree-holder unless the transfer is proved to be not bona fide.¹⁰ Similarly, where X, a contractor, deposits materials on A's premises and the value

An auctioneer has no disposing power over the sale proceeds of goods sold on behalf of his client, except to the extent of his commission.¹²

For other cases in which the judgment-debtor has no disposing power, see the undermentioned cases.¹³

The words "belonging to the judgment-debtor" in the Section do not mean "belonging to the judgment-debtor alone" and a judgment-debtor's share in property which belongs to him and other persons jointly is also liable to attachment and sale under this Section.¹⁴

7. Debts.—A 'debt' is a sum of money which is now payable or will become payable in the future by reason of a present obligation.¹⁵ In other words it means an actually existing debt, i.e., a perfected and absolute debt.¹⁶ Thus, arrears of rent¹⁷ or other monies¹⁸ which have become due are 'debts' and can be attached and sold in execution. But a sum of money which may or may not become due or the payment of which depends upon contingencies which may or may not happen is not a 'debt'.¹⁹ Thus, where A agrees to pay B Rs. 5,000 on a mortgage of B's property and pays Rs. 3,000 in advance, the balance of Rs. 2,000 agreed to be paid by A cannot be attached by a creditor of B. The reason is that the sum may not be paid by A in which case B will be entitled, not to a specific performance of the agreement, but to damages.²⁰ Similarly, a claim for profits⁷ or rent⁸ or salary or annuity⁹ or other claim¹⁰ not yet due but which might become due in the future is not a 'debt'.

It is important to remember that a debt may become due though payable in the future.¹¹

Illustrations

1. A is entitled to get a monthly allowance from B payable on the 1st of every month. X, a judgment-creditor of A, applies on the 21st December for the issue of an attachment (prohibitory order) in respect of a half of the allowance for the month of December. Held that the attachment could be validly made, inasmuch as the allowance for three weeks in December had already become an existing debt though payable on the first of January.¹² The same principle will apply to interest payable at fixed periods.

2. A deposits certain moneys with B as security for the due performance and completion of a contract entered into by him. X, who has obtained a decree against A, can attach the amount deposited as money due and owing to A though it is not payable to him till the completion of the contract, and may even be forfeited.¹³

Where the money is due as, for instance, by an agent or a vendee to his principal or vendor, it will be a "debt" though the exact amount due is not ascertained at the time of the attachment.¹⁴ But a mere claim for unliquidated damages is not a debt.¹⁵

A claim over which no Court in British India has jurisdiction is not a debt liable to be attached, but the mere circumstance that the garnishee is, at the time of the application for execution, beyond the limits of British India would not, of itself, render the debt not liable to be attached.¹⁶

The word "debts" in this Section includes share of debts. A judgment-debtor's share in a debt due to the judgment-debtor and other persons jointly can, therefore, be attached and sold in execution.¹⁷

8. Necessary wearing apparel, etc. — Clause (a). — "The necessary wearing apparel of a person cannot be attached in execution." The mangalsutra worn by a Hindu married woman cannot, according to Hindu religious usage, be parted with by her during the lifetime of her husband, and cannot therefore be attached in execution.² Cooking vessels include vessels required for cooking operations, such as a thal and a gajra.

9. Tools of artisans, implements of husbandry, etc. — Clause (b). — An 'artisan' is a person engaged in a mechanical employment. Musicians and washermen are not 'artisans' and musical instruments are not 'tools of artisans'.¹ Similarly, the instruments of a surgeon or a doctor do not come within this clause.¹ But a sewing machine is a 'tool of an artisan'.² In the undermentioned case³ it was held that an artisan is not merely a person who is engaged in mechanical employment but a person who works in the production of some commodity, that whatever he uses for the production of the commodity may be considered as his tools, and that therefore the utensils used by a sweetmeat vendor for preparation of sweets are tools of an artisan. But a person will not be an 'artisan' within the meaning of this Section unless he employs himself in a handicraft personally and depends for his living essentially on the proceeds derived from that handicraft.⁴

Charaks, kachals and planks of timber used by an agriculturist for pressing sugarcane grown on his field are implements of husbandry and are exempt from attachment.⁵

The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the term "implements of husbandry" should be interpreted in a fair and reasonable spirit and not in a narrow sense and that the term will include an engine or a water-pump as being necessary for the agriculturist to irrigate his fields.⁶ But, the Nagpur High Court has taken the view that implements would mean such instruments as the agriculturist handles in the course of his agricultural work and as driving a motor tractor cannot be regarded as manual work, it cannot be regarded as an "implement of husbandry."⁷

Such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the Court's opinion, be necessary to enable an agriculturist to make a living are not attachable.⁸ Even the fodder required for the cattle is exempt from attachment.⁹ The fact that the cattle have been pledged as security for a debt will not prevent the operation of this clause.¹⁰

But it is necessary that the Court should express its opinion that such cattle or seed-grain are necessary to enable the judgment-debtor to earn his livelihood, before the exemption can operate,⁷ and if the necessity is disputed, the executing Court must recent decision,"¹² expressed the view that the question whether a person is an agriculturist or not is a question turning on the source of the income or livelihood but on the nature of the employment or occupation and that the sole test for determining whether a person is an agriculturist or not is whether his occupation is that of a person cultivating the soil either personally or through servants whose activities he directs. The Allahabad High Court has also held in the undermentioned case¹³ that the term 'agriculturist' in clause (c) refers to an occupation. "The Lahore High Court has, in a recent Full Bench decision,"¹⁴ held that the true test is whether a man personally engages himself in tilling the soil and whether this occupation is essential to his maintenance. A person who lets out his land to another for cultivation, reserving either money or produce as rent is not an agriculturist," the reason being that in such a case neither his occupation nor the chief source of his livelihood will be the cultivation of land. A person, however, does not cease to be an agriculturist by the mere fact that he has obtained permission to build houses on a portion of the land which was formerly his occupancy tenancy,"¹⁵ or because he has turned an Akali.¹⁶ Nor does the fact that a person owns a vast extent of land which he cultivates himself or through servants make him any the less an agriculturist.¹⁷

The house of an agriculturist is exempt both from attachment and sale. Hence, where a judgment-debtor is not an agriculturist at the date of the attachment of his house but by a change of circumstances becomes one subsequently and is an agriculturist at the time of the proceedings for the sale of the house, the house cannot be sold in execution.¹⁸

Where a person is proved to be an agriculturist, the houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by him are exempted from attachment.¹⁹ The exemption from attachment under this clause depends upon the property being that of an agriculturist at the time when the decree-holder seeks to execute the decree against it. Thus, where the decree-holder seeks to attach a dwelling-house belonging to the deceased debtor in the hands of his legal representative, the legal representative can claim exemption if he occupies the same as an agriculturist.²⁰ But, the Lahore High Court

As has been seen in Note 3 above that this Section does not apply to mortgage degrees. Where, therefore, the house of an agriculturist is specifically mortgaged by him, the house can be sold in execution of the mortgage decree,²¹ unless it is appurtenant to an agricultural holding which is not transferable by law.²²

The exemption in this clause being intended only for the benefit of the judgment-debtor, it can be waved by him.^{22a} Thus, where a judgment-debtor agriculturist agrees to give his house as security for the amount of the decree²³ or agrees, in consideration of time being given to him, that his house may be sold in default of payment within the extended time, he cannot claim the exemption subsequently.²⁴ Similarly, where the judgment-debtor does not claim the exemption during the execution proceedings, he cannot raise it in a suit for possession by the purchaser.²⁵ But it is not necessary for him to raise his objections at the earliest possible stage in the execution proceedings.²⁶

Under Section 266 of the old Code only the materials of a house occupied by an agriculturist were exempted from attachment.²⁷ But it was held that even a house could not be attached if it was occupied by an agriculturist as such.²⁸ The present Section has now been drafted in conformity with this view.

See the cases cited below²⁹ as to the effect of the amendment of this clause by the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act of 1934, Section 35.

saleable property and could not be seized in execution.¹ It was, however, held that the Court could require the judgment-debtor to produce them in Court.² The provision exempting books of account from attachment and sale was introduced in the Code of 1877, and is now incorporated in clause (d) of this Section.

12. Right to sue for damages — Clause (e). — It has been seen in Note 4 above that a mere right to sue is not 'property' at all and cannot be attached and sold in execution.¹ It follows that a mere right to sue for damages cannot be attached and sold² and if sold, the purchaser will not get any right or title thereby.³ It has however been held by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that the words 'a mere right to sue for damages' are restricted to damages arising from bodily or mental suffering or injury to the person or reputation of the debtor and not to damages for breaches of contract.⁴ The case was one under the Insolvency Act and the question was whether a right to sue for damages for breach of contract vested in the Official Receiver. It is submitted that the decision must be regarded as being applicable only to the facts of the particular case, and cannot be taken to lay down the correct law as to the interpretation of this clause.

A right to claim mesne profits for wrongful possession is a right to sue for damages, it can be attached.⁵ Where, however, a decree has been passed awarding a right to get a reconveyance and possession of property which has been sold with an agreement of reconveyance is property and is attachable in execution.⁷

13. Right of personal service — Clause (f). — A right of personal service cannot be attached and sold in execution.² Similarly, a writ which is a priestly office by virtue of which certain personal services are performed on behalf of pilgrims,³ or a bir mahabrahman or bir jajman, which is a right to officiate at the funeral ceremonies of Hindus dying within a particular locality,⁴ cannot be attached and sold. A right to receive the offerings made at a temple is liable to attachment and sale in execution when such a right is independent of an obligation to render services of a personal nature such as officiating at the worship.⁷

Where it is shown that there is a custom to transfer by private treaty palas for worship of certain deities, there will be no objection to transfer the same by execution, limiting the class of persons entitled to bid and eventually purchase the property.⁸

14. Stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners — Clause (g). — The word "pension" in this clause must be construed as having the same meaning as it has under Section 11 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871).¹ Under that Section two essentials are necessary in order to constitute a grant a 'pension' —

1. it must be a periodical allowance, and
2. it must be a grant, not in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite or office, but on political considerations or on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance.²

A grant of a sum of money or land revenue³ or of a zamindary⁴ or other lands is not a pension, for it is not a periodical allowance. A grant of an annual sum of money made by Government as compensation for resumption of the grantee's land is not a pension,⁵ for it is not granted on political grounds or for past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance. Similarly, a toda giras hag is not a pension as it is a grant in respect of a right, privilege, perquisite or office.⁷ A malikana

allowance payable from a Government treasury is in the nature of a pension and cannot be attached in execution of a money decree.^{7a}

A pension granted by the Government by virtue of a treaty obligation contracted with another State⁸ or for other reasons of State⁹ is a political pension and is exempt from attachment under this Section.¹⁰ Thus, a wasika allowance which is guaranteed by the British Government by the Treaty of the 17th August 1825 in consideration of the loan of 1825 by the then Ruler of Oudh, is a political pension.¹¹ Similarly, the pensions granted by the Government to the descendants of the families who at one time occupied the throne of Ceylon,¹² or to the members of the Mysore family,¹³ or to the descendants of the Nawab of Carnatic,¹⁴ or pensions granted by a foreign State by arrangement with the Government of India to a deposed Maharaja,¹⁵ are all political pensions.

A jaghir may be a political pension,¹⁶ but there is no initial presumption that it is so¹⁷ and the Court should inquire, in each case, into the nature of the jaghir and see whether it is liable to attachment.¹⁸ Where the jaghir is in the nature of a pension it will be exempt from attachment.¹⁹

Political pensions and other Government pensions are exempt from attachment so long as they are in the hands of the Government, notwithstanding the fact that the amounts have become due.²⁰ The character of the fund remains unchanged so long as it remains unpaid in the hands of the Government,²¹ but once the money is received by the pensioner it becomes subject to all the incidents attached to his properties and can be attached like any other monies in his hands.²²

Pensions not granted by Government are private pensions.²³ These are not exempted from attachment but they are attachable only as 'debts' or as 'property belonging to the judgment-debtor.²⁴ It follows therefore that they could be attached only to the extent of the sums that have become due.²⁵

15. Wages of labourers, etc., and salaries of private employees —

Clause (h).—This clause was substituted by Section 2 of Act IX of 1937 for the old clause (1). The old clause only applied to the wages of labourers and domestic servants and there was no provision for exempting the salary of a person in private employment. Hence, the salary of such a person was not exempt from attachment to any extent.¹ The present clause (h) confers such exemption in respect of the salaries of private employees also, to the extent indicated in the clause.² But, under Section 3 of Act IX of 1937, the provision as to salary cannot apply to proceedings arising out of suits instituted before 1st June 1937.³ O. 21 R. 48 does not apply to the salary of a private servant. Hence, it was held before the amendment of the Section by Act IX of 1937 that such salary could be attached only as a debt after it had fallen due.^{3a} Explanation I now makes it clear that the attachable portion of it can be attached only after it has become payable. For meaning of "salary," see Note 22b.

A person is a 'labourer' within the meaning of this clause who earns his daily bread by personal manual labour, or in occupations which require little or no art, skill or previous education. A person who spins cotton and receives wages according to the quantity spun is a 'labourer.' Similarly, coolies employed on railways or other works and paid by the number of earth carried are 'labourers.'⁴

16. Salary of public officers, etc. — Clause (i). — This clause has been substituted for the old clause (i) by Act IX of 1937. See Note 2 ante. But the new clause has no application if the proceeding for attachment had arisen out of a suit instituted before 1st June 1937 (See Section 3 of Act IX of 1937).^{1a} Under the Code of 1859 there was no exemption to any extent in regard to the salaries of public servants and the whole of such salary was attachable as a debt when the salary had fallen due.¹ The later Codes provided for a partial exemption of such salary but the unexempted portion could be attached.² A special procedure was also provided for the attachment of salaries in such cases, so that they need not be attached as debts after they had fallen due but could be attached in advance.^{2a} (See O. 21 R. 48.) (See also Explanation I.) The object of the provision for exemption for enable public officers, etc., to maintain themselves and their families in a suitable manner. That the debtor is a European and that the pay is not large enough to maintain his family is, however, no ground for refusing attachment of the attachable portion of his salary.³

Clause (h) now extends the exemption from attachment to salaries of private servants also. (See Note 15.) As the provisions of O. 21 R. 48 do not apply to the salary of a private servant, it was held before the amendment of the Section by Act IX of 1937 that such salary was attachable only as a debt and therefore must have fallen due at the time of attachment.⁴ Explanation I now makes it clear that the attachable portion of such salary is attachable only after it has become payable.

For definition of "public officer," see Section 2, clause 17 ante. An advocate engaged by the Government on daily fees for the conduct of civil litigation on its behalf is a "public officer" within the meaning of the clause.⁵

16a. Salary of private servant. — See Notes 15 and 16, above.

17. Salary of army officers. — Section 4 of the Code provides that the provisions of the Code shall not affect any special or local law for the time being in force. Section 60 will not therefore apply where there is a special or local law to the contrary. Two of such enactments are —

1. The Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911), Section 120, and

2. The Army Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. Ch. 58) as amended by the Army (Annual) Act of 1895 (58 Vict. Ch. 7), Sections 136, 144 and 145.

The Indian Army Act, 1911, applies only to Indian officers and other persons specified in Section 2 of that Act, and it is provided in Section 120 of the Act that the pay or allowances of any person subject to the Act cannot be attached.¹

The Army Act, 1881, applies to British Officers in His Majesty's Regular Forces including the Indian Army, and to other persons specified therein. An 'Officer' means, under that Act, a Commissioned Officer.² Thus, a first class Warrant Officer³ or other Non-Commissioned Officer⁴ is only a 'soldier' for the purposes of that Act. Section 136 of the Act provides that the pay of an officer of His Majesty's Regular Forces serving in India should be paid without any deduction 'other than deductions authorised . . . by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council.' Section 60 of the Code being such a law passed by the Governor-General in Council, it was held by the High Courts of Madras⁵ and Calcutta⁶ and by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh^{6a} that the pay of such officer could be attached as being that of a 'public officer' within the definition of Section 2 (17) of the Code. It was also held that sub-section 2 (b) of Section 60, as it originally was, could not be taken to negative the application of Section 60 to cases coming under Section 136 of the Army Act, 1881, inasmuch as the latter Section is not in conflict with Section 60.⁷

The High Courts of Allahabad⁸ and Bombay,⁹ on the other hand, held, that clause (2) (b) clearly negatived the applicability of Section 60 to such cases and that, therefore, the pay of such officers could not be attached.

By Act X of 1914, clause (2) (b) of Section 60 was repealed with the result that Section 60 clearly becomes applicable to cases under Section 136, and the salary of a British Officer in an Indian Regiment can be attached in execution as provided by this clause.¹⁰

But Section 60 cannot prevail over other special provisions in the Army Act such as Sections 144 and 145 relating to 'soldiers' and providing that their pay shall not be attached in execution.¹¹ The reason is that there is no saving in those Sections, such as is found in Section 136, as to any law passed by the Governor-General in Council. By virtue of Section 4 of the Code, therefore, Section 60 cannot prevail over those special provisions.¹²

18. Pay of persons to whom the Indian Army Act, 1911, etc., apply — Clause (j). — Clause (j) originally ran as follows: "the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Indian Articles of War apply." This clause was amended into its present form by the Amending Act XXXV of 1934, S. 2 and Schedule and the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. (See foot-notes to Section.) The Indian Articles of War which applied to soldiers and followers of the Native Army¹ have been repealed by the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911), and the reference to the Indian Articles of War in this clause as it originally existed must be read as referring to the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911).² As has been seen in Note 17 above, the pay of persons subject to that Act is not, in view of Section 120 of that Act, attachable in execution.

21. Mere expectancy or other contingent or possible right—Clause (m).

—This clause declares that—

(1) an expectancy of succession by survivorship, or (2) other merely contingent or possible right or interest, cannot be attached in execution.^{1a}

The right of a Hindu reversioner to succeed to the properties inherited by a Hindu widow or other Hindu woman is a mere hope or expectancy of succession and cannot be attached.¹ Similarly, the right of a son to succeed to his father's specific share of property by survivorship,² or the chance of a Mohammedan heir-apparent to succeed to the property of the owner,³ cannot be the subject of a sale or attachment. The interest in the pre-empted property of a successful pre-emptor who has not paid the pre-emptive price fixed by his decree is only a contingent right and cannot be attached under this clause.⁴ Similarly, the right of a Muzung tenant in South Canara to compensation for improvements is a contingent and inchoate right which becomes perfected only at the time of eviction.⁵

A vested remainder is not a mere expectancy though liable to be displaced later on.⁶ Thus, where A gives certain property to B for life for her maintenance, the reversion after the life estate is a vested estate in A which can be attached and sold in execution of a decree against A.⁷

In the undermentioned cases⁸ it was held by the Madras High Court that where a Hindu widow alienates her husband's property without legal necessity, the alienee gets an interest in the property which will last during the lifetime of the widow but that as the widow fully represents the husband's estate, the reversionary interest continues to be vested in the widow and can be attached in the execution of a decree for a debt due by the husband.

A vested interest does not cease to be so merely because the person in whom it is vested will be entitled to receive the property at a future date⁹ or because the property is the subject of an existing suit.¹⁰

A resulting trust is not a mere expectancy or contingency.¹¹ Where in execution of a mortgage decree the sale proceeds are deposited in Court pending confirmation of sale, to which the judgment-debtor does not object, the right to the surplus amount of the sale proceeds which is payable to the judgment-debtor after the confirmation of the sale is not a contingent interest as contemplated by this clause.¹²

22. Right to future maintenance — Clause (n). — Under this clause, a judgment-debtor's right to future maintenance cannot be attached in execution of a decree.¹ The reason is that such a right is a personal right and it is in accordance with public policy that this right which is generally created for the maintenance or personal enjoyment of the grantee, e.g., a Hindu female, ought to be inalienable.² Where, therefore, the right of maintenance is not a mere personal right or where it amounts to an interest in property, the exemption will not apply. Thus, a hereditary right of maintenance is not a mere personal right but an alienable one, and can be attached in execution.³ Again where, in lieu of maintenance, there is a transfer of an interest in property, such interest is not exempt from attachment⁴ unless such interest is restricted in its enjoyment to the grantee personally in which case it will not be a saleable property attachable under this Section.¹² In the case cited below,¹³ it was held by the Madras High Court that this clause only applies to cases where the right to maintenance is based on the personal law or the personal relationship of the parties and not where such right is purely the result of a contractual arrangement between the parties. Hence, it was held that where a person grants a usufructuary mortgage of all his properties to another and under one of the terms of the mortgage is entitled to receive a certain periodical payment for his maintenance, his right to such payment is not exempt from attachment under this clause.

The more fact that the person entitled to maintenance is placed in a position to enforce his right by recourse to a particular fund or interest in land in the event of default of payment by the grantor, or that the maintenance is payable out of a particular estate, will not constitute the right an interest in the property, so as to take it out of the application of this clause.¹⁴ An annuity charged upon an estate is property which can be attached under this Section.¹⁵

This clause prevents the attachment of a judgment-debtor's right to future maintenance. It does not prevent the attachment of arrears of maintenance which have fallen due.¹⁶ It was, however, held by the Calcutta High Court in the case cited below¹⁷ that arrears of maintenance under an order of a Criminal Court under Section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not attachable, the reason given being that the right to such arrears was a purely personal one and not assignable by the judgment-debtor.

It was held in the undermentioned case¹⁸ that the right of the judgment-debtor to reside in a particular house was exempt from attachment under this clause, but where the house was not in the actual occupation of the judgment-debtor but only had been let out by him, a receiver could be appointed to realise the rents and apply them in discharge of the decree.

There is no provision in the Section exempting from attachment land belonging to the judgment-debtor and required for his maintenance and that of his family.¹⁹

22a. Moveable property exempt from sale for arrears of land revenue — Clause (p).—This clause exempts from attachment any moveable property which is exempt from sale for arrears of land revenue. The clause has no application to immovable property.¹

22b. Explanation II — Salary, meaning of.—Explanation II has been newly added by Section 2 of the Amending Act IX of 1937, and has no retrospective effect by virtue of Section 3 of the said Amending Act.

In a case to which the provisions of the Amending Act did not apply, it was held that the daily remuneration of a counsel charged by the Government to conduct civil litigation on its behalf, was "salary" of a public servant.² This will no longer be so in view of the Explanation "under which salary means the total monthly emoluments derived by a person from his employment. Profits accruing to a shareholder from his estate are not "salary."³

The word "salary" in clause (b) does not exclusively mean "salary of a labourer or domestic servant" but includes salary of a person who is neither a labourer nor a domestic servant in the strict sense.³

23. Objections to attachment.—A decree-holder is not precluded from taking any of his judgment-debtor's properties in execution of his decree merely because he has a lien on particular properties¹ or because the judgment-debtor denies that he has any interest in the properties.² But if he effects a wrong attachment, he will be liable in damages resulting therefrom though he may have acted in good faith.³

It is for the person claiming exemption from attachment to prove the circumstances entitling him to do so.⁴ And he must raise his objections at the proper time, otherwise he will be precluded from raising them later on. Thus, where a property has been attached and sold in execution, a person who was a party to the order for sale or was aware of it, cannot object to the attachment after the sale.⁵ But if he was not such a party or was not aware of the proceedings, he can object to the attachment even after

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the changes introduced in the Section:—
1. The words "has been attached" in Section 284 of the Code of 1882 have been replaced by the words "is under attachment" in the present Section. (vide Note 4).
2. Sub-section (2) is new (see Note 9).

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section. — This Section deals with the procedure to be adopted where the same property is under attachment in execution of decrees of more Courts than one.^{1a} The object of the Section is to prevent confusion in the execution of decrees¹ and to avoid conflicting claims which might arise out of the attachment and sale of the same property by different Courts.² This Section deals merely with procedure and does not affect the substantive rights of the decree-holders inter se,³ nor does it affect the jurisdiction of Courts.⁴ There was a conflict of views under the old Code on this point for which see Note 9 below.

The words "property not in the custody of any Court" include immovable property.⁵

3. "Of more Courts than one."—It has been held that the Courts contemplated in the Section are Courts which are capable of being compared as Courts of different grades or of the same grade. They must therefore be all Civil Courts or all Revenue Courts. A Civil Court cannot be compared with the Revenue Court and the Section will not apply to attachments made by a Civil and also by a Revenue Court.¹ It has been held by the Madras High Court that the expression "of more Courts than one" qualifies the word "attachment" and not the word "decrees" so that the Section applies also to a case where the property has been attached by different Courts though the decrees have been passed by the same Court.^{1a} This Section applies to Small Cause Courts also.²

4. "Is under attachment," meaning of.—It was held under the old Code that the attachments of two or more Courts must be subsisting or existing at the same time.¹ This has been made clear by the substitution of the words "is under attachment" for the words "has been attached" occurring in the old Section.

It has been held that where immovable property which is under attachment is sold for arrears of land revenue, the attachment does not cease but fastens itself to the balance of the sale proceeds that remains after paying the revenue.²

The Section requires an attachment in execution. But where a property has been attached before judgment, such attachment will become one in execution on an application for execution being made by the decree-holder.^{2a}

It has been held by the Nagpur High Court that the words "where property is under attachment" do not mean that the only 'claim' which can be determined under the Section is one relating to the attachment or put forward by a person who has attached the property.³ In that case, it was held that the Court of the highest grade under this Section has the power to allow without recourse to the provisions of Section 73, rateable distribution of the judgment-debtor's assets and that in exercise of this power, such Court could grant a rateable share of assets even to a decree-holder who has not attached the property from which the assets have been derived. (See Note 8 to Section 73.)

5. "Shall receive and realise," meaning of.—These words will include the sale of the attached property.¹

6. "Claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof," meaning of.—The above words mean claims and objections which can be summarily decided in execution proceedings.¹ As to whether a claim for rateable distribution comes within the meaning of the above expression, see Section 73 Note 8.

7. Rateable distribution.—See Notes 6 and 10 and also Section 73.

Where, after the sale by the inferior Court in contravention of the Section, the property is sought to be sold by the superior Court, then, according to the Madras High Court, the purchaser as a representative of the judgment-debtor may apply to the superior Court under Section 47 to stop the sale.⁵ According to the Calcutta High Court, the purchaser is not a representative of the judgment-debtor and cannot apply under Section 47.⁶

It has been held in the undermentioned case⁷ that even if a sale is liable to be set aside for irregularities under Section 63, it cannot be impeached in collateral proceedings, or by persons who are not parties to the proceedings.

Suppose in a sale held by a Court of an inferior grade, the Court has allowed the decree-holder to purchase the property and to set off the decree amount against the purchase-money. In such a case, is the effect of sub-section 2 not only to validate the sale but also to exempt the amount so allowed to be set off, from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court⁸ and in an earlier decision by the Bombay High Court⁹ that the order allowing set-off of the decretal amount must also be considered to be validated by the sub-section so as to exempt the amount so allowed to be set off from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution and that the Court of the superior grade can only call for the balance, if any, out of the sale proceeds remaining after such set-off is allowed, for the purpose of rateable distribution among the other decree-holders. But, the Bombay High Court in a later decision^{8b} and the Madras High Court^{8c} have taken a different view and held that in such cases, the effect of the sub-section is only to validate the sale held by the Court of the inferior grade and not to exempt the amount allowed to be set off from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution.

Where an inferior Court sells the property and pays out the sale proceeds to the decree-holder in ignorance of an attachment in a pending execution proceeding of a superior Court, the superior Court has no jurisdiction to order restitution and rectify the error.⁹

10. Procedure when inferior Court sells property.—Where the inferior Court has sold the property, the superior Court should not re-sell it but should adopt the sale held by the inferior Court and after getting the sale proceeds transferred to itself, should distribute them rateably among the decree-holders.⁷ As to the procedure to be adopted in getting such sale proceeds transferred to the superior Court, there is a difference of opinion. The Bombay² and Madras³ High Courts have held that the

1. Legislative changes.—The following are the changes introduced by this Section:—

1. The words "by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in the manner aforesaid" occurring in the old Section (276) have been omitted. See Note 3.
2. For the words "any private alienation of property attached whether by sale, gift, mortgage or otherwise" in the old Section, the following words, viz., "any private transfer or delivery of the property attached, or of any interest therein" have been substituted. See Note 10.
3. The words "during the continuance of the attachment" occurring in the old Section have been substituted by the words "contrary to such attachment." See Note 11.
4. The Explanation to the present Section is new. See Note 13.

2. Scope and object of the Section.—This Section enacts that a private alienation of property after attachment is void as against claims enforceable under the attachment.¹ The object of the Section is to prevent fraud on decree-holders and to secure intact the rights of attaching creditors and of those creditors who have obtained decrees and are entitled to satisfaction out of the assets of the judgment-debtor.² It is immaterial for the application of the Section whether the decree had or had not been passed before the time when the transfer was effected³ or whether the transferee acted in good faith or not.⁴

The effect of the Section is, however, not to invalidate such private alienations for all purposes but only as against claims enforceable under the attachment.⁵ The benefit of the Section can also be waived by the decree-holder so as to bind himself and his assignees with notice.⁶

As the Section operates as a distinct interference with the rights of alienation of property, its provisions should be strictly construed,⁷ and cannot be extended to cases not contemplated by the Section.⁸ Thus, a transfer by a successful claimant after the date of the claim order but before institution of a suit under O. 21 R. 63 is not prevented by the Section which only prohibits a transfer by the judgment-debtor.⁹

The provisions of the Section relate to execution and a suit by the attaching creditor to avoid an alienation made during attachment is not maintainable.¹⁰ The Section must be read with O. 21 R. 83 which provides for the private transfers of attached property with the Court's permission in certain circumstances. (See O. 21 R. 83, Note 6.)

ment has been made" show that the Section has no application to transfers made before the attachment is levied.¹ Such a transfer, if real, would be valid even though it may have been in the contemplation of the parties that future attempts to attach the property should be defeated.^{1a}

Before property could be subjected to the restriction imposed by the Section, there must be a perfected attachment.² The modes of attachment of various kinds of property are prescribed in Order 21 and an attachment takes effect not from the date of the Court's order but only from the date of its actual promulgation in the manner prescribed. In Muthia Chetti v. Palaniappa Chetti,³ their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

It follows that where a transfer is made after an order of attachment but before it was actually effected,⁴ or where the mode prescribed is not complied with,⁵ or where crops which have been attached, will be liable in damages to the person at whose instance the crops were attached.²

An attachment does not prevent an alienation by operation of law.³ See Note 10 below.

A judicial sale of property in pursuance of an attachment carries with it any enlargement thereof that accrues after the attachment and before the sale.⁴ But an attachment cannot be enforced against property received in lieu of the property originally attached, in a subsequent partition.⁵

As to the distinction between attachment under the Code and a vesting order in insolvency, see the undermentioned case.⁶

See also O. 21 R. 54 Note 11 and O. 21 R. 63 Note 24.

6. Effect of removal of attachment.—A transfer by the judgment-debtor after an attachment has been removed or withdrawn is valid and a subsequent attachment cannot be made so as to relate back to the date of the first attachment and operate against a transfer in the interval, even though the removal or withdrawal of the first attachment was under a misapprehension.⁷ Similarly, a private transfer pending an attachment which has subsequently ceased will be valid.⁸ Even an implied withdrawal as, for example, where an order of withdrawal is not formally passed but the attachment is understood by the degree-holder to have been withdrawn, bars any objection against the validity of an alienation of the attached property.⁹

As to the revival of attachment, see Note 9 below.

7. Abandonment or discontinuance of attachment. — See also O. 21 R. 57.

An attachment may cease for various reasons. Thus it may cease —

1. by an express order withdrawing or putting an end to the attachment,¹ there cannot, however, be a partial withdrawal by consent,² attached property in execution of the decree,³

3. by the decree being set aside,⁵

4. in cases of attachment before judgment, by the suit being dismissed,⁶ or

5. by abandonment of the attachment by the decree-holder.⁷

Whether an attachment has been abandoned is a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. Thus, where the decree-holder took no steps to enforce his rights for a very long time after the attachment was made, and the application for execution was consequently 'struck off,' it was held by the Privy Council in Chamiappa Tharagan v. Rama Aiyar,⁸ where the application for execution was 'struck off' after some time after the attachment was made and the decree-holder did nothing further for nearly twelve years, except keeping alive the decree by periodical applications for execution, Wallis, C. J., held, applying the Privy Council case above referred to, that the attachment must be taken to have been abandoned. Seshagiri Aiyar, J., dissented from this view and held, distinguishing the Privy Council case, that the periodical applications by the decree-holder negatived the idea of abandonment. Mere lapse of time after the attachment will not, however, be sufficient to prove abandonment,¹⁰ especially if the delay was caused by the decree-holder's willingness to grant his debtor indulgence and opportunity to repay the debt.¹¹

The mere fact that the decree-holder applies for fresh attachment does not necessarily imply an abandonment of the attachment already made,¹² though it may, under particular circumstances, give rise to a presumption as to abandonment.¹³ See also O. 21 R. 54 Note 11 and O. 38 R. 11 Note 3.

An attachment does not abate on the death of the judgment-debtor.¹⁴

8. Effect of striking off or dismissal of execution proceedings.—An order 'striking off' execution proceedings does not necessarily operate as a dismissal or a final disposal of the execution petition.¹ It is competent to the Court to strike off execution proceedings and to continue the attachment.²

The striking of an execution proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done and there is no general rule as to its effect on an attachment made already.³ It must depend upon the circumstances of each case.^{3a} But certain broad principles have been recognised. If the striking off takes place under circumstances which terminate the case,⁴ or which render a fresh attachment necessary,⁵ the attachment ceases. Where such circumstances do not exist, the proceedings in execution are merely suspended and the attachment continues.⁶

It was held under the old Code that the dismissal of an execution application did not necessarily put an end to the attachment made already but that it is dependent on the circumstances of each case.⁷ Under the present Code, O. 21 R. 57, an attachment shall cease where the application for execution is dismissed for default of the decree-holder.⁸ Where it is dismissed in any other way, it is not the necessary consequence that the attachment ceases.⁹

9. Revival of attachment.—It has already been seen in Note 6 above that if an attachment comes to an end, interests created thereafter are not affected by a second attachment. But an attachment cannot be said to have come to an end, so long as the order releasing the attachment is liable to be set aside by way of appeal or otherwise.¹ It can only be said to be temporarily discontinued or suspended.² Thus, where an
